Mr. Trippier: The Department received a letter from the environment services officer of South Tyneside metropolitan borough council on 23 November 1988 expressing the concern of the council's environmental health and control committee about Monkton cokeworks. This received a full and detailed reply on 10 February 1989. If the hon. Member wishes to refer me to further correspondence on this matter I shall be happy to look into it.

Mr. Dixon: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment why flue gas desulphurisation equipment is not required for battery No. 4, Monkton cokeworks, Hebburn.

Mr. Trippier: The fitting of flue-gas desulphurisation equipment has never been part of Her Majesty's inspectorate of pollution's requirements for pollution control of emissions from coke works, nor does the EEC place any requirement on the United Kingdom to control such emissions. The costs involved are considered to be disproportionate to the environmental improvements which would result from the removal of the relatively small quantities of sulphur dioxide. The height of the chimney at the works is sufficient to prevent adverse local effects from any emissions.

Mr. Dixon: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) what discussions Her Majesty's inspectorate of pollution had with National Smokeless Fuels about the delay in installing cokeside arrestment equipment at battery No. 4, Monkton cokeworks, Hebburn;

(2) what factors Her Majesty's inspectorate of pollution took into account when deciding not to take legal action against National Smokeless Fuels for non-installation of cokeside arrestment equipment at battery No. 4, Monkton cokeworks, Hebburn.

Mr. Trippier: Her Majesty's inspectorate of pollution engaged in a series of meetings with National Smokeless Fuels to discuss the arrestment of dust associated with discharging coke from the ovens at Monkton cokeworks.

These meetings involved management at all levels within the company culminating in a meeting between the chief inspector and the chairman of British Coal. The installation of cokeside arrestment equipment was agreed in principle following the miners' strike although the actual installation was delayed as a result of proving trials of a prototype system at the coke works at Cwm. The equipment was eventually installed and commissioned in 1989.

Football Pools

Mr. Steinberg: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what discussions he proposes to hold on how the extra income from the football pools will be allocated on a divisional basis.

Mr. Moynihan: My officials have had discussions with the Football Trust 1990 and the Pool Promoters Association about the arrangements for the distribution of the extra money that will be available to football as a result of the proposed reduction in pool betting duty announced in the Budget statement. It is the intention that the Football Trust 1990 should distribute the money fairly, having regard to the differing needs and resources available to the clubs in the Football League and Scottish League and to the three national stadia, Wembley, Hampden park and Windsor park. The Football Trust has proved a most effective means of channelling funds to where they are most needed in football.

Waste Management

Mr. Ieuan Wyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if his Department has received any invitation to contribute to, or participate in, the European summer school on environmental decision making on waste management, at Vrije university in Brussels, on 26 to 29 June.

Mr. Trippier: No such invitation has been received by my Department.

Neighbourhood Notification Schemes

Mr. David Martin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment whether he has any plans further to encourage or make compulsory the use by local planning authorities of advance neighbourhood notification schemes; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Moynihan: No. The Department's advice to local planning authorities on publicity for planning applications is set out in appendix B to circular 22/88, and I have no evidence that those arrangements are not generally working satisfactorily.

Right to Buy, Barnsley

Mr. Patchett: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what are the outstanding debt repayments of Barnsley metropolitan borough council in respect of council houses sold under the right-to-buy legislation; and if he will consider freeing the local authority from such debts on its former assets.

Mr. Chope: Authorities generally manage their housing debt on a collective basis, so it is not possible to attribute a specific amount of debt to former council houses sold under the right-to-buy legislation. However, any outstanding debt in Barnsley's housing revenue account will be taken into account in the calculation of the authority's entitlement to housing revenue account subsidy.

County Halls (Sales)

Sir Trevor Skeet: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what he estimates the savings on capital account would be if county halls were sold off following the merger of their functions with the district councils.

Mr. Chope: The Government have no plans for such a merger and my right hon. Friend has made no such estimates.

Football Stadiums

Mr. Pendry: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when planning policy guidelines to local authorities in respect of applications by football clubs for relocation of their stadiums will be issued.

Mr. Moynihan: My right hon. Friend is considering planning policy guidance on the considerations relevant to new and redeveloped stadiums for Football League clubs and on other issues. He hopes to issue a draft document for consideration soon.

Uniform Business Rate (Fishermen)

Mr. Morley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment whether he intends to treat premises used by commercial fishermen in the same way as those of farmers in terms of the levying of uniform business rate.

Mr. Chope: Under the Local Government Act 1988 (which in this respect broadly restated the equivalent provisions of the General Rate Act 1967), agricultural and market gardening land and buildings which are used for the production of food for consumption are exempt from non-domestic rates. However, premises used for ancillary activities including the processing of food, wholesaling and retailing are not exempt. Similarly, fish farms and certain fishing rights are exempt from non-domestic rates. But premises occupied by commercial fishermen, which are commonly used for the processing of the catch or for purposes connected with servicing the fleet, are not exempt.

Gas Emissions

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will give constant emission factors for nitrogen oxides for each of the emission sources listed in table 2.6 of the latest "Digest of Environmental Protection and Water Statistics".

Mr. Trippier [holding answer 1 May 1990]: Summary of emission factors used to estimate emissions of nitrogen oxides in 1988.

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will give figures for sulphur dioxide concentrations recorded by each of his Department's 287 sites and each of Warren Spring Laboratory's seven sites in the latest available year.

Mr. Trippier [holding answer 1 May 1990]: Data on the annual average concentration of sulphur dioxide measured at the 287 sites of the EC Directive network for April 1988-March 1989 have been published by Warren Spring Laboratory in Report No. LR 763 entitled "UK Smoke and Sulphur dioxide monitoring networks: summary tables for April 1988-March 1989". A copy has been placed in the Library.

The seven other sites referred to are part of Warren Spring Laboratory's automatic monitoring network. The location of the sites is shown in figure 2.1 of the Digest of Environmental Protection and Water Statistics, No. 12, 1989. Results for a full year are not yet available.

Danish Technology Institutes

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make it his policy to invite to a meeting with him (a) the cleaner technology centre at Taastrup in Denmark, to discuss environmentally friendly technology and (b) the Jutland technological institute, Denmark, to discuss product substitution and design for environmental improvement.

Mr. Trippier [holding answer 3 May 1990]: My right hon. Friend has no plans to meet these organisations. The Department of the Environment is, however, keen to participate in the international exchange of information on the subject of low-waste or clean technology as part of its efforts to promote greater awareness of cleaner methods of production in the United Kingdom industry. The Department is hosting a UNEP seminar in September 1990 on "Cleaner Production" and I am pleased that senior officials from the Danish National Agency of Environmental Protection have accepted invitations to attend.

Treasury (Fire Certificate)

Dr. Marek: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment whether there is a valid fire certificate for the Treasury building in Parliament street.

Mr. Chope [holding answer 3 May 1990]: The work required to obtain one has been identified and tenders are being invited for it to be carried out.

Mr. Gordon Blower (Correspondence)

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when he hopes to reply to the letter written on 29 December by Mr. Gordon Blower of Kingsland, Brownston Street, Modbury, Ivybridge about the property blight resulting from uncertainty regarding the future of the Darenth Park hospital site, Dartford; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Moynihan [holding answer 4 May 1990]: A reply to Mr. Blower's letter of 29 December 1989 was sent by the Department on 2 May 1990. My right hon. Friend is currently awaiting information from the South East Thames regional health authority about their future intentions for the Darenth Park hospital site, but I hope that a decision can be taken soon on the authority's proposals for residential development at the site.

Government Housing

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many Government houses are vacant in (a) Cardiff and (b) South Glamorgan; and what proportion this is of the total Government housing stock in (a) the city and (b) the county.

Mr. Chope: There are no vacant houses in Cardiff or South Glamorgan for which my right hon. Friend has responsibility. The hon. Member should inquire direct of other Government Departments in respect of any houses for which they have responsibility.

69 Cowcross Street, EC1

Mr. Chris Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what instructions or guidance he has given to the London residuary body in relation to the proposed disposal on the open market of 69 Cowcross street, London EC1.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: None, apart from general guidance on property vested in residuary bodies, issued in August 1986.

Glass Recycling

Mr. Crowther: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what assistance the Government have given towards the industry target for glass recycling; and what figures he has for the number of bottle banks in operation in (a) 1986, (b) at the present time and (c) estimated for 1995.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: The industry's target of 5,000 bottle banks by July 1991 was agreed at a conference organised by the Department of Trade and Industry on 2 July 1986. Following that conference, and with the support of the glass manufacturing industry, my Department and the local authority recycling advisory committee (LARAC) set up a series of regional seminars, held between November 1986 and April 1987, with the aim of increasing the number of bottle banks in local authority areas, and LARAC subsequently produced a booklet entitled "Expanding Glass Recycling". Figures from the British Glass Manufacturers Confederation show that there were 2,842 public bottle bank sites in 1986 and 4,330 at the most recent count. The industry target of 5,000 banks by 1991 should comfortably be reached.

DEFENCE

Mr. Colin Wallace

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his answer to the hon. Member for Dumbarton (Mr. McFall) of 23 April, Official Report, column 75, when, and in what form, he expects to make the conclusions of Mr. David Heyhoe's report on Mr. Colin Wallace available to the House.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: My right hon. Friend hopes to make copies of the report's conclusions available shortly to the Select Committee on Defence and in the Library of the House.

Sports

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what percentage of each rank is currently registered to play each of the sports listed by the combined services sport board.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: All service men and women are eligible to take part in sports recognised by the combined services sport board. Information is not held in the form requested.

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many service personnel are currently registered to play each of the sports recognised by the combined services sport board.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: All service men and women are eligible to take part in sports recognised by the combined services sport board. Specific registration is not required by the combined services sport board.

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is the total grant aid paid to each of the sports recognised by the combined services sport board for each year since 1987.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The combined services sport board does not receive any public money and does not give grants in aid. The services themselves receive funds in the form of grants for sports equipment and for recreational travel. Information is not readily available on how this is apportioned between sports.

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence which sports are listed by the combined services sport board for the purpose of receiving grant aid.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: There is no combined services sport board list of recognised games and sports for the purpose of receiving grant aid.

Recruitment

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the number of recruits to the armed forces from each of the three ridings of Yorkshire, Lancashire, Cumbria and Cheshire for each year since 1987.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: It is not possible to provide the information in the precise form requested.

For the Royal Navy and the Royal Air Force it is not possible to give figures for the number of recruits who originated from a particular area without checking each recruit's personal file. However, the following figures show the number of non-commissioned recruits enlisted at individual careers information offices in the counties that now make up the three ridings of Yorkshire, Lancashire, Cumbria and Cheshire, following the Local Government Act, 1972. It is possible though that some recruits did not live in the area from where they were recruited.

Low Flying

Mr. Salmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) if he will give details of the type of aircraft involved in a low-flying air defence exercise which flew over Mintlaw academy in the Banff and Buchan parliamentary constituency at 9.42 am, 9.52 am and 9.54 am on Thursday 26 April;

(2) if he will give details of the starting point and destination of the exercise in which the aircraft which flew over Mintlaw academy, in the Banff and Buchan constituency, on Thursday 26 April were involved and the aircraft involved.

Mr. Neubert: It is likely that the aircraft concerned were F-16 aircraft of the Royal Danish Air Force participating in exercise Elder Forest 90 which were tasked to carry out simulated attacks against the RAF radar station at Buchan and continue to Tain range in Ross-shire.

Equipment Co-operation

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what decisions were reached at the recent meeting between the United Kingdom and France on defence equipment co-operation.

Mr. Alan Clark: My right hon. Friend reviewed a wide range of defence equipment co-operation issues with Mr. Chevenement on 4 May. A copy of the statement issued after the meeting has been placed in the House Library.

Naval Frigates

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the decision by France and the United Kingdom to study the possibility of working together on naval frigate programmes.

Mr. Neubert: The primary role of the Royal Navy's planned replacement for the Type 42 Anti-Air Warfare (AAW) destroyers at the turn of the century will be to deploy a naval support defence missile system (SDMS). We have already announced our intention of joining, subject to the satisfactory conclusion of negotiations, the Franco/Italian family of anti-air missile systems (FAMS) programme to meet the SDMS requirement and these negotiations are underway. We are also holding a series of meetings at official level with our French colleagues to identify the elements of our two ship programmes where further collaboration appears to offer mutual advantage. It is too early to say what the outcome will be.

Nuclear Warheads

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is the cost of replacing Tritium in nuclear warheads.

Mr. Alan Clark: For security reasons, and in accordance with the practice of successive Governments, details and costs of procurement of special nuclear materials cannot be disclosed.

RAF Leuchars

Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence[1] if he is continuing to review search and rescue operations at RAF Leuchars;

(2) if he has any proposals for the resumption of 24-hour flying for search and rescue operations at RAF Leuchars.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: I have nothing to add to the answer I gave the hon. Member on 21 February 1990 at column 820.

Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many aircraft are deployed and how many RAF personnel, and of what ranks, are engaged in search and rescue operations at RAF Leuchars.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given by my hon. Friend the Member for Kettering (Mr. Freeman) on 14 July 1988 at col. 321. There are currently two Wessex aircraft at RAF Leuchars available for search and rescue duties.

Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list by month the number of search and rescue missions flown from RAF Leuchars since 24-hour flying was discontinued and the number flown in the equivalent months in each of the last five years for which information is available.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The search and rescue service at RAF Leuchars was reduced to daylight hours only from 1 October 1989. The figures therefore cover search and rescue missions flown from RAF Leuchars from 1 October to 30 April in each of the years from 1984-85 to 1989-90 inclusive.

Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when he expects to publish the results of his review of search and rescue operations at RAF Leuchars.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: There has been no such review.

Cyprus

Mr. Cartwright: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether he intends to carry out any review of the terms and conditions applied to dependent locally entered civilians in Cyprus.

Mr. Neubert: The pay and conditions of service of dependant locally entered civilians (LECs) in Cyprus, are the subject of regular reviews. Revised pay and conditions awards were implemented for this group of staff in early 1989, following the settlement of awards for MOD's Cypriot work force and teachers employed by the Government of the Republic of Cyprus. These reviews have as the basis local "good employer practice" and pay trends in the Cypriot economy.

I can confirm that these arrangements will continue to apply in the future; however, I cannot be specific as to the particular timing of pay and conditions reviews or the resulting awards.

Germany

Mr. Cartwright: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether the special review of the terms and conditions applied to dependent locally entered civilians in Germany has been completed; and whether there are any implications for locally entered teachers.

Mr. Neubert: The special review of the terms and conditions of dependent locally entered civilians has been completed. As a result, a number of changes are to be implemented and those affecting the majority of dependant employees will be announced in May.

Locally entered teachers (LETs) will receive a pay increase with effect from 11 May 1990, as will all dependant employees. The review highlighted areas in which improvements to LET conditions could be made and work is in hand to define new procedures and introduce them at the earliest opportunity. They will be aimed at providing greater security of employment and improving the status of LETs.

Royal Artillery Museum

Mr. Cartwright: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what are his Department's current plans for the provision of a permanent site for the Royal Artillery museum.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The Royal Artillery museum is already accommodated in Ministry of Defence property at Woolwich and the Department has no plans to change these arrangements.

Royal Artillery, Woolwich

Mr. Cartwright: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what consideration he has given to the future of the Royal Artillery garrison at Woolwich; and with what result.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: One disposal which has been in hand for some time is that of Connaught barracks, Woolwich, which is due for completion of contract in July this year. No further major disposals are envisaged at present.

National Sports Centre, Cardiff

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what investigations were made into the standard of maintenance of the shooting range at the national sports centre, Cardiff, prior to the incident of a bullet passing through the backstop wall in July 1989.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The Army does not conduct safety inspections at civilian maintained ranges unless specifically requested to do so by the owners. Prior to the incident in July last year, no such request had been received as regards this particular range since its certification in July 1972.

Departmental Housing

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many Ministry of Defence houses are vacant in (a) Cardiff and (b) South Glamorgan; and what proportion this is of the total Ministry of Defence housing stock in (a) the city and (b) the county.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: As at 31 March 1990, the latest date for which complete figures are available, there were three vacant Ministry of Defence housing properties in Cardiff, amounting to 6·5 per cent. of the total stock; the figures for south Glamorgan as a whole (including Cardiff) are 171 and 19·5 per cent. respectively. The majority of these vacant properties are either undergoing or awaiting major modernisation work, while the remainder have all been allotted to service families who will be moving in shortly.

Training

Mr. Nicholas Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many (a) regular, (b) territorial and (c) cadet forces were training in each United Kingdom land force district in 1987, 1988 and 1989.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The information requested is not readily available. My noble Friend the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for the Armed Forces will write to my hon. Friend.

Ranges (Manorbier and Penally)

Mr. Nicholas Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will give details of the annual usage of (i) Manorbier range, Pembrokeshire and (ii) Penally range, Pembrokeshire including the types of unit using each range, the numbers, frequency and the main uses for which the ranges are used.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: Manorbier range is used mainly by Royal Artillery units for practice firings of low-level air defence weapons including Javeline and Blowpipe. In 1989, regular and Territorial Army use totalled 11,067 and 11,294 man training days respectively.

Mr. Nicholas Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many (a) regular Army personnel and (b) civilian personnel are employed (i) full time and (ii) part time at Manorbier and Penally ranges in Pembrokeshire.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: Two regular Army and eight civilian personnel are employed full time at Manorbier ranges and eight civilian personnel are employed at Penally. No part-time staff are employed at either range.

Mr. Nicholas Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is the annual cost of (i) Manorbier range, Pembrokeshire and (ii) Penally range, Pembrokeshire; and if he will break down the annual costs into their main components.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: Manpower costs alone total £98,000 for Manorbier and £69,225 for Penally. Further detail is not readily available in the form requested.

Mr. Nicholas Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many beds are available at (i) Manorbier range, Pembrokeshire and (ii) Penally range, Pembrokeshire for visiting troops.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: There is accommodation for 600 visiting troops at Penally range; there are no beds available for visiting troops at Manorbier range.

Personal Statistics

Mr. Nicholas Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is the number of (i) regular Army personnel, (ii) territorial army personnel and (iii) civilian personnel in (a) each United Kingdom land forces district and (b) each United Kingdom land forces district headquarters.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: Approximate numbers are:

	Headquarters			Whole district
	Regular	TA	Civilian	Regular	TA	Civilian
Scotland	70	30	70	2,800	9,800	2,100

Landforce Districts

Mr. Nicholas Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is the annual cost of each United Kingdom landforce district headquarters; and if he will break down the costs into their main components.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The information is not available in the form requested and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Mr. Nicholas Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is the rank of the senior officer in each United Kingdom landforces district.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: Except for Scotland, Northern Ireland and South-East district which are each commanded by a lieutenant-general, Army districts in the United Kingdom are commanded by officers of major-general rank.

Army Recruits

Mr. Nicholas Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will give the percentage and number of entrants to the regular army recruited in each United Kingdom landforce district in 1987, 1988 and 1989.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: This information is not available in the precise format requested. The table gives details of entrants to the regular Army (excluding officers), by district, for the last four financial years.

Army Units, Wales

Mr. Nicholas Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many regular army units are permanently stationed in Wales.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: Though many units visit Wales to train and significant numbers of personnel are employed on numerous duties such as managing training establishments and ranges, there are no formed units permanently stationed there.

Planning Decisions

Mr. Nicholas Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence on what occasions since 1960 his Department has initiated an application under the planning laws and subsequently claimed Crown immunity to overide an adverse planning decision; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Alan Clark: None. My Department follows the planning procedures as laid down in the appropriate DOE,

Scottish Office and Welsh Office circulars. Where the local planning authority concerned raises objections to an application for development by my Department, it would be for my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Defence to decide whether or not to refer that proposal to the Secretary of State for the Environment, the Secretary of State for Scotland or the Secretary of State for Wales, as appropriate.

Army Costs

Mr. Nicholas Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will give details of the relative annual costs of (a) a regular Army private based in the United Kingdom and (b) a Territorial army private.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: Relative full annual costs of a regular Army private based in the United Kingdom and a Territorial Army private are as follows:

	£ per annum
(a) Regular Army private	17,870
(b) TA private	1,471

The cost of a regular private is based on a full year of 365 days whereas the annual cost of a TA private is based on an average number of 20 training days each year.

Radar Installations

Mr. Nicholas Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if there are any plans to site additional radar installations in west Wales in addition to the over the horizon radar installation proposed for the former St. David's airfield, Pembrokeshire.

Mr. Alan Clark: There are no current plans for additional radar sites in west Wales, beyond the planned two-year trial of an over the horizon radar at St. David's airfield.

Mr. Nicholas Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether he has any evidence as to whether the operation of over the horizon radar installation proposed for the site of the former St. David's airfield could cause cancer or AIDS to people living in the near vicinity.

Mr. Alan Clark: No.

Faslane

Mr. O'Neill: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what regulations, guidelines or criteria have been used to assess the safety of the proposed shiplift facility at Faslane; and in what circumstances he envisages the shiplift being used during the trials of the Trident submarines.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The shiplift at the Clyde submarine base, Faslane is being designed and built to stringent nuclear safety standards, comparable with those in the civil nuclear power industry. The facility will not be approved for use until its safety has been independently assessed. There is no planned usage of the shiplift during submarines' sea trials, but should a defect occur which requires a submarine to be docked, then the shiplift would be one possible option to meet this contingency.

Mr. O'Neill: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether he anticipates that the construction of the shiplift at Faslane will be completed (a) on schedule and (b) without cost increases.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The shiplift at the Clyde submarine base, Faslane is expected to be ready within the timescale required for Trident and other submarine programmes. It is not our policy to discuss estimated costs of individual projects but there has been some increase because of the need to meet stringent nuclear safety requirements.

Mr. O'Neill: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether any changes to the contract with Cementation Construction Ltd. for the construction of the shiplift at Faslane have been negotiated since the signing of the original contract.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The contractual arrangements with the main contractor for the shiplift are commercially confidential.

Tanks

Mr. O'Neill: To ask the Secretary of Defence what re-assessment has been made in the last 12 months of the number of tanks that will be required to replace the Chieftain tank.

Mr. Alan Clark: I have nothing to add to the answer which I gave the hon. Member on 30 March 1990 at col. 331.

European Fighter Aircraft

Mr. O'Neill: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make it his policy to make a statement to the House announcing his decision regarding orders for the European fighter aircraft.

Mr. Alan Clark: I refer the hon. Gentleman to the statement my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Defence made earlier today.

Ghurka (Community Charge)

Mr. O'Neill: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what information he has on the average community charge for Ghurka service personnel stationed in the United Kingdom.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The average community charge for Ghurka personnel stationed at the four major locations in the United Kingdom is about £364 per annum.

Chieftain Tank

Mr. O'Neill: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what communications have taken place between his Department and Vickers regarding the economic and industrial consequences of decisions regarding the replacement of the Chieftain tank.

Mr. Alan Clark: None.

Reserves

Mr. O'Neill: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether he will be increasing the role of reserves in (a) the Army, (b) the Royal Navy and (c) the Royal Air Force over the next 10 years.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The role of the reserves is continually reviewed in the light of prevailing conditions, including international developments.

Written Answers to Questions

NORTHERN IRELAND

Fair Employment

Rev. William McCrea: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how much public grant aid Sean Quinn Quarries Ltd., Derrylin has received for each of the years 1986, 1987, 1988 and 1989.

Mr. Needham: Grant aid received by Sean Quinn Ltd. for each of the financial years from April 1985 is as follows:

1986-87	905,480
1987-88	2,475,004
1988-89	1,065,746
1989-90	99,756

Enterprise Ulster

Mr. Kilfedder: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what assessment he has made of the adequacy of the accounting procedures of Enterprise Ulster in regard to the supply and use of materials, whether provided by the client or by Enterprise Ulster.

Mr. Needham: All accounting procedures of Enterprise Ulster, including those concerning the supply and use of materials, are subject to the approval of the Department of Economic Development and subsequently to internal and external audit.

I am satisfied that the accounting procedures are adequate and that they are properly audited.

Mr. Kilfedder: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many supervisors and area superintendents are employed by Enterprise Ulster; how they were trained in materials usage and stock control; where the training took place; and how long the courses of training lasted.

Mr. Needham: Enterprise Ulster currently employs nine area superintendents and 101 supervisory grade personnel.

Instruction on materials usage and stock control is given to all new supervisory staff as part of their normal induction programme. These subjects are also included on refresher courses which are attended periodically by supervisory staff and on courses of study undertaken by them.

EC Energy Development Programme

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what level of European Community funds was used to assist the creation of peat extraction businesses by the local enterprise development unit.

Mr. Needham [holding answer 3 May 1990]: The information is as follows:

	Amount
1987	Nil
1989	£1,375

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Removals Industry

Mr. French: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what representations he has received recently about the problems of the removals industry.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: I am not aware of any recent representations to this Department about the problems of the removals industry. However, Her Majesty's Customs and Excise have received representations about VAT on removal charges after the completion of the single market.

Departmental Savings

Mr. Devlin: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what value for money savings have been achieved by his Department in the last year; and how much of this was as a result of advice from the central unit on purchasing.

Mr. Forth: Figures for last year (FY 1989-90) are not yet available. The saving achieved in FY 1988-89, on a spend of £133·8 million, was £13·92 million, or 10·4 per cent. against the set target of 5 per cent.

In general, it is not possible to attribute particular value for money savings to advice from the central unit on purchasing. The role of the unit is to provide advice and guidance on best purchasing practice; it provides overall support and guidance and encourages value for money across all Departments.

Iraq Contract

Mr. Gordon Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what is his latest assessment of the possible military uses of the parts of equipment already sent to Iraq by Sheffield Forgemasters and Walter Somers.

Mr. Ridley [holding answer 26 April 1990]: In the light of the criminal charges laid against individuals, and in the light of the continuing investigations by Customs and Excise, it would be inappropriate to give any further information on these matters.

NATIONAL FINANCE

European Monetary Union

96. Mr. Nicholas Bennett: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on recent European Community discussions on Delors stages 2 and 3.

Mr. Lilley: The possible development of economic and monetary union beyond stage 1 of EMU and the arrangements for the forthcoming inter-governmental conference were last discussed at the informal meeting of the European Community's Economic and Finance Council on 31 March and the special meeting of the European Council on 28 April which were reported to the House on 3 April at column 523 and on 1 May at column 902.

Lone-parent Families (Income Support)

Mr. Hanley: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what assistance the Inland Revenue gives to the Department of Social Security to help trace absent parents who are not paying maintenance for lone-parent families in receipt of income support.

Mr. Lilley: Section 59 of the Social Security Act 1986 permits the Inland Revenue to provide information to the Department of Social Security and the Department of Health and Social Services for Northern Ireland, in connection with the operation of the benefit Acts, without breaching their confidentiality obligations. At present the information provided is confined to the details required to account for class 1 national insurance contributions, which the Inland Revenue collects on behalf of the DSS, and details of those known to be self-employed to assist DSS in collecting class 2 national insurance contributions.

I have now asked the Inland Revenue to extend the disclosures made under its authority to include the addresses of absent parents and, where appropriate, the names and addresses of their employers, in cases where the absent parent is liable under the Social Security Act 1986 to maintain lone-parent families receiving income support.

ESOP Trusts

Mr. Hanley: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if the Inland Revenue will establish a clearance procedure under which it will advise whether or not a particular trust is a qualifying ESOP trust.

Mr. Lilley: My right hon. Friend the Chancellor of the Exchequer proposed in his Budget statement a new relief from capital gains tax for those selling shares to qualifying employee share ownership trusts, as defined by schedule 5 to the Finance Act 1989. Since owners of shares may want to know if a trust is a qualifying trust before a sale of shares takes place, I have authorised the introduction of an arrangement under which the Inland Revenue will be willing to examine executed employee share ownership trust deeds and inform the trustees whether in their view the trust meets the qualifying conditions of schedule 5. The trustees will then be able to inform any potential vendors concerned as to the status of the trust itself.

Taxation

Mr. Nicholas Bennett: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what additional weekly, monthly and yearly income tax payments a married man on average earnings with two children would pay if tax rates were at the levels in place on 3 May 1979.

Mr. Lilley [holding answer 8 May 1990]: The information is as follows:

Increase in tax liability at average earnings[1] in 1990-91 if tax rates and thresholds applicable on 3 May 1979 were to be indexed for inflation and re-introduced

	£ per week	£ per month	£ per year
Married man	20·00	86·50	1,037·80

[1] Average earnings are for full time adult males in all occupations in 1990-91; £303·80 per week; in line with the assumptions in paragraph 3.02 of the 1989 Autumn Statement.

Mr. Nicholas Bennett: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what estimate he has as to the amount of extra tax a married man with two children earning (a) £25,000 a year and (b) £30,000 a year would pay if income tax rates were increased to 50p in the pound and national insurance to 9 per cent.

Mr. Lilley [holding answer 8 May 1990]: If the higher rate of income tax were raised from 40 per cent. to 50 per cent. and the upper earnings limit for class 1 national insurance contributions were abolished so that 9 per cent. was paid on all earnings above the lower earnings limit, the extra payments by a married man in 1990-91 would be:

Earnings £ per annum	Increase in tax and national insurance contribution liability £ per annum
30,000	1,519·50

The calculations assume the married man has no other forms of income and no reliefs or allowances other than the personal and married couple's allowances.

Staff Qualifications

Mr. John Garrett: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will publish, in the Official Report, the numbers and percentages of his staff in grades 1 to 7 who have (a) arts, (b) science and (c) technical degrees, (d) who are qualified accountants, (e) have post-graduate qualifications in management and (f) who were educated in (i) local authority and (ii) private schools.

Mr. Ryder [holding answer 2 May 1990]: The information which is available at non-disproportionate cost, (a), (b) and (d), is as follows:

Grade	Arts[1] degrees	Science[1,2] degrees	Qualified accountants
0-1A	4 (100)[3]	—	—
2	9 (82)	1 (9)	1 (9)
3	23 (82)	1 (4)	—
4	2 (50)	—	—
5	48 (64)	13 (17)	1 (1)
6	8 (21)	5 (13)	4 (10)
7	94 (35)	48 (18)	18 (7)

[1] First degree subjects leading to the award of BA(Arts) or BSc(Science).

[2] Includes some "technical" degrees eg engineering.

Cannabis

Mr. Ieuan Wyn Jones: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what volume of cannabis has been recovered each year since 1979 by the Customs authorities: what was the estimated value of the cannabis at current prices for each year; and what were the pattern of locations where these drugs were secured.

Mr. Ryder [holding answer 4 May 1990]: Following is the information:

January-December	Total seized in kg	Street value in £ million
1980	25,610	71·20
1981	24,188	67·55

January-December	Total seized in kg	Street value in £ million
1982	16,424	44·58
1983	19,335	54·18
1984	26,186	73·52
1985	20,905	58·99
1986	22,381	65·81
1987	16,292	47·44
1988	44,018	127·34
[1]1989	50,715	166·75

[1] Provisional.

Values are expressed in current prices based on geographical averages calculated by the national drugs intelligence unit.

Information on the pattern of locations involved is not readily available and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Arms Exports

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if Her Majesty's Customs and Excise will now reopen investigations into Aero Technologies in respect of illegal arms exports to middle eastern countries.

Mr. Ryder [holding answer 4 May 1990]: If any information comes into the possession of Customs and Excise which might warrant an investigation the Commissioners would give that appropriate consideration.

RPI

Mr. Ian Stewart: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what will be the increase in the retail price index due to the increase in local government expenditure not funded from the Exchequer or the business rate.

Mr. Ryder [holding answer 8 May 1990]: The average community charge set by local authorities in Great Britain is around £350, a rise of over 30 per cent. on domestic rates in 1989-90. This is expected to add just under 1½ per cent. to the level of the RPI from April and, correspondingly, about one percentage point to the annual rate of inflation.

Civil Service Recruitment

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on civil service vacancies and recruitment.

Mr. Ryder [holding answer 8 May 1990]: My right hon. Friend keeps all aspects of the staffing of the civil service under review. Statistical information about the civil service, including recruitment, can be found in successive editions of "Civil Service Statistics"; and information about that recruitment which is carried out by the Civil Service Commission can be found in its annual reports.

Pools Betting Duty

Mr. Pendry: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) on what dates payment of the funds made available to football through the reduction in the football pools betting duty from 42·5 per cent. to 40 per cent. will commence and cease;

(2) from what date the reduction in the football pools betting duty from 42·5 per cent. to 40 per cent. will apply.

Mr. Ryder [holding answer 8 May 1990]: Negotiations involving the Football Trust, the Pools Promoters Association and football authorities have reached an advanced stage. My right hon. Friend the Chancellor hopes to be able to make an announcement to the House shortly.

Lottery Tickets (Germany)

Mr. Teddy Taylor: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what advice he has given to the Amex, Visa and Diners credit card groups and to joint stock banks about their facilities being used for the transmission of funds in response to posted invitations from West German state and institutional lottery groups.

Mr. Ryder [holding answer 8 May 1990]: None.

PRIME MINISTER

Dalai Lama

Sir David Steel: To ask the Prime Minister what criteria were used in deciding whether she should meet the Dalai Lama.

The Prime Minister: The Dalai Lama is a distinguished spiritual leader, who is welcome to visit the United Kingdom at any time. But he is also regarded by many of his followers as the leader of a government in exile, which is not recognised by any Government, and with which successive British Governments have had no dealings. I believe that a meeting with him would therefore be open to misinterpretation.

TRANSPORT

Noise Pollution

Sir Dudley Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will establish different criteria in the measurement and analysis of noise created as the result of the opening of new motorways.

Mr. Atkins: I am satisfied that the existing criteria for measuring and analysing noise are satisfactory. However, I am aware from many representations that I have received that noise from new or widened motorways can be a problem, and my Department is seeking constantly to ensure that noise from road surfaces is kept to a minimum.

Rail Electrification

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what representations he has received about the use of EEC money for the electrification of the north Wales coast rail line.

Mr. Freeman: We have received a number of representations. This matter was discussed in an Adjournment debate on 3 May.

Sporting Events (Charter Trains)

Ms. Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what discussions he has had with British Rail in respect of the provision of charter trains to national football and sporting events at Wembley in the interest of public safety.

Mr. Freeman: None. British Rail has a well-established procedure for providing and policing trains to national football and sporting events at Wembley.

Driver-only Trains

Mr. Spearing: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what consultations have taken place between officials or members of the British Railways Board and the railway inspectorate respectively concerning the introduction of driver-only passenger trains on Southern Region services.

Mr. Freeman: There has been full consultation between British Rail and the railway inspectorate about the introduction of driver-only operation generally. The inspectorate's views have been taken into account in BR's criteria for driver-only operation.

Departmental Savings

Mr. Devlin: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what value for money savings have been achieved by his Department in the last year; and how much of this was as a result of advice from the central unit on purchasing.

Mr. Atkins: The value for money savings made on procurement in 1989-90 are approximately £90 million. The Department takes advice from the central unit on purchasing and it is not possible to apportion savings arising from improved purchasing practices in DTp and those arising from CUP.

Slow Vehicles

Mr. David Nicholson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will encourage, either by legislation or non-legislation means, drivers of vehicles which are either slow by their nature or are slow by virtue of the load they are carrying, periodically to draw to the side of the road to permit other vehicles safely to pass them.

Mr. Atkins: Advice to that effect is contained in paragraph 45 of the highway code.

Pilotage Exemption Certificates

Mr. Barry Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when he expects to publish the report of the public inquiry into pilotage exemption certificates.

Mr. McLoughlin: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State has today published the inspector's report on the public inquiry held into charges for the use of pilotage exemption certificates at Portsmouth and has announced his decision. A copy of the decision letter and of the report has today been sent direct to my hon. Friend.

HEALTH

Prescription Charges

Mr. French: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will review the level of prescription charges paid by asthmatics.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: No. As the result of the present wide-ranging exemption arrangements over 75 per cent. of all items dispensed in the NHS are provided free. Many patients with asthma benefit from these arrangements. Those who are not exempt but who need a lot of medication can save money by buying prescription pre-payment certificates, or season tickets. These certificates can lead to significant savings for anyone needing more than 14 items in a year or five items in a four-month period.

To extend these arrangements or to reduce the level of the prescription charge for all patients who suffer from asthma or any other medical condition would benefit only those whose resources exceed the qualifying threshold for help on low income grounds and would therefore not make the best use of the resources available to the NHS.

Triazolam

Mr. French: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what representations he has received recently about the side-effects of the drug triazolam.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: In the last six months, the Committee on Safety of Medicines has received three reports of adverse reactions which may be associated with triazolam. A report of a suspected adverse reaction does not necessarily mean that there is a causal relationship with the drug. In addition, the Department has received correspondence from a physician on published papers relating to the drug.

Land Sales

Mr. Ralph Howell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much land has been sold by each district health authority in England in each year since 1979; and if he will give details of (a) the total value in each year and (b) the overall value for England.

Mr. Dorrell: The information requested is not held centrally and it could be obtained only at disproportionate cost. Information is held centrally in respect of regional health authorities and the information is shown in the table.

Special Hospitals

Ms. Richardson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to the answer of 13 March, Official Report, column 181, whether the hours women spent in seclusion in Rampton, Broadmoor, and Moss Side special hospitals during the 12 months from December 1988 to December 1989 included night hours; what percentage of women spent no time in seclusion; and what were the maximum number of hours women spent in seclusion.

Mr. Dorrell: The Special Hospitals Services Authority advises me that the information requested is not readily available without extensive examination of individual patient records. This work has been put in hand, and the chairman of the authority will write to the hon. Member.

Electorates

Mr. Simon Coombs: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) if he will list the 25 largest parliamentary constituencies by electorate with their electorates; and what is the average constituency electorate on the current register;

(2) if he will list the shire counties, London boroughs and metropolitan boroughs in England in ranking order according to the degree by which their electorates vary from the nationally averaged electorate appropriate to the numbers of parliamentary constituencies within them.

Mr. Dorrell: The 1990 electorate figures have been collected and published by local authority area in OPCS Monitor EL 90/1, copies of which are available in the Library. The data are still being reassembled by parliamentary constituency, and will be published in "Electoral Statistics: 1990" (Series EL No. 17) in July.

General Practitioners (Fund-holding Status)

Sir George Young: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether it is intended to reimburse the preparatory cash at those general practitioner practices preparing to submit formal applications for fund-holding status from April 1991.

Mr. Kenneth Clarke: Yes. A preparatory allowance of up to £16,000 per practice will be available to practices which have reached agreement with their relevant regional health authority to undertake preparatory work for fund holding. The allowance will be used to reimburse the costs of additional work which practices will need to complete in order to be in a position to take on fund holding status from 1 April 1991. Parliamentary approval to this new scheme is being sought in the main estimate for hospital and community health services, family practitioner services (part) and other services, England (class XIII, vote 1). Pending that approval and the enactment of the National Health Service and Community Care Bill when formal applications for GP practice fund holding status can be made, urgent expenditure estimated at £1,500,000 will be met by repayable advances from the contingencies fund.

Nursery Schools (Cambridgeshire)

Mr. Paice: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the number of three and four-year-olds attending private and voluntary sector (i) nursery schools and (ii) playgroups in Cambridgeshire together with the percentage of the total number of three and four-year-olds in Cambridgeshire which these represent; and what is the cost of local authority support for each category (a) in total and (b) per place for the latest year in which figures are available.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: The information requested is not available centrally in the form requested.

In January 1989, in Cambridgeshire, 117 children attended non-maintained schools registered with the Department of Education and Science. Private and voluntary nursery schools are registered with the local authorities under the Nurseries and Childminders Regulation Act 1948. Information held centrally relates to numbers of places in day nurseries, playgroups and with childminders. Places in nursery schools are not identified as a separate category. This information is published in "Children's Day Care Facilities". The most recent relates to the year ending 31 March 1988, a copy of which is in the Library. Statistics relating to the rate per 1,000 population are calculated on the total number of children aged under five. The number of children under five attending non-maintained schools in Cambridgeshire represents 2·64 per 1,000 children aged under five.

The cost of local authority social services departments support in total was £19,000 for day nurseries and £13,000 for play groups for the year ending 31 March 1988. These figures expressed as an average for each place in voluntary and private provision was some £30 per place for day nurseries and £2 per place in playgroups. Some of the private and voluntary providers may have received no support.

Mr. Paice: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list (a) the number and location of (i) local authority day nurseries and (ii) local authority playgroups in Cambridgeshire together with the number of places available in each location and the percentage of the total number of three and four-year-olds in Cambridgeshire which these places represent (b) the total cost of providing and supporting each category (c) the average cost per child place in each category in Cambridgeshire and (d) the national average cost per child place for each category.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: Information is not available centrally as to the location of these facilities. The number of premises and the total number of places for each authority is published in "Children's Day Care Facilities"; the most recent relates to the year ending 31 March 1988 and a copy is in the Library.

Children under three may attend local authority day nurseries or playgroups. The number of places is shown as a rate per 1,000 of all children under five.

The net current expenditure by Cambridgeshire in the year ended 31 March 1988 was £467,000 on day nurseries and £129,000 on playgroups.

The net current cost expressed as an average cost per child place at 31 March 1988 in each category in Cambridgeshire in the year ended 31 March 1988 was £2.8 thousand per place for day nurseries and £0.2 thousand per place for playgroups.

The equivalent figure for England per child place for each category was for £3,400 per place for day nurseries and £2,400 per place for playgroups.

Pathology Departments (Income-generating Schemes)

Mr. Win Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list those National Health Service pathology departments which have established income-generating schemes which share the profits between the National Health Service and the staff; and if he will place in the Library details of all such schemes.

Mr. Dorrell: This information is not available as details of all such schemes are not collected by the Department. Nevertheless, I understand that several NHS pathology departments have established income generation schemes, which they run themselves or as a joint venture with a private company. There should, however, be no question of NHS employees sharing in the profits resulting from income generation activity undertaken as part of the normal duties under their NHS contracts.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Ethylene Thiourea

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food when he will publish the results of tests which are being carried out on the levels of the fungicide ethylene thiourea in various food products.

Mr. Maclean: On 29 March the food safety directorate of the Department published and placed in the Library of the House the full results of tests on samples of produce previously analysed for ethylene thiourea (ETU) by Parents for Safe Food (PFSF) and Friends of the Earth (FOE). The PFSF/FOE issued their findings in a press release dated 14 February 1989 under the heading "Dangerous Agrochemicals in Supermarket Foods." This gave rise to widespread press coverage with headlines such as "Tomato Ketchup in Cancer Scare."

The Department's tests showed that PFSF/FOE main results grossly overstated the residues of ETU in their samples. We found no detectable ETU residues in bread, compared with PFSF/FOE findings of levels more than 300 times our limit of detection. For tomato ketchup, the PFSF/FOE results overstated actual levels by up to 150 times. For the other products for which duplicate samples were provided, residues were generally either absent or within predicted levels. Low levels of residues were found in dried potato products but presented no risk to health and would be greatly reduced after dilution and reconstitution.

One sample of tomato ketchup was found to have an elevated level of ETU. PFSF/FOE subsequently admitted that this was a sample "spiked" with additional ETU to test the validity of the Department's results. All the Department's tests were done using at least three different analytical techniques to confirm their validity, in contrast to the PFSF/FOE results which were not checked to confirm their validity before they were published.

Departmental Savings

Mr. Devlin: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what value for money savings have been achieved by his Department in the last year; and how much of this was as a result of advice from the central unit on purchasing.

Mr. Maclean: Responsibility for expenditure is largely decentralised to line managers who are in the best position to seek value for money, and there is no comprehensive record of savings achieved. However, information on savings in the field of purchasing in 1988-89 (the latest available period) indicate that departmental action has saved about £6·7 million or 6·9 per cent. of the purchasing spend. The central unit on purchasing provides general guidance on best purchasing practice and it is not possible to attribute specific savings to its advice.

Contaminated Pigfeed

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food (1) where the pigs on farms in Yorkshire and Hampshire discovered to have eaten pigfeed contaminated with Cyanox 425 were slaughtered;

(2) if he will publish the preliminary results of his tests into the issues of pigs contaminated with Cyanox 425.

Mr. Maclean: The Department has been involved in investigations since early this year into a number of cases of Ataxia (hind limb weakness) in breeding pigs. This condition has occurred on over 60 farms, mostly in Yorkshire. Although the condition is not fatal animals suffering from it are often slaughtered for welfare reasons and some 700 animals have been slaughtered in this way, mostly on the farms. Pigs subjected to post-mortem examination exhibited lesions consistent with poisoning by an organophosphorous compound. The common factor between the affected farms was the use of feed from one particular consignment of wheat screenings imported from France. Farmers were warned not to feed suspect material to their animals and the feed supplier withdrew the original material from sale. Samples of the feed were analysed at the central veterinary laboratory. The material was found to be contaminated with Cyanox 425 (widely used in the plastics industry) and Isofenphos, an organophosphorous pesticide which is licensed in France but not in this country. It is believed that the second of these was responsible for the outbreak.

There was no threat to human health. Residues of both these agents in the meat of slaughtered animals were well within internationally recognised safety limits. We believe that none of the animals concerned entered the food chain; but even if they had, the amounts consumed even by an extreme consumer of sows and boarmeat would have been well within the acceptable daily intake prescribed internationally.

I am grateful for the co-operation which has been shown by the feed company and by the manufacturers of Cyanox 425, and I must pay tribute to the high quality of the work carried out by the veterinary investigation service and the central veterinary laboratory. The Department's officials visited France to investigate the circumstances surrounding this contamination and the Department will be pursuing with the French authorities the question of how it arose.

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will list by county the number of farms where pigs have been discovered to have eaten pig feed contaminated with Cyanox 425.

Mr. Maclean: The total number of pig farms which received the suspect feed is 106 in all: 93 located throughout Yorkshire, seven in Humberside, one in Nottinghamshire and five in Durham.

Wool (Guaranteed Price)

Mr. Hague: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will announce the guaranteed price for wool for the 1990 clip; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Gummer: Together with the Secretaries of State for Scotland, Wales and Northern Ireland I have reviewed the state of the wool market and prospects for the 1990 clip.

1989-90 has been a difficult year for the wool industry. There is now a world surplus of wool, and the domestic market has been affected by a decline in consumer spending. This, and other factors, including the withdrawal of China as a major buyer, have had an adverse effect on average market prices which have fallen back sharply from a high point of 145p/kg to as low as 90p/kg, well below the 1989 clip year guranteed price of 129p/kg. For 1990 the prospects remain uncertain.

Ministers have also had to take account of the Government's already announced intention of legislation to end the wool guarantee as soon as parliamentary time is available. I know and understand the wish of the British Wool Marketing Board that this should be done as soon as possible.

It has also been necessary to draw up a new financial agreement to cover the period from 1990. Following discussions with the industry the new financial agreement with the British Wool Marketing Board will last for two years. It will provide a new flexibility to enable the returns to producers to reflect more quickly any substantial recovery in the wool market above the guarantee price.

In the light of the review and taking account of these factors, it has been decided to set the guarantee at 125p/kg for the 1990 clip year—a reduction of 4p/kg on the 1989 guarantee price. At the same time the deficit in the stabilisation fund is being written off as provided for in the existing financial agreement. This relieves producers of a significant burden equivalent to about 18p/kg over two years.

I believe that these various elements constitute a significant step towards actual market prices and provide a sound basis for preparing for the ending of the guarantee. At the same time the new financial agreement enables producers to benefit at an early stage if market prices should recover markedly.

HOUSE OF COMMONS

Franked Pre-paid Envelopes

Mr. John Evans: To ask the Lord President of the Council if he will issue guidance on the use of House of Commons franked pre-paid envelopes within the European Community.

Sir Geoffrey Howe: House of Commons franked or pre-paid envelopes are not valid for use within the European Community. Current arrangements do allow, however, for the cost of official postage to countries within the European Community to be reimbursed by the Fees Office. Discussions are at present taking place to establish a more convenient procedure. Subject to their outcome, relevant guidance will be included in the regulations governing the use of the House emblem, House of Commons stationery and post-paid envelopes, which is issued to Members.

Television (Live Subtitling and Signing)

Mr. Ashley: To ask the Lord President of the Council what arrangements he has made to demonstrate the application of live subtitling and signing to the televised proceedings of the House.

Sir Geoffrey Howe: As part of its continuing review of the experiment, and in response to requests from hon. and right hon. Members as well as from organisations representing the deaf, the Select Committee on Televising of Proceedings of the House has organised separate trials of both the live subtitling and the signing of Prime Ministers's Question Time.

The live subtitling trial will take place in the weeks beginning 14 and 21 May. The subtitling itself will be carried out "as live" and unrehearsed, but for the convenience of the majority of Members who wish to attend Prime Minister's Question Time in the Chamber, it is proposed that only an unedited recording of the subtitled material will be shown on a special monitor set up in the No Lobby. Four separate Prime Minister's Question Times will be subtitled and the tapes will be available for viewing between 4pm and 5pm on each Tuesday and Thursday of the two weeks trial period. Copies of the tapes will also be supplied to organisations representing the deaf in order to give them an opportunity to submit comments to the Select Committee if they wish.

The trial with sign language insets will be conducted on the same basis, but will take place in the weeks beginning 4 and 11 June. The tapes will be shown between 5pm and 6pm on each Tuesday and Thursday of the trial period.

The purpose of these trials is to establish the acceptability to Members from an editorial and aesthetic point of view of the use of these two techniques for assisting the deaf. In the case of live subtitling, it will also be important to test the ability of the system (which involves the use of innovatory technology) to cope with the speed and specialist vocabulary of Question Time.

I should, however, stress that there is as yet no commitment on the part of the broadcasters to adopt these techniques as part of their parliamentary coverage and the Select Committee itself has not reached any conclusions on the subject.

DEFENCE

Exercise Mallet Blow

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what was the total cost to (a) NATO and (b) to the United Kingdom of Exercise Mallet Blow.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave to the hon. Member for Wansbeck (Mr. Thompson) on 30 March 1990 at column 331.

Faslane Submarine Base

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what guidance has been issued to his Department's personnel at the nuclear submarine base on whether signing the petition organised by Dumbarton Conservative party to oppose planning permission for the Faslane peace camp would infringe the Queen's regulations.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: Queen's regulations forbid service personnel from taking an active part in the affairs of any political group. There is, however, no restriction on attendance at public meetings provided that service uniform is not worn, service duties are not impeded and no action is taken which would bring the service into disrepute.

The signing of local petitions by service personnel as private citizens is not seen as an infringement of Queen's regulations. Advice to this effect was issued to all personnel at the Clyde submarine base by the Commodore Clyde in a memorandum dated 9 March 1990.

Low Flying

Mr. Salmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what representations he has received on behalf of the schoolchildren at Mintlaw academy, whose exams were disturbed by the aircraft exercises over their school, on 26 April; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Neubert: Apart from representations made by the hon. Member for Banff and Buchan, the Ministry of Defence is aware of only one representation, made to RAF Buchan, on behalf of the schoolchildren at Mintlaw academy. Should any schools feel that the examination performance of their pupils might have been adversely affected, it is a matter for them to make appropriate representations to the Scottish Examination Board which will, I am sure, give them careful consideration.

Mr. Salmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if, when planning any future low-flying air defence exercises, he will take into account the timing of certificated exams taking place in the areas over which the exercises will be happening; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Neubert: I have nothing to add to the letter of 27 April 1990 to the hon. Member from my noble Friend, the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for the Armed Forces, a copy of which has been placed in the Library.

Exercise Elder Forest 90

Mr. Salmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will give details of any representations he has received regarding the disruption caused by the recent Exercise Elder Forest 90; what was the nature of these complaints; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Neubert: Apart from representations made by the hon. Member, the Ministry of Defence is aware of only three complaints about disturbance caused by low-flying aircraft during Exercise Elder Forest 90. One related to activity in the Scunthorpe area and two to activity to the west of Peterhead.

Kola Peninsula

Sir Dudley Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is the latest assessment of the Soviet military presence on the Kola peninsula; and if there have been any noticeable reductions in recent months.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: There have been no significant reductions in recent months in either the level of activity or size of the Soviet military presence (including the northern fleet) on the Kola peninsula. The northern fleet continues to evolve as an increasingly modern and professional force; we believe other forces are essentially unchanged.

Arms Sales

Mr. Battle: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on his policy of encouraging the export sale of arms to reduce unit costs to United Kingdom armed services.

Mr. Alan Clark: The Government's policy is to support the sale of British defence equipment overseas whenever this is compatible with the United Kingdom's political, strategic and security interests. Defence exports contribute to a strong, viable defence industry. They also provide longer production runs and enable economies of scale in providing equipment for our own armed services, in addition to the foreign earnings which are reflected in the balance of trade.

Parachute Training

Mr. Ashley: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the units which provide parachute training; and if he will give for each the numbers trained.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: Around 60 units provide parachute training, but I am not able to give further information on security grounds.

Mr. Ashley: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will outline the preliminary training given to trainee parachutists for them to acquire the L5 landing certificate.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The syllabus of training for Regular Army personnel attending No. 1 parachute training school (PTS) for basic parachute training allocates approximately two and a half hours to achieve the appropriate level of competence in landing techniques to commence "L5" training. The TA soldier is required to have achieved this level of ability prior to commencement of training at No. 1 PTS and is given instruction, at unit level, by an appropriate detachment parachute jumping instructor.

The precise length of training will vary according to the abilities of the trainee. No trainee is permitted to parachute unless the instructor is satisfied with his level of ability in all respects.

Mr. Ashley: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many accidents and deaths occurred during parachute training at Brize Norton in 1989.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: In 1989, 1,704 Regular and TA troops completed static line parachute training at No. 1 parachute training school, Brize Norton and carried out 12,310 descents. There were a total of 97 injuries including one fatality. Over half of these injuries were minor enough to allow trainees to return to parachute training within a week.

Mr. Ashley: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence in what ways medication given to parachute trainees is monitored to check that no medication which might impair reactions is given in the period before a jump; and on what occasions such medication was given to a parachute trainee at Brize Norton in 1989.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: A parachute trainee who has reported sick will not recommence training until he has been certified fit to do so by the medical officer, and any medication thought likely to impair reactions will necessitate withdrawal from training for an appropriate period. It is essential for any trainee feeling ill to report the matter before undergoing further parachute training.

Mr. Ashley: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what procedure is adopted if parachute trainees report sick.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: Arrangements to see the medical officer will be made for trainees reporting sick. The trainee is briefed to return the appropriate medical form to the course flight sergeant after examination, with the medical officer's written comments.

Mr. Ashley: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what medical checks are made on parachute trainees during their training and before their jumps.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: Unless a trainee reports sick, indicates to an instructor that he is sick, or displays some infirmity which is recognised by the training staff, no medical checks will be carried out. Each individual arrives with a medical certificate declaring his fitness to undergo training. It must be the responsibility of the individual to declare any lack of fitness to continue which may not be readily noticeable.

Mr. Ashley: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) how many of the parachute trainees at Brize Norton in 1989 who arrived without an L5 landing certificate were (a) given a certificate without the training for it, (b) given training at the base to enable them to acquire the certificates and (c) sent home;

(2) how many of the parachute trainees going to Brize Norton in 1989 had with them an L5 landing certificate on arrival; and how many of these were the result of training given by Brize Norton staff instructors at other bases.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The vast majority of trainees arriving at Brize Norton will have possessed a L5 certificate. None would have been allowed to commence parachute training without proof of their competence to do so and none would have been provided with a L5 certificate without undergoing the training required. The further information requested in the hon. Member's questions has not been recorded.

EDUCATION AND SCIENCE

Modern Languages

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will make a statement on the implications for his Department's policies of the national council for modern languages' report on the teaching of oriental and African languages, a copy of which has been sent to him.

Mr. Jackson: Consistent with Government policy to increase the scope for higher education institutions to respond to the various demands placed on them, it is for the institutions themselves to determine provision for all subject areas, in consultation as necessary with the Universities Funding Council and the Polytechnics and Colleges Funding Council.

Departmental Savings

Mr. Devlin: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what value for money savings have been achieved by his Department in the last year; and how much of this was as a result of advice from the central unit on purchasing.

Mrs. Rumbold: The information requested is not yet available but for the previous year (1988-89) the figure was approximately £2 million.

In general, it is not possible to attribute particular value for money savings to advice from the central unit on purchasing. The role of the unit is to provide advice and guidance on best purchasing practice; it provides overall support and guidance and encourages value for money across all Departments.

Supply Index

Mr. Devlin: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will make a statement about his Department's decision not to participate in the Government supply index.

Mrs. Rumbold: The Department has fully evaluated the system but at present the items currently covered by the GSI do not form a significant part of our expenditure and it is not therefore economically viable to join the system. If the situation changes the matter will be reconsidered.

Schools (Voluntary Aided Status)

Mr. Fatchett: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science how many current applications for voluntary aided status for schools are lodged with his Department; and when he expects to announce a decision on each of them.

Mr. Alan Howarth: There are currently 12 proposals published under section 13 of the Education Act 1980 for establishing a voluntary aided school which fall to be decided by my right hon. Friend. In addition there are two proposals before him under section 54 of the Education (No. 2) Act 1986 to change the status of a voluntary controlled school to voluntary aided. He will reach a decision on the proposals as quickly as is compatible with a full and careful consideration of all the issues involved. He has stated that it is his intention to come to a decision on statutory proposals within five months of publication wherever possible. Delays in some cases arise from factors outside the Department's control.

Youth Training Scheme

Mr. Fatchett: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will set out the latest available figures on the number of 16 to 18-year-olds on YTS who receive part-time education at further education colleges.

Mr. Jackson: In November 1988 the number of students studying part-time in maintained colleges of FE in England as part of a YTS was as follows:

	Aged 16	Aged 17	Aged 18	Aged 16-18
All part-time (including evening)	62,000	56,000	5,000	123,000

The ages are those at 31 August 1988.

Nursery Schools (Cambridgeshire)

Mr. Paice: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will give (a) the number and location of (i) nursery schools, (ii) nursery classes and (iii) under-five units in reception classes provided by Cambridgeshire education authority together with the number of places available at each unit and the percentage of the total number of three and four-year-olds in Cambridgeshire which these places represent (b) the total cost of providing and supporting each category, (c) the average cost per child place in each category in Cambridgeshire and (d) the national average cost per child place for each category.

Mrs. Rumbold: Information on the number of under-five units in reception classes and the number of places available at each unit is not available centrally. Information on the total cost of providing and supporting each category is no longer collected separately by the Department. In January 1989 the number of nursery schools, nursery classes and the number of pupils under five in Cambridgeshire is as follows:

	Number	Pupils under five	Percentage of the estimated 3 and 4-year-old population
Nursery schools	7	661	4
Primary schools
Nursery classes	31	1,355	8
Other classes		5,073	30
Total		7,089	42

Teacher Shortage (Tower Hamlets)

Mr. Shore: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what information he has received on children of school age in the London borough of Tower Hamlets unable to find a school place in the current academic year because of shortages of teachers; what discussions he has had about this problem with the Inner London education authority and the London borough of Tower Hamlets; and what action he proposes to take to ensure that all children in the London Borough of Tower Hamlets enjoy the basic right to state education.

Mrs. Rumbold: The local education authority estimates that, excluding rising fives, there were about 220 children of compulsory school age not in school at the end of the spring term. These figures take no account of the take-up of 180 places at Bigland primary school which opened this term.

The Department is in regular contact with the local education authority about this and other matters, and will continue to give support to the measures Tower Hamlets is taking to secure an adequate supply of teachers.

Bangladeshis

Mr. Shore: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what action he has taken to implement recommendations 7 to 15 of the Home Affairs Select Committee in its first report in Session 1986-87 on Bangladeshis in Great Britain; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Alan Howarth: I am able to report the following developments since the Government response to the Home Affairs Select Committee Report "Bangladeshis in Britain" was published in July 1987. The Department issued last July a circular (16/89) to local education authorities and others, instituting from September 1990 a national scheme for the collection of ethnically based statistics on school pupils. Three projects aimed at addressing the particular educational needs of Bangladeshi pupils have been included in the education support grant programme on ethnic diversity.

Local education authorities are already required to set targets and performance indicators for English language support teaching funded through grants paid under section 11 of the Local Government Act 1966. In the proposals for the future administration of the grant recently published by the Home Office, local authorities will be required to review the effectiveness of existing section 11 funded provision and set specific objectives and quantifiable targets for continued funding.

Pre-school provision of children from linguistic minorities and home-school liaison, particularly with parents who speak little English, are eligible for support under current arrangements for section 11 and continue to be identified as areas for support in the proposed new arrangements.

As regards recommendations 11 and 14 concerning local authority support for voluntary initiatives, under current section 11 arrangements it is open to local authorities to apply for grant support for posts to work on detached duty with voluntary organisations.

Under the proposed new arrangements for the grant the Government will expect local authorities to include in their funding bids applications for posts based in the voluntary sector, although as with current applications in respect of the voluntary sector, these will have to meet the relevant criteria for grant. Bengali has been included among those modern foreign languages specified as eligible to be taught as a national curriculum foundation subject. Since last autumn, schools have been able to offer Bengali towards the national curriculum requirements, provided that they also offer at least one of the working languages of the European Community.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Remand Prisoners

Mr. Steinberg: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many prisoners held on remand in each year from 1979 to 1989 were found not guilty.

Mr. Mellor: The latest information is published in table 2.8 of "Prison statistics England and Wales 1988" (Cmn. 825), a copy of which is in the Library. Final data for 1988 and provisional data for 1989 are not yet available.

Immigration

Mr. Butler: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many overstayers were granted leave to remain in the United Kingdom in the latest available year having given evidence of stable marriages to British citizens with right of abode in the United Kingdom.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: The information requested is not readily available and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Prison Officers Association Annual Conference

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what Minister from the Home Office will be attending and speaking at this year's Prison Officers Association annual conference; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Mellor: Neither I nor my right hon. and learned Friend have been invited to attend or speak at the Prison Officers' Association annual conference.

Race Relations Board

Sir Dudley Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what guidelines he issues to the Race Relations Board over its encouragement and help of complainants in bringing cases before an industrial tribunal;

(2) whether, when next he meets the chairman of the Race Relations Board, he will discuss with him his policy of encouraging individuals to bring cases of complaint where those individuals have deliberately approached several companies for employment as a test exercise.

Mr. John Patten: The criteria on which the Commission for Racial Equality considers applications from complainants for assistance are laid down in section 66 of the Race Relations Act 1976. I am assured by its chairman that the commission would want to avoid supporting any complaint made as the result of a "test exercise" approach to a number of employers, as opposed to assisting genuine job applicants who complain of discrimination.

Sir Dudley Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will consider introducing legislation to compensate those people who are put to expense in defending actions brought before industrial tribunals with the support of the Race Relations Board where the case is dismissed or the complainant drops his or her allegations at a late stage.

Mr. John Patten: I understand that my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Employment has no plans to extend the provisions in the Industrial Tribunals (Rules of Procedure) Regulations 1985 to cover the award of costs in all cases where a case is dismissed or dropped at a late stage.

Pregnant Prisoners

Miss Emma Nicholson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he can give a breakdown of the charges faced by pregnant women currently held on remand.

Mr. Mellor: On 1 May 1990 there were eight pregnant females held on remand. Of these one is charged with murder, one with burglary and theft, four with theft or fraud, one with arson, and one with criminal damage.

Miss Emma Nicholson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many women prisoners were pregnant at the last count.

Mr. Mellor: On 1 May 1990, 35 female prisoners were known to be pregnant.

Miss Emma Nicholson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many women who have been known to be pregnant have been sentenced to prison in each of the last 10 years.

Mr. Mellor: The information requested is not available. The annual reports of the work of the prison department do however record the number of pregnant females temporarily removed to outside hospitals for delivery and returning to establishments afterwards. The figures are:

	Number
1988-89	63
1987-88	75
1986-87	71
1985-86	71
[1]1984-85	70
1983	[2]70
1982	[2]51
1981	74
1980	75
1979	[2]74

[1] Covers 15 month period.
[2] Additionally, in each of the years 1979, 1982 and 1983 there was one delivery in an establishment.

Miss Emma Nicholson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will give a breakdown of the sentences subsequently received by pregnant women held on remand in each of the last 10 years.

Mr. Mellor: The information requested is not available.

Miss Emma Nicholson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he can give a breakdown of the offences for which pregnant women who have been sentenced to jail have been convicted.

Mr. Mellor: On 1 May 1990 there were 27 pregnant females serving sentences of imprisonment. Of these:

10 had been convicted of offences of theft or fraud.
7 had been convicted of offences of violence against the person.
6 had been convicted of drugs offences.
2 had been convicted of burglary offences.
1 had been convicted of a sexual offence.
1 had been convicted of aiding and abetting blackmail.

Where a woman had been received on sentence for several offences, only the principal criminal offence has been stated.

Murderers (Film Payments)

Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will consider the introduction of legislation of forbid the payment of money to people convicted of murder by those making films based on their crimes; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. John Patten [holding answer 30 April 1990]: It is deplorable that criminals—especially those convicted of the most heinous offences—should be able to profit indirectly from their crimes by payments for publication of them, in films or any other medium. We are already considering what steps could be taken, although we recognise that there are practical difficulties because benefits can be received indirectly, or covertly, or outside our jurisdiction.

OVERSEAS DEVELOPMENT

Ethiopia

Mr. John Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what information he has received in recent weeks regarding food convoy movements in Ethiopia; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Chalker: The latest information available on the southern line operation for transporting food across the conflict lines is that in the period 20 March (when the operation started) to 2 May, 61 convoys have carried 8,803 tonnes of food into northern Wello and Tigray. Of this total, 4,214 tonnes have been delivered to Makelle in Tigray. In the six days up to 2 May a total of 2,067 tonnes was delivered.

In addition, substantial amounts of food have been delivered into Eritrea and Tigray by convoys operated by the Eritrean Relief Association (ERA) and the Relief Society of Tigray (REST). We do not have details of movements of convoys along these routes.

Eastern Europe

Mrs. Mahon: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations Her Majesty's Government have made to the development assistance committee of the Organisation for Economic Co-operation and Development to ensure that aid to eastern Europe is counted separately from aid to developing countries in development assistance committee calculations of official development assistance.

Mrs. Chalker: The Government supported the proposed conclusion, reached by the development assistance committee of the Organisation for Economic Co-operation and Development, that assistance to eastern Europe should not be included in the calculation of official development assistance as a proportion of GNP used in DAC statistical presentations.

Non-governmental Organisations

Mr. John Carlisle: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list the non-governmental organisations in receipt of grants from his Department in 1989-90; and what is the size of each grant.

Mrs. Chalker: The figures for 1989-90 are not yet available. The figures for 1988-89, including support both for long-term development projects and for emergency and refugee relief, are as follows:

Charitable Institutions

Mr. John Carlisle: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs (1) what investigations are made by his Department into the political activities of those charitable institutions in receipt of grants from his Department;

(2) what guidelines are set for charitable organisations in receipt of Government grants from his Department regarding any policy that might be influenced by political considerations of the officers of that charity;

(3) whether he will consider withdrawing all grants from his Department to any charitable organisation that is under investigation by the Charity Commissioners.

Mrs. Chalker: My Department does not make general grants to voluntary agencies. Our support is confined to specifically identified and agreed projects, both for long-term development and for emergency and refugee relief. Our prime concern is the quality and relevance to local communities in developing countries of the proposed projects. We also take account of the probity and administrative and professional competence of the agencies to operate and maintain the projects; and they are required to account to us for the use of our funds.

We do not fund voluntary agencies' campaigning or political activities. They are independent organisations and as such are free to express their own views. The way in which they do that and the content of their campaigning is essentially a matter for the agencies, their supporters and the Charity Commissioners. I certainly do not see eye to eye with some agencies' views, and when appropriate I do not hesitate to take issue with them. But it is for the Charity Commissioners to judge whether an agency over-steps the guidelines on what constitutes acceptable activities for a charity and it would not be proper for me to seek to intervene in the commissioners' deliberations.

I look forward to continuing to support the excellent work of the NGOs in developing countries. Our support will continue to be confined to agreed projects and will be available only to those agencies which are properly maintaining charitable status.

Know-how Fund (Czechoslovakia)

Sir Bernard Braine: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether the know-how fund for Czechoslovakia is now in operation; and if he will give details of the specific help on offer.

Mrs. Chalker: The extension of the know-how fund to Czechoslovakia was announced during the visit of President Havel to Britain in March. Detailed projects and programmes have not yet been worked out, but assistance will initially be concentrated on the financial, employment, energy and environment sectors, and on the provision of management training.

WALES

National Curriculum

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what representations he has received concerning the national curriculum in Wales; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Roberts: We have received many representations concerning the national curriculum in Wales, most of which have been in response to the numerous consultations we have conducted.

Schools (Repair and Decoration)

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what measures he has taken to facilitate the repair and decoration of schools in Wales for this financial year; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Roberts: In framing the local authority finance settlements for 1990-91 we have allowed for current spending of £1,001 million on education—some 10·1 per cent. above last year's expenditure provision—and gross capital spending of £53·7 million—confirming the enhanced position of recent years and bringing the total capital increase since 1985-86 to 60 per cent. These levels should permit local education authorities to meet their responsibilities for the repair and maintenance of schools, particularly if additional resources are released by measures such as removal of surplus places.

In the context of the efficiency initiative, local authorities have established a property management group and this is addressing the condition of the local authority estate, including educational establishments. A report on property management has been prepared which recommends the setting up of appropriate records in regard to the age and condition of buildings, including schools.

Floods

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make cash payments of £70,000 each to the north Wales sea flood inundation funds of Clwyd county council, Colwyn borough council, Rhuddlan borough council and Delyn borough council: and if he will make a statement.

Mr. David Hunt: The existing sea-wall at Towyn has now been repaired and strengthened to ensure that a breach should not occur again, even in extreme conditions. In addition, work has already started on the options for improving the defences still further and this will be taken forward urgently. My Department will be ready to provide resources towards any agreed scheme. This is in addition to the £12 million of work already planned in north Wales over the next few years.

The most important form of aid that the Government are able to give is, of course, aid under the Bellwin scheme and this is available to all the relevant local authorities in north Wales. The grant will be paid at the rate of 85 per cent. instead of the more customary 75 per cent. In addition the period over which it can be paid has been extended by a further three months to 31 July and we will review the position towards the end of July and, if necessary, extend the scheme still further.

The amount of money which will be paid under the scheme will be very substantial. Colwyn borough council has made a preliminary estimate of £1·25 million expenditure eligible for Bellwin assistance and if this proves to be accurate it will result in a payment by the Government of more than £1 million. Further claims may well come in from Colwyn borough council and, of course, from the other councils in north Wales which have been affected.

There is a strange misunderstanding that the £150,000 donation which the Welsh Office gave to the appeal funds of the mayors of Colwyn, Delyn and Rhuddlan was the total amount of Government aid. It is, of course, only a minute proportion of the total expenditure in which the Government will be involved and the donation was made in the hope that it would encourage many others to make a similar donation. Never previously have the Government made a donation to such funds unless loss of life has been involved.

Achievements (Cost of Reply)

Mr. Michael: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what was the total cost of (a) printing and circulating information to the press about his reply to the hon. Member for Pembroke (Mr. Bennett) on 1 May seeking a list of achievements during his period of office as Secretary of State for Wales and (b) its publication in the Official Report.

Mr. David Hunt: This answer was circulated in the normal way to the House of Commons and the press Lobby with seven other answers at an estimated cost of £15. Printing in Hansard is estimated to have cost £44.

Parking Restrictions

Mr. Michael: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what plans he has to review the designation of parking restrictions and prohibitions by local authorities in Wales and the effectiveness of such systems in residential and commercial areas.

Mr. Wyn Roberts: The need for, and the effectiveness of, parking restrictions on local roads is entirely a matter for consideration by local highway authorities who have a statutory duty under the Road Traffic Regulation Act 1984 to exercise their powers to secure the expeditious, convenient and safe movement of vehicular and other traffic.

Glaucoma

Mr. Michael: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales (1) how many cases of glaucoma were recorded as diagnosed in each month of 1989 (a) in each health authority area in Wales and (b) in Wales as a whole;

(2) how many cases of glaucoma were recorded as diagnosed in each month of 1989 in South Glamorgan;

(3) how many referrals to ophthalmic surgeons were made in each month in 1989 in (a) South Glamorgan and (b) Wales.

Mr. Grist: I refer the hon. Gentleman to the reply that I gave him on Tuesday 8 May at column 58.

Pathology Departments (Income)

Mr. Win Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list those National Health Service pathology departments which have established income generating schemes which share the profits between the National Health Service and the staff; and if he will place in the Library details of all such schemes.

Mr. Grist: The Welsh Office monitors National Health Service income generation activity as part of its annual review of health authorities. The 1989 review did not reveal the existence of any such schemes in Wales.

Caernarfon Cottage Hospital

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make a statement on the difference between the Welsh language version and the English language version of the letter sent by P. R. Gregory of his Department to C. H. Thomas of Gwynedd health authority on the conditions to be met prior to the closure of Caernarfon cottage hospital.

Mr. Grist: The difference between the Welsh and English versions of the fifth paragraph of the letter arose during the process of drafting in English and translation into Welsh. As the hon. Gentleman is aware, a further letter has been sent to the general manager clarifying that only the English version currently sets out the conditions of closure.

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales (1) if he will make it his policy to inspect (a) the steps taken to reprovide general anaesthetic dental clinic facilities at ysbyty Gwynedd and (b) the proposed motorised mobile dental clinic facilities prior to allowing Gwynedd health authority to close the cottage hospital, Caernarfon;

(2) what is the proportion of the staff at (a) the cottage hospital, Caernarfon and (b) ysbyty Gwynedd who are Welsh-speaking;

(3) if he will publish in the Official Report the updated estimated cost of running the cottage hospital, Caernarfon on the basis of which he agreed to confirm the closure; and what were the assumptions relating to (a) bed occupancy rates and (b) the number of persons using the casualty facilities at that hospital on which these cost estimates were based;

(4) what proportion of the patients currently treated at the cottage hospital, Caernarfon will be treated in (a) Eryri hospital, Caernarfon and (b) Bryn Seiont hospital, Caernarfon after the proposed closure of the cottage hospital;

(5) what steps he proposes to take to ensure that the Gwynedd health authority complies with the recommendations of Welsh Office circular WHC(89)28 on the future development of community dental services with regard to setting up an effective monitoring system to evaluate the efficiency of the arrangements for transfer of appropriate patients from the community dental services to the general dental service; by what date he expects this to be achieved; and if he will make a statement;

(6) whether he has received from Gwynedd district health authority any application for the partial closure of the cottage hospital, Caernarfon; and if he will make a statement;

(7) if he will make a statement on the letter of 20 April by P. R. Gregory of the Welsh Office to C. H. Thomas, the district manager of Gwynedd district health authority, paragraph 32 of annex 'A', with regard to alternative cost saving options considered by the health authority instead of closing the cottage hospital, Caernarfon; and if he will list in the Official Report the alternatives which were considered;

(8) what consultations his Department had with general practitioners in the town of Caernarfon before approving proposals to close the cottage hospital, Caernarfon.

Mr. Grist: I shall write to the hon. Gentleman and place a copy of my letter in the Library of the House.

Gwynedd Health Authority

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales whether he has received representations from the chairman of Gwynedd health authority during the past six months on the current expenditure budget provision made for that authority for the financial year 1990-91; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Grist: Neither my right hon. Friend, nor his predecessor, the right hon. Member for Worcester (Mr. Walker) have received any representation in the past six months from the chairman of the Gwynedd health authority concerning the authority's budgetary requirements for the current financial year. However, in a letter dated 7 February to the director of the NHS in Wales, the general manager of the authority outlined the authority's financial situation for 1989-90 and provided a projection of an overspend of some £4 million in 1990-91 if further action was not taken to restore financial balance.

Following discussions between the NHS director and the general manager, the authority has re-engaged the management consultants, Deloittes, Haskins and Sells to assist its officials in preparing proposals on how this might be achieved. My right hon. Friend is willing to give sympathetic consideration to any request from the authority for temporary financial assistance, so long as any such request is underpinned by a well-thought-out strategy for restoring financial balance in the medium term.

Hospital Closures

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many hospital closures have been approved by his Department between 1 June 1987 and 30 April 1990; and if he will list these hospitals.

Mr. Grist: A list of those hospitals the closure of which has been approved by this Department between 1 June 1987 and 30 April 1990 is given in the following table:

	Approved
Closure of Madog memorial hospital Porthmadog	3 March 1989
Closure of Druid hospital, Llangefni	3 March 1989
Closure of Groesynyd hospital, Conwy	3 March 1989
Closure of St. David's hospital, Bangor	3 March 1989
Closure of Pentwyn and Tyntyla hospitals, Mid Glamorgan	4 July 1989
Closure of Cottage hospital, Caernarfon	20 March 1990

SCOTLAND

Health Board Expenditure

Mr. Strang: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what was the (i) capital, (ii) revenue and (iii) total expenditure of each of the Scottish health boards in each of the last five years and in the last financial year.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: I refer the hon. Member to the reply that I gave him on 8 May at columns 70-72.

Rent-to-Mortgage Scheme

Mrs. Gorman: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how much has been spent to date by his Department in promoting his rent-to-mortgage scheme; and if he will make a statement.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: Responsibility for the promotion of the rent-to-mortgage scheme rests with Scottish Homes, and the Scottish Development Department has not incurred any promotional expenditure specific to that scheme.

Right to Buy

Mrs. Gorman: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what amount in 1990 prices was spent to promote the right to buy in Scotland in each full year of operation.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The information requested, which is set out in the table, relates to publicity campaigns undertaken by the Scottish Office promoting right to buy.

Foreign Language Teachers

Mr. Wray: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many foreign language teachers there were in Scotland for each year since 1975.

Mr. Lang: The numbers of modern language teachers teaching in education authority secondary schools in Scotland at each September since 1975 for which information is available, are set out in the table:

Numbers (full-time equivalents) of modern language teachers

	Number
1988	1,750
1987	[1]1,820
1984	[1]2,100
1983	2,180

1980	2,280
1979	2,300
1978	2,300
1976	2,290
1975	2,190

[1] Number of full-time and part-time teachers.

At present the supply of language teachers matches demand, measured at the national level.

Forestry

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) if he will list the names, locations and areas of sites which have been subject to aerial spraying with products other than fenitrothion to combat forest pests in the years 1986 to 1989; and if he will list the products used in each case;

(2) if he will list names of sites, their locations and areas within Scotland, England and Wales, for which (a) Forestry Commission and (b) private forestry concerns have sought approval for the use of fenitrothion for the purpose of aerial spraying during each of the years 1986, 1987, 1988 and 1989; and whether he will list which areas were sprayed.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton [holding answer 23 April 1990]: The information is set out in the following tables. All the applications for approval for aerial spraying with insecticides, in respect of both Forestry Commission and privately owned forests, were sought by the commission. All the areas treated were in the highland region of Scotland and, except where indicated in the table, were in the Sutherland district of that region. No aerial spraying was required in 1989.

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what was the total quantity of fenitrothion used in forestry operations in Scotland in each of the last five years.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton [holding answer 23 April 1990.]: The information is as follows:

Year	kg active ingredient
1985	1,450
1986	440
1987	400
1988	190
1989	None

Child Psychotherapists

Mr. Maclennan: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what steps he is taking to encourage the appointment of child psychotherapists in Scotland.

Mr. Michael Forsyth [holding answer 4 May 1990]: Decisions on the level of Health Service staffing including the appointment of child psychotherapists are matters for individual health boards.

Foreign Language Training

Mr. Wray: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what discussions he has had with the Scottish (a) business community, (b) higher education authorities and (c) unions regarding the need for training in foreign languages in Scotland especially from 1 January 1993.

Mr. Lang [holding answer 8 May 1990]: The views of these and other bodies have been given in meetings and through correspondence on a variety of occasions.

Mr. Wray: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what objective factors he has taken into consideration in order to decide the number of adequate teachers of foreign languages in Scotland; and how often the situation is reviewed.

Mr. Lang [holding answer 8 May 1990]: The factors taken into account in determining intake targets for teacher training courses are described in the SED statistical bulletin "Teachers—Key Statistics on Demand and Supply" No. 12/B7/1989 published in November last year, a copy of which is in the Library. These factors are reviewed annually. Colleges of education consult education authorities to decide the subject specialist mix of each annual intake to secondary training.

ENVIRONMENT

Local Income Tax

Mr. Riddick: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will update the figures relating to payments under a local income tax given in his answers of 13 June 1989, Official Report, columns 360-61, and 24 May 1989, Official Report, column 594.

Mr. Chope: Updated figures were placed in the Library on 4 April. These show the rate of local income tax which could apply in each area were such a system introduced. The bill payable by any resident is calculated by multiplying the local income tax rate by that resident's taxable income. The figures placed in the Library show as an illustration the bill payable in each area with a taxable income of £12,800. This is equivalent to average male earnings less the single person's tax allowance.

On that basis, the figures sought by my hon. Friend are as follows—a man on average male earnings in England would pay £949 and a man on average male earnings in Kirklees would pay £1,093.

Unleaded Petrol

Sir Dudley Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what official efforts are being made to educate drivers about the various grades of unleaded petrol and their application to different types of car engines.

Mr. Portillo: From 1 October, all new cars will be required to be able to use 95 octane unleaded petrol. The vast majority can already do so. The Government have issued a free booklet "Adjust to Unleaded" which gives guidance on the use of this fuel in existing cars. The booklet also deals in general terms with the higher octane grades which will enable certain additional existing models to run on unleaded petrol. It would, however, be excessively complicated to include detailed information on individual models, and motorists who are in doubt should consult their vehicle manual or seek advice from a qualified source.

Housing

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many private and public authority homes were built in each of the past five years in the constituency of Richmond and Barnes.

Mr. Chope: The Department collects housebuilding statistics for local authority areas. Figures for the London borough of Richmond upon Thames, which includes this constituency, appear in "Housebuilding in England by Local Authority Areas 1980 to 1988" and for the first nine months of 1989 in "Local Housing Statistics, No. 92". Copies of both are in the Library.

Integrated Pollution Control

Mrs. Gorman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what action he intends to take to ensure that processes requiring approval under integrated pollution control will be dealt with as quickly as possible.

Mr. Trippier: As I said on 26 April at column 343 in reply to my hon. Friend the Member for Waveney (Mr. Porter), I have placed in the Library of the House a timetable for the implementation of integrated pollution control (IPC). It is our intention to introduce the initial phase of integrated pollution control on 2 January 1990 and thereafter to bring all processes prescribed for control into the new system by 1995. Once an application is made, Her Majesty's inspectorate of pollution will have four months to determine the grant of an authorisation. If the inspectorate has not reached a decision at the end of that time the applicant will have a right of appeal for a determination to the Secretary of State.

Climate Change

Mr. Barry Field: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when he expects the report by the Intergovernmental Panel on Climate Change to be published.

Mr. Trippier: The Intergovernmental Panel on Climate Change report is due to be published in September.

Human Sewage Sludge

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he proposes to recommend the spreading of human sewage sludge on land for fertilising purposes; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: The use of sewage sludge as a fertiliser in England and Wales is controlled by the Sludge (Use in Agriculture) Regulations 1989 (SI 1263) and more detailed advice is contained in the code of practice for agricultural use of sewage sludge, published by the Department in 1989.

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what information he has as to in which of the European Community countries it is permissible to spread human sewage sludge on land for fertilising purposes.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: Sewage sludge is used as a fertiliser on agricultural land in all European Community countries.

Toxic Wastes

Mr. Frank Cook: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what provisions have been made for the storage and disposal of toxic wastes arising from British Nuclear Fuels' activities at Springfields, Capenhurst, Chapelcross, Calder Hall works and Sellafield.

Mr. Trippier: This is a matter for the waste disposal authorities in whose area the premises are situated.

Mr. Frank Cook: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what provisions have been made for the storage and disposal of toxic wastes arising from United Kingdom Atomic Energy Authority and AEA Technology activities at AERE Harwell, Winfrith, the Windscale research laboratories, Dounreay nuclear power development establishment and Risley.

Mr. Trippier: In England, responsibility for controlling the storage of non-radioactive toxic waste covered by part I of the Control of Pollution Act 1974, and for the licensing of sites used for waste disposal, falls to the relevant waste disposal authority in whose area the premises or disposal site are situated. The storage and disposal of radioactive waste is authorised under the provisions of the Radioactive Substances Act 1960. Corresponding controls in respect of Dounreay are the responsibility of my right hon. and learned Friend the Secretary of State for Scotland.

Rate Capping

Mr. Boswell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how much in total was spent by local councils on unsuccessful legal challenges to rate-capping legislation.

Mr. Portillo [holding answer 3 May 1990]: The Department does not have this information.

Building Control

Mr. O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many private companies or individuals are involved with building control; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Chope [holding answer 4 May 1990]: The National House-building Council Control Services Limited is the only private company authorised under the Building Act 1984 to undertake building control functions as approved inspectors.

Some local authorities use private consultants to assist them in their building control work. No statistics are kept on the number of private companies or individuals involved in such work.

Loft Insulation

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what was the total expenditure by his Department on grants towards the cost of loft insulation under the homes insulation scheme for (a) 1988-89 and (b) 1989-90.

Mr. Chope [holding answer 4 May 1990]: My Department's expenditure on the homes insulation scheme in 1988-89 was £11·4 million and in 1989-90 it was £5·8 million. These amounts include the administrative expenses of local authorities.

Audit Commission

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he has any plans to develop or expand the role of the Audit Commission.

Mr. Chris Patten [holding answer 8 May 1990]: None, beyond the proposals contained in the National Health Service and Community Care Bill to expand the Audit Commission's functions to cover the National Health Service.

Local Government Finance

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment whether his Department assisted the Data Protection Registrar with his investigation into possible unauthorised disclosure of poll tax data by the London borough of Wandsworth; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Portillo: I am not aware that the Data Protection Registrar has asked for any such assistance.

Mr. Nicholas Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment by how much the total amount to be raised by local government through the community charge in the current financial year exceeds the amount which would have been raised had the last year's income from domestic rates been increased in line with inflation; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Portillo [holding answer 8 May 1990]: English local authorities have budgeted to raise £12·7 billion from the community charge in 1990-91. This is 30 per cent. higher than the amount they raised from domestic rates in 1989-90 and £2·2 billion more than if they had increased income by the March 1990 RPI.

The local authorities have budgeted to raise £35·8 billion from community charge, grant and business rates. This is £2·5 billion more than the equivalent figure for 1989-90 adjusted for changes in function and increased by the March 1990 RPI.

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what are his estimates of the costs to local authorities in 1991-92 of implementing legislation on (a) community care and (b) environmental protection.

Mr. Portillo [holding answer 8 May 1990]: Estimates of the costs to local authorities and others of implementing the National Health Service and Community Care Bill and the Environmental Protection Bill are contained in the explanatory and financial memoranda to those Bills.

Mr. Benn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list the statutory provisions permitting the preparation and publication of standard spending assessments for the community charge.

Mr. Chris Patten [holding answer 8 May 1990]: Standard spending assessments are calculated according to the revenue support grant distribution report (England) made under section 80 of the Local Government Finance Act 1988 and approved by the House on 18 January 1990. The Community Charges and Non-domestic Rating (Demand Notices) (England) Regulations 1990 (1990, No. 156) require standard spending assessments to appear on community charge demand notices.

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what factors influenced his decision not to charge-cap the City of London.

Mr. Portillo [holding answer 8 May 1990]: My right hon. Friend did not designate the City of London for charge capping because its budget was not in his opinion excessive.

Mr. Malins: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what guidance is given to local authorities on the exercise of discretion on the levying of the community charge.

Mr. Chope [holding answer 8 May 1990]: It has been the long-established and sensible practice of local authorities to exercise discretion not to seek to collect very small amounts where the cost of collection would exceed the amounts concerned. The introduction of the community charge does not alter this, a fact mentioned in community charge practice note No. 24 which is about to be issued.

Mr. Harry Barnes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, pursuant to his written answer of 3 May to the hon. Member for Derbyshire, North-East, if he will list which grants fall (a) inside and (b) outside aggregate Exchequer finance.

Mr. Chope [holding answer 8 May 1990]: The grants falling within AEF for 1990-91 are listed. National non-domestic rate payments are also with AEF. All other grants to local authorities are outside AEF.

Grants within AEF

Revenue support grant
Low rateable value areas grant
Inner London education grant
Police grant[1]
Magistrates' courts grant[1]
Probation services grant
Commonwealth immigrants grant
Urban programme[1]
Civil defence
Sheltered employment
In-service teacher training
Education support
Housing benefit administration
Social services training
AIDS and HIV
Careers service strengthening grant
National parks supplementary grant
Education of travellers' children

[1]Excluding the loan charges element.

Mr. Harry Barnes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, pursuant to his written answer of 3 May to the hon. Member for Derbyshire, North-East[1], if he will provide similar calculations which exclude from the Government grant total (a) community charge rebate figures, (b) grants outside of AEF and (c) the figures in (a) and (b) combined[2]; if he will give reasons for including grants outside AEF and community charge rebates within his calculations.

Mr. Chope [holding answer 8 May 1990]: The figures requested are (a) Government grants 35 per cent., (b) business rates 29 per cent., (c) community charges 35 per cent. The figure for community charges is gross of community charge rebates and transitional relief grant. Figures do not add to 100 per cent. due to rounding.

The figures given in my answer to the hon. Member on 3 May 1990 at columns 617-18 included as central Government grants grants outside AEF and community charge rebates because these are part of direct and indirect support from central Government to community charge payers and help them to meet local authority spending.

Mr. Harry Barnes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, pursuant to his written answer of 3 May to the hon. Member for Derbyshire, North-East, if he will list the equivalent percentage details for each district council area in Derbyshire.

Mr. Chope [holding answer 8 May 1990]: This information is not available.

EMPLOYMENT

Youth Training

Ms. Short: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will publish details for Great Britain and for the west midlands region for each year from April 1986 to the most recent date, of the total number of YTS trainees (a) in training and (b) with disabilities in training.

Mr. Nicholls: The figures for the number of YTS trainees in training and with disabilities in training for Great Britain and the west midlands for each year from April 1986 to the most recent date are as follows:

	Great Britain		West Midlands
	Total in training	Disabled in training	Total in training	Disabled in training
March 1987	305,676	9,331	39,751	1,146
March 1988	375,564	11,269	44,647	1,264
March 1989	376,622	12,046	42,227	1,256
March 1990[1]	359,460	9,586	39,394	962

[1] Subject to revision.

Ms. Short: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will introduce an age-related increase in the YT allowance for those aged 18 years and over.

Mr. Nicholls: There will be no change to the value of the higher rate of the youth training allowance. The present level of this allowance represents a clear lead over the corresponding level of the income support for 18-year-olds which came into effect in April.

Departmental Savings

Mr. Devlin: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what value for money savings have been achieved by his Department in the last year; and how much of this was as a result of advice from the central unit on purchasing.

Mr. Eggar: The figures for 1989-90 are being processed and are not yet available. However, the statistics in the table show for all parts of the ED group the improvements in 1988-89 as published in the 1989 progress report to the Prime Minister. It is not possible to attribute particular savings to advice from central unit on purchasing. The role of the central unit on purchasing is to give advice and guidance on best purchasing practice; it provides overall support and guidance and encourages value for money across all Government Departments.

Special Needs Training

Mr. Blair: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what criteria he will use in assessing whether the training requirements of special needs groups are being met by TECs.

Mr. Eggar: Each TEC will set out in its corporate and business plans how it intends to meet the training requirements of groups with special needs. These plans will be subject to my approval and performance against them will be regularly monitored. In addition, the training standards advisory service will be appraising the quality of training provision offered by TECs to people with special training needs.

Mr. Blair: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what action has been taken or guidance has been given to TECs to develop special needs training.

Mr. Eggar: TECs have received detailed guidance on the issues that should be addressed in their corporate and business plans, including the provision of training for people with special needs. My Department is also preparing material for TECs to promote good practice and high quality special needs training.

Training (Funding)

Mrs. Gorman: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he has had any recent meetings with the business community to discuss the public/private sector mix of the funding of training schemes; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Eggar: I have frequent meetings with the business community at which a number of issues are discussed, including the need for greater investment by employers in training. Training and enterprise councils will have substantial public funds for training and will be well placed to encourage the private sector to contribute.

Mr. Blair: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what are his criteria for allocating training budgets (a) between different regions in England and Wales, (b) between different areas within each region and (c) between different training providers within each area.

Mr. Eggar: Training budgets for programmes operated through the Training Agency are allocated between different regions in England and Wales on the basis of historical spending levels and expected requirements in the year for which the allocation is being made. Particular criteria will be different for each individual programme depending upon its aims and objectives.

Allocations of budgets to areas within regions are normally on the same basis as allocations to regions. Budgets for different training providers are established through negotiation and will depend mainly upon the nature, type and scale of provision being delivered.

Training and Enterprise Councils

Mrs. Gorman: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many civil servants are involved in managing the TEC programme.

Mr. Eggar: Civil servants from my Department are engaged in facilitating the setting up of training and enterprise councils and managing the contractual relationship with them. They will also work in training and enterprise councils on a secondment basis. Training and enterprise councils are being established progressively throughout the year and it is not possible to state how many civil servants are involved at any one time.

Mr. Blair: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what representations he has received from training and enterprise councils against the cuts in funding for training.

Mr. Eggar: I have received a number of representations from training and enterprise councils (TECs) about reductions in funding for training. I have explained that these reductions need to be set against sharp falls in unemployment and the drop in numbers of young people.

Coal Mining (Major Injuries)

Mr. Strang: To ask the Secretary of State for employment what was the number of major injuries in (a) British Coal deep coal mines, (b) licensed private deep coal mines, (c) British Coal opencast mines and (d) licensed private opencast mines in 1988-89 and 1989-90.

Mr. Nicholls: The information requested is as follows for 1988-89:

Site	Major injuries
British Coal deep coal mines	685
Licensed private deep coal mines	25
British Coal opencast mines	40
Licensed private opencast mines	5

Figures for 1989-90 are not available.

Industrial Accidents

Mr. Cryer: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many prosecutions have been undertaken for failing to report industrial accidents in each year up to and including 1990.

Mr. Nicholls: The information requested is available only for the years 1981 to 1988-89 and is given in the following table:

Prosecution action taken by HSE's factory and agricultural inspectorates and local authorities under NADOR and RIDDOR 1981 to 1988-89[1]

Date of hearing	Number of informations laid
1982	[2]30

NADOR—The Notification of Accidents and Dangerous Occurrences Regulations, 1980.
RIDDOR—The Reporting of Injuries, Diseases and Dangerous Occurrences Regulations, 1985.

Skill Centres

Mr. Cryer: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will list each of the advisers who evaluated the offers made for the Government skill centres; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Eggar: Deloitte Corporate Finance, as the Government's main sale adviser, evaluated all offers to purchase skill centres and other parts of the Skills Training Agency.

The Government Actuary's Department advised on bidders' proposals for pension arrangements to cover staff who would move out of the civil service as a result of the sale. The Government also received advice from Deloitte Haskins and Sells management consultancy division and King and Company on property issues, and from Field Fisher Waterhouse on legal matters connected with the sale.

Mr. Cryer: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will list the sites of which he is currently negotiating to sell the freehold to Astra Training Services Ltd.; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Eggar: Astra Training Services Ltd. has acquired the freehold at part or all of the following sites:

Billingham	Dundee
Durham	Hillingdon
Tyneside	Bradford
Cheshire	Hull
Manchester	Preston
Rochdale	Wigan
Birmingham	Gwent
North Staffs	West Glamorgan
Wrexham	Bristol
Gloucester	Redruth
West Sussex	Basildon
Enfield	Medway
Milton Keynes	Peterborough
Irvine

There are no further negotiations in progress on the sale of freehold sites in Astra.

Employment Training

Mr. Blair: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment when he expects the task of recontracting with training agents, training managers and managing agents to be completed.

Mr. Nicholls: Recontracting with employment training (ET) training agents, training managers and with YTS managing agents should be substantially complete by 28 May 1990.

Mr. McLeish: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what assessment he has made of the need to reduce average unit prices within employment training to a level consistent with resources available in 1990-91 and the volume requirements associated with those resources.

Mr. Nicholls [holding answer 3 May 1990]: My right hon. and learned Friend's assessment is that overall unit costs, including allowances, will be increased by 1 per cent. in 1990-91.

Mr. McLeish: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will give from the employment training budget in 1990-91 the total expenditure allocated to (a) training week delivery and (b) trainee leaving employment training for a positive outcome.

Mr. Nicholls: In 1990-91 £571 million is available for employment training (ET) programme costs. Of this about £306 million is expected to be paid to training and enterprise councils, about £31 million on the basis of positive outcomes achieved and £275 million on the basis of trainee weeks delivered.

Energy Grants

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what was the total expenditure by his Department on energy grants towards the cost of draught-proofing materials in (a) 1988-89 and (b) 1989-90.

Mr. Nicholls: The total expenditure by the Employment Department Training Agency on community insulation project energy grants towards the cost of draught-proofing materials in 1988-89 and 1989-90 was £6,237,037 and £6,234,372 respectively.

Low Pay (Prosecutions)

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment, pursuant to the answer to the hon. Member for Coventry, South-East (Mr. Nellist), 2 April, columns 460-62, how many firms were prosecuted in Wales in each of the years from 1979 for paying below wages councils minima.

Mr. Nicholls [holding answer 8 May 1990]: Two employers have been prosecuted in Wales since 1979 for paying below wages council minima—one in 1987 and one in 1988.

ENERGY

Radioactive Waste

Mr. Frank Cook: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what provisions have been made for the disposal or long-term management of (a) low-level radioactive waste, (b) intermediate-level waste and (c) high-level waste arising from contracts signed for the reprocessing of foreign spent nuclear fuel prior to 1976; and what volumes of waste will arise in each category from these contracts on the completion of reprocessing.

Mr. Baldry: Overseas reprocessing contracts signed by BNFL before 1976 did not contain options for the return of wastes arising. The latest estimates of total volumes of waste which are likely to arise from these contracts are:

	Cubic metres
High-level waste	100
Intermediate-level waste	4,000
Low-level waste	50,000

These wastes will represent only a small proportion of total wastes arising in the United Kingdom. They will be disposed of along with other United Kingdom waste but will not require extra disposal facilities to be provided here.

Mr. Frank Cook: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what provisions have been made for the disposal or long-term monitored storage of low and intermediate-level radioactive waste arising from the contracts recently signed by British Nuclear Fuels plc with electricity utilities in the Federal Republic of Germany.

Mr. Baldry: In line with all other contracts for the reprocessing of overseas spent fuel signed since 1976, the new contracts between British Nuclear Fuels plc and electricity utilities in the Federal Republic of Germany contain options for the return of wastes arising. For the Government's policy on the return of wastes, I refer the hon. Member to the reply given by my hon. Friend the Member for Eddisbury (Mr. Goodlad) to the hon. Member for Great Grimsby (Mr. Mitchell) on 2 May 1986 at columns 502-03.

Electricity Privatisation

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy on what basis James Capel advised journalists that the electricity supply industry would be sold at a value of £10 billion; and what consultations it had with him prior to these briefings.

Mr. Wakeham: James Capel did not advise journalists of the value at which the electricity industry would be sold. It is too early to estimate the likely proceeds from the sale of the companies.

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy (1) who advised him on the post-privatisation salary of the chair of the NEEB;

(2) who advised him on the post-privatisation salary of the chair of NORWEB.

Mr. Wakeham: The Government have decided that board members of the new electricity companies will not receive major increases in salaries before flotation.

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy whether he intends to retain in Government hands after flotation any of the shares in the electricity distribution and generating companies.

Mr. Wakeham: The Government will not decide for some time on the proportion of the shares to be sold in the electricity companies in England and Wales.

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what advice he received from Coopers and Lybrand on post-privatisation salaries of electricity industry chairmen and board members.

Mr. Wakeham: Board members of the new electricity companies have not and will not receive major increases in salaries before flotation.

The Government will not be responsible for salaries after flotation.

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what undertakings were given about post-privatisation salaries to any persons appointed by him as chairs or board members of any electricity company on their appointment or reappointment over the last year.

Mr. Wakeham: None.

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy for what reasons Treasury guarantees totalling £50 million were given to NORWEB.

Mr. Wakeham: To enable it to finance its operations in the most cost-effective manner possible.

Coal Equivalents

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what are the factors by which his Department multiplies oil and gas tonnages to achieve coal equivalents; and when these were last changed or modified.

Mr. Wakeham: The factors generally used to convert data on tonnages of oil and gas (including petroleum gases) to coal equivalent are 1·7 and 2, respectively. These factors, which have been widely adopted for a number of years by both national and international organisations, are based on standard thermal contents of 250 therms per tonne of coal, 425 therms per tonne of oil and 500 therms per tonne of gas. I am not aware of any reason why these factors should be changed or modified.

Power Stations

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy (1) if he will list power station developments completed since January 1970, giving for each (a) the location of the power station, (b) the generating capacity, (c) the type of generation, (d) the date of completion, (e) the main equipment suppliers and (f) the nationality of the main equipment suppliers;

(2) if he will list power station authorisations given by the Secretary of State since January 1970, giving for each (a) the location of the proposed power station, (b) the generating capacity, (c) the type of generation, (d) the date of authorisation, (e) the main equipment suppliers and (f) the nationality of the main equipment suppliers.

Mr. Wakeham [holding answer 1 May 1990]: The stations for which consents have been given for construction under section 2 of the Electric Lighting Act 1909 or section 36 of the Electricity Act 1989 since January 1970 are as listed. The completion dates of the stations which were constructed, the main equipment suppliers and the nationality of the equipment suppliers are matters for the relevant companies.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Iraq

18. Mr. Norman Hogg: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on Anglo-Iraqi relations in the light of recent developments.

Mr. Waldegrave: Despite our recent difficulties with Iraq, which have not been of our making, we continue to attach importance to our bilateral relationship. There are many issues of concern about which we need to talk to the Iraqis, not least the continued detention in Iraq of Mrs. Daphne Parish and Mr. Ian Richter. We want a frank and forthright relationship with an honest exchange of views. We do not expect to agree with Iraq on every issue, but an open dialogue is needed if we are to make progress on those issues which divide us.

Kashmir

19. Mr. Dunnachie: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations he has made to the Government of India concerning the situation in Kashmir.

35. Mr. Meale: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations he has made to the Government of India concerning the situation in Kashmir.

63. Mr. Watson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations he has made to the Indian Government concerning the situation in Kashmir.

64. Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations he has made to the Government of India concerning the situation in Kashmir.

Mr. Sainsbury: We are in regular contact with both the Indian and Pakistani Governments who are aware of our views on the current situation in Kashmir.

Soviet Jews

20. Miss Hoey: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions he has had with Soviet and Israeli officials concerning the likely place of permanent settlement of Jews emigrating from the Soviet Union.

Mr. Waldegrave: Both the Soviet and Israeli authorities are aware of our view that Soviet Jews should have the right to emigrate freely but that Israeli settlements in the occupied territories, including east Jerusalem, are illegal. We and our European partners have urged the Israeli Government not to jeopardise prospects for peace by allowing or encouraging Jewish immigrants to settle in the occupied territories.

South Africa

21. Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when he next expects to pay an official visit to South Africa to discuss United Kingdom-South Africa relations.

Mr. Waldegrave: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs has no plans for a further visit to South Africa.

25. Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when he intends to meet Mr. Nelson Mandela to discuss the Government's policy in relation to South Africa.

Mr. Waldegrave: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs expects to meet Mr. Mandela on 3-4 July to discuss how the process of peaceful change in South Africa can best be taken forward.

27. Mr. John Carlisle: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what matters will be discussed during the forthcoming visit to London by President de Klerk of South Africa.

Mr. Waldegrave: We expect to discuss with President de Klerk how the process of negotiated change in South Africa can best be taken forward, and other matters of mutual interest.

69. Mr. Pike: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent representations Her Majesty's Government have made to the President of the Republic of South Africa.

Mr. Waldegrave: We make regular representations to the South African Government on a wide range of issues.

94. Sir David Steel: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent discussions he has had with the South African Government about progress to end apartheid.

Mr. Waldegrave: I refer the right hon. Member to the reply my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs gave to the hon. Member for Southwark and Bermondsey (Mr. Hughes) on 4 April at column 1198.

Bulgaria

22. Mr. Brazier: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what progress is being made towards free and democratic elections in Bulgaria.

24. Mr. Lawrence: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what progress is being made towards free and democratic elections in Bulgaria.

Mr. Waldegrave: Elections will be held on 10 and 17 June under a democratic electoral system agreed in round table talks between the Government and the Opposition groups. We are concerned at recent reports of possible malpractice and urge all concerned to see that the electoral campaign and the actual poll are conducted with scrupulous fairness. We shall be sending a team of local government officials to observe the elections.

Antarctica

23. Mr. Maxton: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether he intends to support the Australian and French Governments' proposals for a conservation convention for Antarctica.

86. Mr. Murphy: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether he will be supporting the Australian Government and French Government proposals for a conservation convention for Antarctica.

Mr. Sainsbury: The French and Australian proposals will be a useful contribution to the discussions at the special Antarctic treaty consultative meeting to be held in November in Santiago. We are preparing our own proposals for that meeting about which we intend to consult our Antarctic treaty partners.

42. Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many countries have now ratified the convention on the regulation of Antarctic mineral resource activities; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Sainsbury: No countries have yet ratified this convention.

62. Mr. David Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations he has received in connection with the forthcoming meeting of Antarctic treaty parties to discuss protection of Antarctica; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Sainsbury: On 3 May the French ambassador and the Australian high commissioner left with us a joint Franco/Australian paper setting out their views about a possible agreement on the protection of the Antarctic environment.

76. Mr. Eadie: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions he has had with representatives of other European Community Governments concerning the forthcoming meeting of Antarctic treaty parties to discuss protection of Antarctica.

Mr. Sainsbury: Consultations at official level with representatives of EC Governments signatories to the Antarctic treaty took place in the course of the XVth Antarctic treaty consultative meeting in Paris last October. Since then there have been further bilateral consultations at official level with France and the Federal Republic of Germany. The French authorities have also informed us of their joint proposal, with the Australian Government, for a new agreement on the conservation of the Antarctic.

Lithuania

26. Mr. Salmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what further representations he has made to the Soviet Union about Lithuania.

31. Mr. Andrew Welsh: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what further representations he has made to the Soviet Union about Lithuania.

57. Mr. Barry Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions he has had with his United States counterpart regarding the United States response to recent developments in Lithuania.

93. Dr. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what correspondence there has been between his Department and his counterparts in the United States regarding the imposition of sanctions against the Soviet Union as a result of recent developments in Lithuania.

Mr. Waldegrave: We are keeping in close touch with our allies and partners, including the United States, over developments in Lithuania. This was one of the subjects discussed at the meeting held on 3 May between Foreign Ministers of the Twelve and Secretary Baker.

85. Mr. Ieuan Wyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the discussions between his Department and his counterparts in the European Council of Ministers regarding sanctions against the Soviet Union following recent developments in Lithuania.

Mr. Waldegrave: We are keeping in close touch with our partners in the Twelve over developments in Lithuania. This was among the subjects discussed at the EC Foreign Ministers' meeting held on 21 April.

Equal Opportunities

28. Ms. Short: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether he proposes to make any changes to his departmental policy in pursuance of equal opportunities; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Sainsbury: No. The FCO is fully and actively committed to being an equal opportunities employer.

Cambodia

29. Mr. Ernie Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether he will now establish an ambassador in Cambodia.

Mr. Sainsbury: No. Consideration of restoring diplomatic relations with Cambodia must await a comprehensive political settlement of the conflict there.

30. Mr. Bowis: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what talks he has held or plans to hold with the United States Secretary of State on Cambodia.

Mr. Sainsbury: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs discusses Cambodia regularly with the United States Secretary of State.

68. Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when he proposes to send a British delegation to Cambodia.

Mr. Sainsbury: Two British officials visited Cambodia in December 1989. We have no plans at the moment to send a further British delegation to Cambodia.

87. Mr. Fearn: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent talks he has had with the various factions involved in the war in Cambodia; and what was discussed.

Mr. Sainsbury: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs has had no recent talks with members of any of the Cambodian factions.

Mrs. Mahon: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will reconsider his decision not to grant a visa for a representative from Phnom Penh to visit London for a parliamentary briefing.

Mr. Sainsbury [holding answer 21 March 1990]: There has been no such decision.

Anti-semitism

32. Mrs. Golding: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on what can be done by the Government to minimise anti-semitism in eastern and central Europe.

Mr. Waldegrave: We shall continue to condemn instances of anti-semitism in central and eastern Europe. We shall also continue to press for universal respect for the rights of minorities as enshrined in the Helsinki Final Act.

73. Mr. Brandon-Bravo: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what steps he is taking to assist Governments of central and eastern Europe in their efforts to guarantee the rights of Jewish and other minority communities.

Mr. Waldegrave: We would be ready to look at any requests for assistance and advice from the Governments of central and eastern Europe in addressing these questions. We shall also continue to urge all participants in the CSCE process to uphold the commitments they have made on minority rights.

Know-how Fund

33. Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what percentage of the know-how fund is being spent on direct projects for economic development; and what percentage is being spent on funding (a) advertising and (b) consultancies.

Mrs. Chalker: The objective of the know-how funds is to help the countries of central and eastern Europe make the transition to political pluralism and, in particular, market economies. Thus the know-how funds in their entirety will contribute to social and economic development. Up to 15 per cent. of total expenditure has been on consultancy studies: negligible amounts have been spent on advertising.

Short-range Weapons

34. Mr. Boyes: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when he next intends to meet the Secretary-General of NATO to discuss short-range weapons.

72. Mr. Sean Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when he next intends to meet the Secretary-General of NATO to discuss short-range weapons.

Mr. Waldegrave: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs met the Secretary-General at the NATO Foreign Ministers' meeting in Brussels on 3 May, at which they discussed the proposals put forward by President Bush on 4 May. He expects to have further discussions with the Secretary-General and NATO colleagues at the meeting of the North Atlantic Council in Turnberry on 6 to 8 June.

Palestine-Israel Conflict

36. Mr. Cyril D. Townsend: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on Britain's contribution to finding a peaceful solution to the Palestinian-Israel conflict acceptable to the international community.

Mr. Waldegrave: We are continuing to encourage a dialogue between Israel and representative Palestinians as a first step towards a comprehensive settlement of the Arab-Israel dispute. We look to the next Israeli Government, as we do to the PLO, to play a positive and constructive part in developing such a dialogue.

54. Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment he has made of the implications for peace in the middle east of advice given by Yasser Arafat at a meeting of leaders of the Intifada held in Baghdad, to the effect that the Palestine Liberation Organisation's supporters should open fire on new Jewish immigrants.

Mr. Waldegrave: The reports of Mr. Arafat's remarks appear to derive from one newspaper article of doubtful authenticity which has been denied by the PLO. The PLO is well aware that we deplore violence from whatever quarter.

89. Mr. Nellist: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent representations he has made to the Israeli Government concerning the continued occupation of the west bank and the Gaza strip; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Waldegrave: The Israeli Government are well aware of our view that Israel should withdraw from territories occupied since 1967 as part of a comprehensive peace settlement.

90. Mr. Archer: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether he has any plans to meet representatives of the Palestine Liberation Organisation to discuss recent statements by Mr. Yasser Arafat.

Mr. Waldegrave: No. They are already well aware of our view that only peaceful dialogue, not violence, can achieve peace in the middle east.

European Community General Affairs Council

37. Mr. Battle: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what issues will be raised at the next meeting of the European Community General Affairs Council.

50. Mr. Allen McKay: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what issues he expects to be discussed at the next meeting of the European Community General Affairs Council.

Mr. Maude: The Foreign Affairs Council on 18 and 19 June is likely to discuss, among other matters, political union, preparations for the European Council meeting on 25 and 26 June, European Community/EFTA relations, European Community-Eastern Europe and European Community policy towards the Mediterranean.

45. Mr. Darling: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what was the outcome of the last meeting of the European Community General Affairs Council; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Maude: The European Community Foreign Affairs Council met in Brussels on 7 May. I represented the United Kingdom at it, and at a meeting of the European Community-Cyprus Association Council which took place subsequently.

The Council adopted decisions on the European Training Foundation and the trans-European mobility scheme for university studies (TEMPUS) to extend the amount of help given by the Community to Poland and Hungary. It invited the Commission to start negotiations with Romania on a possible trade, commercial and economic co-operation agreement. Similar agreements with Czechoslovakia, Bulgaria and the German Democratic Republic were signed. The Council also had a first discussion of possible G24 aid to Czechoslovakia, the German Democratic Republic, Bulgaria, Romania and Yugoslavia.

Ministers noted that all member states would lift their visa requirement for the German Democratic Republic, and agreed to keep their visa requirements for other eastern European countries, particularly Hungary and Czechoslovakia, under review.

The Council discussed preparations for the negotiations intended to extend the single market to EFTA countries.

Ministers discussed procedures for handling the remit from the Informal European Council on 28 April for an analysis of possible changes to the Community's institutions—"political union"—and the handling of the meeting on 17 May with the European Parliament to consider the inter-governmental conference on economic and monetary union, institutional aspects of which they also touched on briefly.

Children's Rights

38. Mr. Hood: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he has established a timetable for ratification of the United Nations convention on the rights of the child; and if he will make a statement.

59. Mr. Doran: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he has established a timetable for ratification of the United Nations convention on the rights of the child; and if he will make a statement.

74. Dr. Reid: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he has established a timetable for ratification of the United Nations convention on the rights of the child; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Sainsbury: The United Kingdom signed the United Nations convention on the rights of the child on 19 April 1990. We intend to ratify the convention as soon as possible.

European Commission

39. Mr. Eastham: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when he last met the President of the European Commission; and what matters were discussed.

Mr. Maude: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs last met M. Delors on 3 May on the occasion of the European Community Foreign Ministers meeting with United States Secretary Baker. Relations between the United States and the Community and a range of other international issues were discussed.

Baltic States

40. Mr. Hind: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he has any plans to visit Lithuania and Estonia; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Waldegrave: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs has no such plans.

91. Mr. Boswell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a further statement on the Government's policy towards the Baltic states.

Mr. Waldegrave: We have repeatedly stressed the need for progress through dialogue between the Soviet authorities and the Lithuanians, so that a settlement acceptable to both sides can be reached, enabling the Lithuanian people to decide their own future. This was the theme of my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister's message to Mrs. Prunskiene when the latter called on her at 10 Downing street this morning.

56. Mr. Anthony Coombs: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations he has received about the right to self-determination of the Baltic states.

Mr. Waldegrave: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer I gave him on 4 April at column 701.

71. Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what correspondence his Department has received on the treatment of conscripts in the Baltic states who join the Soviet Red Army.

Mr. Waldegrave: We have received a number of letters from members of the public about conscription from the Baltic states, but none about the treatment of conscripts.

Syria

41. Mr. Adley: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the current state of British-Syrian relations.

82. Mr. Robert Hicks: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether he has any proposals to re-establish diplomatic relations with Syria; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Waldegrave: We recognise that Syria is a major regional power with an important role to play in middle east issues. The continuing absence of diplomatic relations with Damascus stems from Syrian involvement in terrorist activities. A more constructive Syrian attitude to this problem and help in the release of United Kingdom hostages in Lebanon would undoubtedly have a positive effect.

United Nations Forces (Equipment)

43. Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether Her Majesty's Government will now support the United Nations Secretary-General's call for the United Nations peace-keeping forces to have a stockpile of equipment.

Mr. Sainsbury: The United Nations committee responsible reported last year that the financial case for a stockpile had not been made. We await a further report by the United Nations Secretary-General.

Overseas Students

44. Mr. Knapman: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he has any plans to extend his Department's scholarships and awards scheme for overseas students to include more students from the countries of eastern Europe.

Mr. Sainsbury: Yes. In 1989-80 the Foreign and Commonwealth Office spent £530,000 on awards for students from eastern Europe and the Soviet Union. In 1990-91 we expect to spend almost three times that amount.

Namibia

46. Mr. Riddick: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when he intends to meet the new president of Namibia; and what subjects he intends to raise.

Mr. Waldegrave: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs met President Nujoma in Windhoek in March when attending the Namibian independence celebrations. He has no present plans for a further meeting.

Hostages

47. Mr. Kilfedder: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the British hostages in the Lebanon.

Mr. Waldegrave: We are delighted that the former American hostage, Mr. Frank Reed, has confirmed that John McCarthy is alive and in reasonable condition. Mr. Reed's release indicates that Iran and Syria can, if they wish, secure the release of hostages in Lebanon. We shall persevere in our efforts to persuade them that continued holding of hostages is in nobody's interest. We believe that this is true both in Lebanon and elsewhere.

49. Mr. Ron Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many British nationals are currently held hostage in the middle east; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Waldegrave: Three British nationals are currently held hostage in the middle east. They are Mr. John McCarthy, Mr. Jack Mann and Mr. Terry Waite. We have consistently called for the release of all hostages wherever and by whomever they are being held. We will continue our vigorous efforts to this end.

Sri Lanka

48. Mr. Livsey: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what new measures Her Majesty's Government have taken and propose to take with regard to the human rights situation in Sri Lanka.

Mr. Sainsbury: We have regularly made our concerns known to the Sri Lankan Government, most recently in conjunction with our European partners on 4 April.

Anglo-French Summit

51. Mr. Butterfill: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the Anglo-French summit on 4 May.

Mr. Forman: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the Anglo-French summit on 4 May.

Mr. Maude: My right hon. Friends the Prime Minister, the Foreign Secretary and the Defence Secretary had valuable discussions with President Mitterrand, M.

Dumas and M. Chevenement, covering a wide range of issues. Both sides agreed on the importance of strengthening co-operation on defence and security matters.

Economic Refugees

52. Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what international action is being considered to deal with migration from Third-world countries of those fleeing from abject poverty.

Mr. Sainsbury: The United Kingdom will continue to support international action to stem migratory pressures at source, by working for peace and respect for human rights, and for sustainable economic development achieved through liberal trade and investment policies and targeted development aid.

Israel

53. Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent talks he has had with the Government of Israel.

Mr. Waldegrave: The Israeli Foreign Minister postponed his visit to London in April. I saw the Israeli Minister without Portfolio, Mr. Olmert, on 15 March. We look forward to close working relations with members of the new Israeli Government when it is formed.

Security and Co-operation in Europe

55. Mr. David Martin: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether a conference on security and co-operation in Europe meeting will take place in the current year.

58. Mr. Tredinnick: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether a conference on security and co-operation in Europe meeting will take place in the current year.

Mr. Waldegrave: I refer my hon. Friend to the written answer given to my hon. Friend the Member for Fylde (Mr. Jack) on 28 March at column 188.

Vietnam

60. Mr. Mullin: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when he last discussed Vietnam with the President of the United States.

Mr. Sainsbury: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs has had no recent discussions on Vietnam with the President of the United States.

We have regular contact with the United States Administration on a wide range of subjects, including Vietnamese boat people.

88. Mr. Wallace: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what information he has received from the non-governmental organisations which are involved in Vietnam about a United Kingdom aid package to that country.

Mrs. Chalker: I refer the hon. Member to the replies that I gave to the hon. Member for Southport (Mr. Fearn) on 4 April at column 704, and to the hon. Member for Monklands, West (Mr. Clarke) on 12 March at column 17.

Czechoslovakia

61. Mr. Mans: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what progress is being made towards free and democratic elections in Czechoslovakia.

80. Mr. Oppenheim: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what progress is being made towards free and democratic elections in Czechoslovakia.

84. Mr. Tim Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what progress is being made towards free and democratic elections in Czechoslovakia.

Mr. Waldegrave: Free and democratic elections are to be held on 8-9 June. We are confident that these will be conducted properly and on a genuinely pluralist basis.

German Unification

65. Mr. Wareing: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on what progress was made at the first ministerial session of the two-plus-four talks on the future of Germany.

Mr. Waldegrave: The first ministerial two-plus-four meeting on 5 May was marked by a serious and constructive approach on all sides to the task of carrying forward the external aspects of German unification. It was agreed that the agenda for subsequent two-plus-four meetings should consist of borders, politico/military issues, bearing in mind approaches for suitable security structures in Europe, Berlin, and final settlement under international law and termination of the Four Power rights and responsibilities

66. Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on recent political developments in Cyprus.

Mr. Maude: Following elections in northern Cyprus on 22 April and 6 May, we understand that United Nations officials will shortly hold consultations with the leaders of the two communities. Their aim, which we fully support, will be to promote a resumption of the intercommunal talks on the basis of Security Council resolution 649.

Ethiopia

67. Mr. Andrew F. Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement about United Kingdom relations with Ethiopia.

Mr. Waldegrave: Our contacts with the Ethiopian Government enable us to raise human rights issues, to take action to relieve famine and to urge a negotiated settlement of the long-standing civil wars in that country. My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs and I met the Ethiopian Foreign Minister in London on 4 April.

Hong Kong

70. Mr. Sumberg: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when he next intends to meet the governor of Hong Kong to discuss the provisions contained in the British Nationality (Hong Kong) Bill.

Mr. Maude: We are, of course, in close contact with the governor of Hong Kong about the provisions contained in the British Nationality (Hong Kong) Bill. My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs has no immediate plans to meet the governor. But I discussed this issue in detail with the governor during my visit to Hong Kong last month.

Mr. Speller: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will seek powers to grant internal self-government to the colony of Hong Kong within the next two years.

Mr. Maude: In practice, Hong Kong already enjoys a considerable degree of autonomy in virtually all internal matters, as well as in certain aspects of external relations. The joint declaration guarantees that Hong Kong will enjoy a high degree of autonomy when it becomes a special administrative region of the People's Republic of China in 1997.

Nuclear Non-proliferation

75. Mr. Strang: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether Her Majesty's Government intend to table any proposals to the forthcoming conference on the treaty on the non-proliferation of nuclear weapons.

Mr. Waldegrave: The main purpose of the review conference of the non-proliferation treaty is to review the operation of the treaty over the past five years. As a depository power of the treaty, the United Kingdom will make a full contribution to the discussions.

Mr. Frank Cook: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on decisions taken at the recent third preparatory committee meeting of the fourth quinquennial review conference of the nuclear non-proliferation treaty.

Mr. Waldegrave: The third preparatory committee successfully concluded arrangements for the fourth review conference of the nuclear non-proliferation treaty, which will start on 20 August.

European Union

77. Mr. Dykes: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will hold meetings with his French and German counterparts in the European Community Council of Ministers to discuss progress towards economic and monetary union as agreed at the Stuttgart declaration of 1983 and subsequent meetings of the European Council.

Mr. Maude: Yes.

79. Mr. Gill: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what consideration has been given to the future constitution of the European Parliament in the context of European political union.

Mr. Maude: As agreed at the informal European Council in Dublin on 28 April, EC Foreign Ministers will undertake a detailed examination and analysis of the need for possible treaty changes. We expect the powers of the European Parliament to be discussed in that context.

Eastern Europe (Investment)

78. Mr. Favell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what help he is giving to British companies interested in investing in eastern Europe.

Mr. Waldegrave: Investment promotion and protection agreements are in force with Poland, Hungary and Romania. Double taxation agreements have been signed or initialled with all eastern European countries. Overseas investment insurance scheme is open for applications for British firms seeking to invest in eastern Europe. Our know-how fund can meet half the cost of pre-investment studies, and the training costs of potential joint ventures in qualifying countries. British embassies and the Department of Trade and Industry offer information and advice on joint ventures and legislation.

Romania

81. Mr. Carrington: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what progress is being made towards free and fair elections in Romania.

Mr. Waldegrave: There has been some progress. The interim authorities have passed an electoral law and welcomed outside observers. But we remain concerned at the continuing allegations by some opposition parties that they are being unfairly treated during the election campaign.

83. Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent representations he has made to the Romanian Government on future progress towards full democracy.

Mr. Waldegrave: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs most recently made clear our hope to see progress towards democracy and economic freedom in Romania to the Romanian Foreign Minister, Mr. Celac, in Windhoek on 20 March.

92. Mr. Conway: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what progress is being made towards free and fair elections in Romania.

Mr. Waldegrave: There has been some progress. The interim authorities have passed an electoral law and welcomed outside observers. But we remain concerned at the continuing allegations by some opposition parties that they are being unfairly treated during the election campaign.

EC Policies

95. Mr. Knox: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what further proposals he intends to place before his European Community partners for the development of Community policies.

Mr. Maude: We will put forward a number of positive and constructive proposals in the Community over the coming months.

Parker Report

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the implications for his Department of the Parker report, "Speaking for the Future: A Review of the Requirements of Diplomacy and Commerce for Asian and African Languages and Area Studies".

Mr. Sainsbury: We welcomed the extra provision for Asian and African studies resulting from the Parker report. It has been helpful for our work in so far as we draw on institutions of higher education for expertise in language teaching and studies relevant to foreign policy issues.

British High Commission, Delhi (Sikhs)

Mr. Bernie Grant: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many Sikhs are employed by the British high commission in Delhi; how many are employed as interpreters; and what other positions they occupy.

Mr. Sainsbury: The British high commission in New Delhi does not ask for, or record, details of the religious affiliations of its locally engaged staff.

EEC Institutions (Powers)

Mr. Teddy Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent proposals he has had from the EEC about a further extension in the powers of Community institutions; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Maude: I refer my hon. Friend to the statement on 1 May by my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister reporting the discussions at the informal European Council in Dublin on 28 April.

Israel

Mr. McAvoy: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations he has made to the Government of Israel about their funding of the intrusion into the traditional Christian sector of Jerusalem; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Waldegrave: We have made clear to the Israeli Government our concern at this provocative action, and reminded them of our view that all Jewish settlements in the occupied territories, including east Jerusalem, are illegal under international law.

Vietnamese Boat People

Mr. Butler: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the current situation as regards the Vietnamese boat people in Hong Kong and the trend in arrivals.

Mr. Maude: On 27 April 1990 there were 54,587 Vietnamese boat people in Hong Kong. Out of that total, 10,910 are refugees, 8,111 have been definitively screened out as non-refugees and the remainder are awaiting or undergoing screening. The total number of arrivals in Hong Kong so far this year is 1,250, 64 per cent. less than in the corresponding period last year. Two thirds come from the south of Vietnam, a reverse of the trend in 1989 when the great majority came from the north. Sixty-five per cent. are ethnic Chinese.

Antarctic Bases

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what is the present population of each of the five British bases in Antarctica.

Mrs. Rumbold [holding answer 3 May 1990]: I have been asked to reply.

The present (overwintering) population of the British Antarctic bases are:

Halley IV—20; Halley V—10; Rothera—15; Faraday—10; Signy—15.

In addition, there are three people on the sub-Antarctic Bird island, South Georgia.

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what is his policy in respect of waste disposal from the five operating British bases in Antarctica; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Rumbold [holding answer 3 May 1990]: I have been asked to reply.

The British Antarctic survey (BAS) has always maintained stringent controls on safeguarding the Antarctic environment in the vicinity of its bases and elsewhere. These controls are currently being updated as part of BAS's current environmental management strategy and in line with recommendation XV-3 from the XVth meeting of the Antarctic treaty consultative parties, held in Paris in October 1989.

From the 1989-90 season, all new waste materials, with the exception of human waste, are being brought out of the Antarctic and as much material from earlier activities is being removed as carrying capacity allows. The British Antarctic survey has appointed an environmental officer to co-ordinate the introduction of new procedures of waste management and improve environmental management further. He will take up his appointment in June 1990.

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when the programme to remove the United Kingdom abandoned Antarctic bases is expected to be completed, pursuant to recommendation XV-2 as agreed at the meeting of the Antarctic treaty parties in Paris in October.

Mrs. Rumbold [holding answer 3 May 1990]: I have been asked to reply.

Following the 1989 autumn public expenditure statement, funding was made available to assist the British Antarctic survey to remove surplus material and stored waste from these sites. This will be achieved as fast as the limitations of the Antarctic climate and ship time and capacity allow.

As part of its current environment management policy, the British Antarctic survey is commencing a detailed review of all unused British sites to consider whether they should be maintained as emergency refuges, removed or, in a limited number of cases, maintained as historic monuments.

ENVIRONMENT

Tenants' Choice

Mrs. Gorman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make it his policy to take further powers to prevent undue pressure on tenants of a local authority in relation to their right to determine whether to transfer to alternative landlords; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Chope: My right hon. Friend has no plans to do so. Although some local authorities have sought to dissuade public sector tenants from pursuing their statutory rights under tenants' choice unbiased information and advice is already available to tenants from the Housing Corporation. Next week I will be launching a series of four explanatory videos which the corporation will be ready to show to interested tenants' groups.

Local Government Finance

Mr. Conway: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) what proportion of expenditure by Shrewsbury and Atcham and Shropshire county council will be raised by the uniform business rate; and what were the Government's original estimates if councils had kept to spending guidelines;

(2) what proportion of expenditure by Shrewsbury and Atcham and Shrophire county council will be raised by the community charge for the area; and what were the Government's original estimates if councils had kept to spending guidelines.

Mr. Chope: Business rates formed 36 per cent. and community charges 41 per cent. of the income required to finance Shrewsbury and Atcham district council's demand and its share (23 per cent.) of Shropshire county council's aggregate precepts. Had the authorities spent at the level of their standard spending assessments, the proportions would have been 38 per cent. and 37 per cent. respectively. Charge yield is gross of community charge benefits and transitional relief grant.

Mr. Ian Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what discretion is given to local authorities to vary the level of community charge in those areas where the cost of some local services is borne directly by local residents.

Mr. Chope [holding answer 23 April 1990]: Authorities have no discretion to vary the level of community charge in those areas where the cost of some local services is borne directly by local residents, but they can vary the level of charge so that their special expenses are borne only by those charge payers of the area to which the expenses relate. An authority may treat the following as its special expenses:

—the expenses of meeting a levy or special levy issued to it;

—the expenses incurred by it in performing in a part of its area a function performed elsewhere in its area by a body with power to issue a levy or special levy to it, provided that it has also resolved to treat the expenses of meeting that levy or special levy as its "special expenses";

—expenditure which it incurs in performing in a part of its area a function performed elsewhere in its area by the sub-Treasurer of the Inner Temple, the under-treasurer of the Middle Temple, a parish or community council or the chairman of a parish meeting; —expenditure relating to a property held in trust for part of its area.

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will publish details of (a) the amount of staff time and (b) the total cost of recent exercises by his Department attempting to exemplify systems of local government finance favoured by the opposition parties.

Mr. Portillo [holding answer 8 May 1990]: When hon. Members table questions asking for exemplifications of different systems of local government finance, these are provided when the costs of doing so are not disproportionate bearing in mind the normal guidelines for preparing answers to parliamentary questions.

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what proportion of local authority revenue expenditure in 1990-91 will be met by (i) central Government grant, (ii) national non-domestic rate, and (iii) poll tax expressed both in £ million and percentage terms.

Mr. Portillo [holding answer 8 May 1990]: The figures for England are:

Government grants	12,700	35
National non-domestic rate	10,400	29
Community charges	12,700	35

The above table understates central Government support, as it excludes community charge rebates, and other grants outside aggregate Exchequer finance. If these amounts are included within Government grants the figures are:

	£ million	per cent.
Government grants	19,700	48
National non-domestic rate	10,700	26
Community charges	10,400	26

Sir Richard Body: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment whether a seaman is exempt from the community charge if his period of service on board a ship is continuous for eight months or amounts to a total of eight months in a year.

Mr. Portillo: In the first instance, this is a matter for the community charges registration officer for the area in which the seaman lives. It is open to any charge payer to appeal to his local valuation and community charge tribunal against a decision by his registration officer.

Mr. Adley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list those English local authorities which have offered single household payment arrangements to householders for payment of the community charge; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Chope: My Department does not hold this information, but I understand that many local authorities are offering this arrangement.

Waste Disposal Seminar

Mr. Ieuan Wyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he or officials of his Department have been invited to participate in the seminar "Dealing with Waste: the Emerging Regulatory Framework" organised by the Centre for International Environmental Law, to be held in London on 5 June.

Mr. Trippier: Officials have received an invitation, but I regret that, owing to other commitments, it is not possible for the Department to supply a speaker on this occasion.

Council House Sales

Mrs. Gorman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what amount, in 1990 prices, was spent to promote the right to buy in England and Wales in each full year of operation.

Mr. Chope: Expenditure incurred by the Department on specific publicity to draw the attention of tenants in England and Wales to their right to buy their homes is set out in the table, at 1989-90 prices:

1980-81	1,109
1981-82	369
1982-83	121
1983-84	—
1984-85	1,710
1985-86	373
1986-87	805
1987-88	29
1989-90	—

In addition, costs have been incurred on the on-going projects of printing the booklet "Your right to buy your home", and in distributing the video "Buying your council home"; in 1989-90, these are estimated at about £66,000.

Pollution Control Regulations

Ms. Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what plans he has to introduce regulations relating to the Control of Pollution (Amendment) Act 1989; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Trippier: The Control of Pollution (Amendment) Act 1989 makes provision for the registration of carriers of controlled waste and extends the powers available to regulation authorities to deal with vehicles used in the illegal disposal of waste. The registration of carriers is closely related to the new duty of care in the Environmental Protection Bill and the 1989 amendment Act as a whole will greatly assist the deterrence, detection and prosecution of fly-tippers. It is our intention to implement all of the measures in the 1989 Act at the earliest possible date. The regulations necessary to bring the Act into force are therefore being prepared and will be issued for consultation as soon as possible.

Housing Act 1988

Mr. David Nicholson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make a statement on the implementation of the Housing Act 1988.

Mr. Michael Spicer: The Housing Act 1988 laid the foundations for a revitalised independent rented sector and enabled an expansion of housing association activity using private finance. It gave public sector tenants new opportunities to choose their landlord or become home owners, and required local authorities to make annual reports to their tenants on their housing management performance. The main effects have been as follows:

(a) there are clear indications of a revival of activity in the private rented market: some £480 million has so far been invested in rented property under the business expansion scheme, which should produce an additional 8,000 homes for letting;

(b) new grant arrangements for housing associations were introduced in April 1989. Massive increases in public funding, together with the growing use of private loan finance, should come close to doubling the annual output of new housing association homes by 1992-93;

(c) the introduction of tenants' choice has already had an important effect on local housing authorities' attitudes to, and readiness to communicate with, their tenants, and the Housing Corporation is helping many tenants' groups up and down the country to explore the new opportunities now available to them;

(d) tenants of public sector housing designed or adapted for disabled people have been able to exercise the right to buy and tenants have made good use of a new sanction against reluctant or inefficient landlords who delay sales;

(e) local authorities have used their new power to pay cash incentives to help existing tenants to buy homes of their own and so release vacancies for reletting to homeless families: 44 authorities had schemes approved in 1989-90, and in the current year 80 schemes have been approved with the potential to release 2,555 homes.

Housing Transfers

Mr. Soley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) how many tenants' choice transfers of housing stock have been agreed under the Housing Act 1989; and where they are located;

(2) how many tenants' choice transfers of housing stock have been attempted unsuccessfully under the Housing Act 1985; and where they are located;

(3) how many tenants' choice transfers of housing stock have been attempted unsuccessfully under the Housing Act 1988; and where they are located;

(4) how many tenants' choice transfers under the Housing Act 1988 are pending.

Mr. Michael Spicer: The term "tenants' choice", is used to refer only to transfers of housing stock under part IV of the Housing Act 1988, as amended by the Local Government and Housing Act 1989. One formal application has been made to acquire property under those provisions, on the Walterton and Elgin estate, Westminster. That application is still in progress.

Mr. Soley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many transfers of housing stock have been made made under the Housing Act 1985; and where they are located.

Mr. Michael Spicer: Sections 32 and 43 of the Housing Act 1985 give powers to local authorities to dispose of housing and housing land and relate to a wide range of disposals. Where a disposal takes place under a general consent, the authority is under no obligation to inform the Department that the disposal has taken place.

Among the disposals to which consent has been given under these powers are voluntary transfers by five authorities of most or all of their housing. The authorities are: Broadland district council; Chiltern district council; Newbury district council; Sevenoaks district council; and Swale borough council.

Mr. Soley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many transfers under the Housing Act 1985 are pending.

Mr. Michael Spicer: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State is currently considering six applications from local authorities to transfer tenanted housing to new landlords.

Rivers

Mr. Onslow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment whether the National Rivers Authority has told his Department which 20 rivers in England and Wales it is giving priority to investigating, in order to formulate solutions to low flows during the summer months; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Trippier: The Department would not expect to be involved in the detail of the National Rivers Authority's work on this or other of its statutory responsibilities until the authority was in a position to put forward specific proposals. I am sure, however, that the authority would be happy to provide my right hon. Friend with the information he requires.

Bench Mark Levels

Mr. Soley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he is planning to discontinue the system of revision of bench mark levels in the British Isles.

Mr. Trippier: Bench marks established by Ordnance Survey in Great Britain are maintained at predetermined levels which are dependent on the type of terrain and degree of land development. Levelling policy is kept under periodic review.

Energy Consumption

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, pursuant to the answer of 30 April, Official Report, column 383, if he will give the expenditure on energy consumption, broken down by fuel, of the buildings occupied by his Department for the latest year available.

Mr. Chope: The latest estimate of expenditure on energy for buildings occupied by my Department for 1989-90 is:

Electricity	1,593,562
Gas	831,377
Liquid Fuel	362,696
Solid Fuel	4,003

Sewage

Mr. Mans: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he has reached a decision about the scheme proposed by the North West water company to discharge sewage via a long sea outfall into the Lune deep.

Mr. Trippier: The Secretary of State has given careful consideration to the applications submitted by the then North West water authority, to the representations received and to the benefits of the proposed scheme. He has also had regard to his policy announcement on 5 March that all substantial discharges of sewage should be treated. In the light of these considerations, he has decided not to give his consent to the proposed scheme which does not incorporate treatment and where there is no guarantee that a suitable site for a treatment works will become available. Letters have gone today to the North West Water plc and to the National Rivers Authority informing them of this decision. All those who made representations about this scheme will be informed in due course.

Mr. Harris: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he has reached a decision about the scheme proposed by the South West water company to discharge sewage via a long sea outfall into the sea at Gwithian.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: The Secretary of State has given careful consideration to the applications submitted by the then South West water authority, to the representations received and to the benefits of the proposed scheme. He has also had regard to his policy announcement on 5 March that all substantial discharges of sewage should be treated. In the light of these considerations he has decided that he can give his consent to the proposed scheme on the conditions that it be modified to incorporate primary treatment and that there must be scope for the addition of secondary treatment later should this prove necessary. Letters have gone today to South West Water plc and to the National Rivers Authority informing them of this decision. All those who made representations about this scheme will be informed in due course.

Members' Tea Room

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what plans he has to ensure that the unclean areas within the Members' Tea Room are properly and urgently cleaned; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Chope [holding answer 3 May 1990]: Discussions are taking place about possible changes in the arrangements for cleaning the Members' Tea Room.

SOCIAL SECURITY

War Widows Pensions

Mr. John Garrett: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will take steps to extend the conditions for the payment of war pensions which apply to the widows of officers to the widows of other ranks.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: The basic condition for entitlement to a war widows pension, namely, that the husband's death was due to or substantially hastened by service in the armed forces, applies to the widows of officers and the widows of other ranks alike.

The hon. Member may be referring to the different provisions which apply to the widows of officers and those of other ranks if they remarry. All war widows pensions cease on remarriage and the widows of other ranks receive a gratuity equal to one year's pension. The widow of an officer does not receive a gratuity but, if she is widowed again, her war widows pension may be restored in whole or in part, subject to her other income. These long-standing provisions have been discussed with organisations representing the interests of war widows, with a view to change, but no consensus emerged on what that change should be.

Energy Consumption

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security, pursuant to the answer of 30 April. Official Report, column 419, if he will give the expenditure on energy consumption, broken down by fuel, of the buildings occupied by his Department, for the latest year available.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: The latest available figures are for the financial year 1988-89. The division of the administration of Department of Health and Social Security was not completed at that time and the figures therefore reflect the cost of consumption of both Departments.

Gas	2·78
Electricity	6·51
Solid fuel	0·27
Liquid fuel	0·41

Erythropoletic Porphyria

Mr. Ashley: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) if he has assessed the effect of erythropoletic porphyria on the mobility of children;

(2) if he will widen the criteria for mobility allowance so as to include those unable to walk in daylight because of the disorder congenital erythropoletic porphyria.

Mr. Scott [holding answers 3 May 1990]: We are aware of the recent representations made on behalf of a child suffering from this disorder. Apart from the recent extension we have made to deaf-blind people, the current criteria for award of mobility allowance do not provide for people who are able to walk but are restricted in the extent to which they can use this ability. We have no current plans to extend these criteria to meet the effects of particular disorders. I have written to the right hon. Member about the particular case which I believe underlies his concern.

WALES

Departmental Savings

Mr. Devlin: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what value for money savings have been achieved by his Department in the last year; and how much of this was as a result of advice from the Central Unit on Purchasing.

Mr. David Hunt: In the year 1989-90 the Welsh Office expenditure on purchasing totalled £155 million against which it achieved value for money savings of £14·4 million. It is not possible to attribute particular value for money savings to advice from the Central Unit on Purchasing. The role of the unit is to provide advice and guidance on best purchasing practice; it provides overall support and guidance and encourages value for money across all Departments.

Health Service, Gwynedd

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales when the Gwynedd health authority last provided his Department with strategic plans concerning Health Service provision in the Caernarfon area; and at what date he expects updated plans to be made available to him.

Mr. Grist: Gwynedd health authority submitted its last service-wide strategic plan to the Welsh Office in 1986. It is currently proposed to ask health authorities to submit their next long-term plans by December 1991.

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales whether the chairman of Gwynedd health authority has informed him as to whether revenue resources provided by the Welsh Office to that authority, are adequate for the maintenance of current standards of health care by that authority in Gwynedd; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Grist: I refer the hon. Gentleman to the reply which I gave to him on Wednesday 9 May which indicated that neither my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State nor his predecessor, my right hon. Friend the Member for Worcester (Mr. Walker), had received any recent representations from the chairman of the Gwynedd health authority concering the adequacy of that authority's current level of revenue provision.

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales whether any changes have been instituted following the report of Welsh Office consultants on the financial position of Gwynedd health authority in September 1987, concerning the budgetary control procedures of that authority; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Grist: Gwynedd health authority's budgetary control procedures, along with those of all other health authorities in Wales, were examined by the statutory auditor during the course of his 1987-88 audit round. The auditor found that the criticisms of such procedures as had been made previously by Deloitte Haskins and Sells in its 1987 report on the authority's financial position were being addressed and, in keeping remedial action under review, he did not find cause to report on progress during his 1988-89 audit round. Indeed, I would expect all of the weaknesses in the authority's control procedures that were identified in 1987 to have been remedied by now, particularly since my right hon. Friend's predecessor, my right hon. Friend the Member for Worcester (Mr. Walker) wrote to all DHA chairmen in 1989 stressing the need for strict budgetary control and received an assurance from each chairman that this need was well appreciated. However, the apparent further deterioration in Gwynedd health authority's financial position during 1989-90 suggests that action taken to date by the authority to restore budgetary control has not been sufficient. My right hon. Friend and I therefore await the findings of the further study by Coopers and Lybrand, Deloitte which has recently been commissioned by the authority together with any further reports which the statutory auditor may choose to issue during the course of his current audit round.

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will publish the names of those appointed by him to the Gwynedd health authority currently serving on that authority; and, for each member, what was the date of appointment and the date on which the appointment terminates or comes up for re-appointment.

Mr. Grist: The information requested is as follows:

	Date current appointment made	Date current appointment expires
Mrs. N. L. Edwards CBE (Chairman)	1 August 1986	31 July 1990
Dr. J. B. T. Griffiths	22 August 1986	31 July 1990
Mr. G. Hulse	19 August 1988	31 July 1992
Mr. G. W. Jones	1 August 1986	31 July 1990
Dr. J. H. Jones	1 August 1988	31 July 1992
Mr. R. H. P. Oliver	1 August 1988	31 July 1992
Lt. Col. Prescott Walker	1 August 1986	31 July 1990
Lady Jane Stanley	1 August 1986	31 July 1990
Mr. T. Thomas	19 August 1988	31 July 1992
Mrs. M. P. Wiliam	1 August 1986	31 July 1990
Mr. J. L. Williams	1 August 1988	31 July 1992

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales whether he has given the Gwynedd health authority permission to plan a reduction in services to the public during 1990-91 involving increasing hospital waiting lists; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Grist: The permission of my right hon. Friend is not required for planned changes in health services solely on the basis that they might affect hospital waiting lists.

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will publish a table showing for each of the past 10 years the expenditure funded by his Department for current account spending of Gwynedd health authority in terms of (a) current money figures and (b) constant money figures.

Mr. Grist: The information requested is shown in the table:

	Revenue charge against cash limit
	At outturn prices (£000)	At constant 1988-89 prices (£000)[1]
1979-80	23,169	43,602
1980-81	30,153	47,949
1981-82	34,023	49,277
1982-83	37,212	50,267
1983-84	39,146	50,522
1984-85	44,250	54,407
1985-86	47,794	55,775

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales whether Welsh Office approval was sought or needed by Gwynedd healh authority for the reduction in services in the Arfon area caused by the reduction of four nursing posts in the Arfon unit community service; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Grist: No approval was needed or sought.

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list, by items, the proposed annual revenue savings of the action plan proposed by Welsh Office consultants in September 1987 for cost reduction by Gwynedd health authority; and for the last recent available date what is the extent to which each of these items has been achieved or will be achieved in the financial year 1990-91.

Mr. Grist: I shall write to the hon. Gentleman and place a copy of my letter in the Library of the House.

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will take steps under the default powers of section 85 of the National Health Service Act 1977 to remove every nominated member of Gwynedd health authority from their office in favour of new appointees.

Mr. Grist: No.

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he is satisfied that the Gwynedd health authority acted within its statutory powers and responsibilities during the financial year 1989-90.

Mr. Grist: I have no reason to believe that the Gwynedd health authority did not act within its statutory powers and responsibilities, but in common with all other health authorities in Wales the authority will be subjected to an annual review of its performance in 1989-90 conducted by the executive committee of the health policy board.

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he still accepts the report of Deloitte Haskins and Sells, on the financial position of the Gwynedd health authority, as the guiding document for the financial restructuring of the Gwynedd health authority; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Grist: The action plan aimed at bringing the Gwynedd health authority back into financial balance which was drawn up by the general manager of the authority early in 1988 with the help of the management consultants, Deloitte Haskins and Sells remains the agreed strategy for the financial restructuring of the authority. However, in the light of the apparent further deterioration in its financial position, the authority, with some Welsh Office financial assistance, has re-engaged the consultants to help review the situation, to identify whatever further action is necessary to restore financial balance, and to produce a pathfinder business plan for the contractual provision of services from 1 April 1991.

District Health Authorities

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will publish a table for each of the district health authorities in Wales showing how much (a) capital work was funded from revenue and (b) revenue work was funded from capital receipts, for each of the past five years.

Mr. Grist: The information requested is set out in the following table and relates to the virement exercised by district health authorities between their discretionary capital and revenue allocations:

District Health Authority	1985-86		1986-87		1987-88		1988-89		1989-90

[1] It is not possible to identify separately, revenue work funded from capital receipts. The information provided relates to the totality of DHAs' discretionary capital allocations and receipts.

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will publish a table showing for each of the past five years the level of capital expenditure of each of the nine district health authorities in Wales.

Mr. Grist: The information requested is shown in the following table:

Cottage Hospital, Caernarfon

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales (1) what are the estimated annual savings of closing the Cottage hospital, Caernarfon; and if he will make a statement;

(2) how many minor casualty cases were treated by the Cottage hospital, Caernarfon during 1989; and what proportion of such cases (a) will be dealt with by local general practitioners, and (b) is expected to travel to Ysbyty Gwynedd in Bangor for casualty treatment, following the closure of the Cottage hospital;

(3) what was the average number of available beds and the percentage bed occupancy at the Cottage hospital, Caernarfon during 1989; and what were the assumptions made in the public consultation document on the proposed closure of that hospital, published by the Gwynedd health authority in 1987;

(4) what alternative new provision is being made at other hospitals in Caenarfon to replace facilities that have hitherto been provided at the Cottage hospital, Caernarfon.

Mr. Grist: I refer the hon. Gentleman to my reply of 9 May 1990.

Energy Consumption

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales, pursuant to his answer of 30 April, Official Report, column 427, if he will give the expenditure on energy consumption broken down by fuel, of the buildings occupied by his Department, for the latest year available.

Mr. David Hunt: Expenditure on energy consumption in buildings occupied by my Department in 1988-89 was as follows:

Electricity	367,407
Gas	88,509
Liquid fuel	24,198
Solid fuel	2,431

HOME DEPARTMENT

Prisons (Isle of Wight)

Mr. Barry Field: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what steps he will take to ensure that the recent incidents at Isle of Wight prisons will be fully investigated and the necessary steps taken to ensure the maintenance of secure conditions at Parkhurst, Albany and Camp Hill.

Mr. Mellor: All serious incidents are investigated, and steps are taken, as appropriate, to guard against a recurrence and to ensure that security at the establishment is maintained.

Probation Service

Mr. Steinberg: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is the current number of probation officers in the probation service; and what is the average number of cases an officer deals with in a year.

Mr. John Patten: The number of probation officers in post in 1988 was 6,604 (whole-time equivalents) and the average number of persons under supervision by a maingrade officer on general duties (that is, excluding community service orders) was 29 (tables 10.1 and 11.1 of "Probation Statistics, England and Wales, 1988"). In 1989, the number of probation officers was 6,750.

Dogs

Mr. Alan Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what statistics are centrally maintained on the incidence of attacks by dogs on people; and what information he has on the level of attacks and the types of breeds involved in the past decade.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: This information is not available centrally.

Immigration and Nationality Division

Mr. Soley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what was the cost of the immigration and nationality division in the years 1987 to 1989;

(2) what revenue was generated by the immigration and nationality division in the years 1987 to 1989.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: The information requested is set out in the table.

Immigration and Nationality Department expenditure and receipts

	1987-88	1988-89	1989-90
Pay running costs	42·9	49·9	57·8
Non-pay running costs	13·4	14·3	16·6
Non-running costs	4·5	4·4	5·3

Receipts	16·8	7·9	4·2
Immigration[1] (Carriers' liability) Act receipts	1·8	2·2	2·1

[1] These receipts are not appropriated-in-aid to the IND budget and Home Office vote, but are paid direct into the Consolidated Fund.

Mr. Soley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what was the financial contribution made to the immigration and nationality division by Commonwealth citizens in the years 1987 to 1989.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: This information is not readily available, and could not be obtained without disproportionate cost.

Energy Consumption

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, pursuant to his answer of 30 April, Official Report, column 400, if he will give the expenditure on energy consumption, broken down by fuel, of the buildings occupied by his Department, for the latest year available.

Mr. Waddington: The information is as follows:

Expenditure on energy consumption in 21 Home Office buildings in 1989-90

Marches and Demonstrations

Mr. Winnick: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if it is the practice for police forces to make a report to him of marches and demonstrations which have occurred in their area; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: A report from a police force to the Department about a public procession or assembly which had been held in the force area would normally be made only if one was requested by the Department.

Civil Defence

Mr. Hind: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what progress has been made by local authorities in fulfilling their civil defence obligations during the third year of the planned programme for implementation of the Civil Defence (General Local Authority Functions) Regulations 1983.

Mr. John Patten: Copies of a report on implementation of the 1983 regulations by 30 September 1989 have today been placed in the Library. The report discusses local authorities' progress in meeting their civil defence obligations since the last such report, which covered the period up to 1 October 1988.

The planned programme for implementation was introduced in 1986 to monitor local authority progress under the 1983 regulations. It provides a broad framework within which the work can be developed and enables the Government to assess whether the civil defence duties of local authorities are being adequately discharged and thus whether grant can properly be paid.

It is clear that the planned programme for implementation has been an effective means of developing the planning process. A circular is therefore being issued to local authorities today announcing the Government's decision to extend the planned programme for implementation into a sixth year covering the period from October 1991 to September 1992.

The Government will continue to monitor local authority activity and the value for money in the grant paid by calling for annual progress reports and costed programmes of work which will be the subject of individual discussion.

Manchester Prison

Sir John Wheeler: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the inquiry into the serious disturbances at Her Majesty's prison, Manchester and other establishments.

Mr. Waddington: I understand that Lord Justice Woolf envisages the inquiry falling into two parts. The first part of the inquiry will examine the facts of the disturbances and evidence will be taken in public. The second part of the inquiry will involve consideration of the wider issues which may, in Lord Justice Woolf's view, underlie the recent serious prison disturbances. Lord Justice Woolf considers that it would be helpful if he was assisted in this second part of the inquiry by Her Majesty's chief inspector of prisons, Judge Tumin, with his wide experience and independent view of prison matters. On the advice of Lord Justice Woolf and after consultation with Her Majesty's chief inspector of prisons, I have therefore decided that once the first part of Lord Justice Woolf's inquiry has been completed Judge Tumin should join with him in the second part of the inquiry.

Immigration Control (Heathrow)

Mr. Maclennan: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what reports he has received of airline passengers arriving at Heathrow being detained airside by officials of the carrying company and compelled to board departing aircraft without access to immigration officials; and if he will make a statement;

(2) what involvement immigration officials had in the refusal of entry to Tamils who arrived at Heathrow on 9 April as passengers of Egyptair and British Airways; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Lloyd [holding answer 8 May 1990]: I understand that a group of seven Sri Lankans arrived at Heathrow on 5 April on an Egyptair flight, and a further group of three on 9 April by British Airways. None of the passengers was presented at the immigration control and none was refused entry. Later inquiries established that the airlines concerned had returned the groups to Cairo and Rome respectively. It is being made clear to representatives of the two airlines that any passenger who wishes to seek entry to the United Kingdom must be presented at the immigration control on arrival.

HOUSE OF COMMONS

Energy Consumption

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Lord President of the Council, pursuant to his answer of 30 April, Official Report, column 406, if he will give the energy consumption, broken down by fuel, of the buildings occupied by the Privy Council Office for the latest year available, in kilowatt hours and therms.

Sir Geoffrey Howe: The figures given in my answer of 30 April, Official Report, column 406, represent 195,414 kWh and 9,100 therms of electricity and gas respectively.

ENERGY

Spent Nuclear Fuel

Dr. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what information he has concerning the behaviour of spent fuel and storage facility components during long-term storage programmes co-ordinated by the International Atomic Energy Agency; what information and assistance has been afforded to the BEFAST II secretariat; and what benefits to the medium and long-term financial planning of Nuclear Electric and the United Kingdom Atomic Energy Authority spent fuel management programmes will accrue from the BEFAST II programme.

Mr. Baldry: The International Atomic Energy Agency's BEFAST II programme has studied three major aspects of spent fuel storage: long-term behaviour of spent fuel in wet and dry storage; surveillance mechanisms; and the handling and transport of spent fuel after storage. The programme will not be completed until 1991.

Nuclear Electric and British Nuclear Fuels have participated in the programme and have played a key part in the working groups set up to study the problems and prepare reports. The United Kingdom Atomic Energy Authority is not directly involved. However, participation in the BEFAST II programme provides access to worldwide experience of the storage of spent oxide fuel and to related R and D activity. The knowledge acquired through this participation, supplementing the United Kingdom's own domestic expertise, should allow the longer-term spent fuel storage requirements of the United Kingdom's continuing nuclear power programme, including the Sizewell B PWR station, to be met in the most cost-effective manner.

Oil and Coal Exploration

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy (1) if his Department intends to license any explorations for (a) oil or (b) coal, in the county of Essex;

(2) when his Department last licensed trials in Essex for (a) oil and (b) coal mining;

(3) if his Department intends to license any exploratory boring for (a) oil and (b) coal measures in the areas of (i) Harwich, (ii) Weeley in the county of Essex, or (iii) along the banks of the River Lea in the vicinity of Enfield lock.

Mr. Wakeham: There are no current petroleum licences in respect of areas in the county of Essex or any area near the River Lea in the vicinity of Enfield lock and no petroleum licences have been awarded in the past 25 years in respect of these areas. The Petroleum (Production) (Landward Areas) Regulations 1984 set out the arrangements for making applications for petroleum licences.

The Coal Industry Nationalisation Act 1946 vested the ownership of almost all coal deposits in Great Britain in the British Coal Corporation. At present the corporation also has exclusive right to search and bore for coal in Great Britain and is the licensing authority.

Electrical and Gas Appliances

Mr. Speller: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy if he will take steps to require sellers of electrical or gas appliances to label each item to indicate the approximate fuel consumption or running cost.

Mr. Peter Morrison: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer given to the hon. Member for Southwark and Bermondsey (Mr. Hughes) at column 275 on 26 April 1990.

Almost all gas appliances sold in the United Kingdom are already marked with their rating (ie. the maximum rate of gas consumption) under voluntary agreements.

Energy Consumption

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy, pursuant to his answer of 30 April, Official Report, column 414, if he will give the energy consumption, broken down by fuel, of the buildings occupied by his Department for the latest year available in kilowatt hours, therms and litres.

Mr. Wakeham: In 1989-90 my Department is estimated to have consumed 3,292,605 kWh of electricity and 59,647 therms of gas. My Department has no fuel oil or electricity consumption figures for its former headquarters building as the cost of these fuels was included in the overall accommodation charge levied by the Property Services Agency.

Thermal Insulation

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy if he will give, for each type of thermal insulation measure, and each other type of energy efficiency measure, where the payback period is 10 years or less (a) the number of homes occupied by claimants of means-tested benefits which would gain from the measure, (b) the cost per home and (c) the total cost of installing the measure in all homes occupied by claimants of means-tested benefits.

Mr. Wakeham: The information requested is not available. However, surveys indicate that the proportion of households in social classes D and E where the following thermal insulation measures were appropriate which have them installed in whole or in part are:

	Per cent.
Loft insulation	83
Hot water tank jacket	90
Draughtproofing	33
Cavity wall insulation	14

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Auditors

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry whether, under the Companies Act 1989, he will refuse to grant supervisory status to any accountancy body which in the past formulated rules on professional independence but failed to offer any way of monitoring compliance with such rules.

Mr. Redwood: It is a requirement of the Act that before a supervisory body may be recognised it must appear to the Secretary of State to have adequate arrangements and resources for the effective monitoring and enforcement of compliance with its rules. The question of whether a body had such arrangements in the past is not directly relevant to that requirement.

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry (1) whether he will provide a list of all the cases which he has referred to the joint disciplinary scheme since 1979;

(2) whether he will provide a list showing the conclusions of the disciplinary hearings held by the joint disciplinary scheme as a result of his referral of the cases to the joint disciplinary scheme.

Mr. Redwood: It is for individual accountancy bodies to decide whether to refer cases made to them to the joint disciplinary scheme. Completed inquiries under the scheme are reported in the annual reports of the joint disciplinary scheme, copies of which are in the Library.

Financial Services Act

Mr. French: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many companies or firms which have ceased to be members of FIMBRA are known to have engaged in unauthorised investment business subsequently.

Mr. Redwood: I am aware of only one instance recently. The Securities and Investments Board has prime responsibility for action in relation to firms believed to be engaged in unauthorised investment business.

Mr. French: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will amend the Financial Services Act to give FIMBRA access to the client base of those companies whose licences it withdraws.

Mr. Redwood: No; FIMBRA's rules are a matter for that body, subject to meeting the provisions of schedule 2 of the Financial Services Act.

Electrical Goods (Imports)

Mr. Steinberg: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what was the amount of electrical goods imported in each of the years 1979-89 from (a) Japan, (b) Taiwan, (c) Korea and (d) Singapore.

Mr. Redwood: The figures are as follows:

United Kingdom imports of electrical goods 1979-89

	Japan £ million	Taiwan £ million	South Korea £ million	Singapore £ million
1979	88	17	5	16
1980	115	17	6	25
1981	180	21	5	30
1982	200	18	4	38
1983	310	32	7	44
1984	470	42	22	45
1985	506	46	41	46
1986	594	51	60	59
1987	694	68	99	77
1988	784	83	138	98
1989	886	108	131	142

Note: Figures relate to Division 77 of the Standard International Trade Classification (Revision 3).

Steel

Mr. Nicholas Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many tonnes of steel per man were produced in the United Kingdom in (a) 1981 and (b) 1989.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: Crude steel production per man rose from 159 tonnes in 1981 to 344 tonnes in 1989.

India and Indonesia

Mr. Colvin: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make a statement on continued Export Credits Guarantee Department cover for exports to India and Indonesia.

Mr. Redwood: ECGD is currently reviewing its policy towards those markets on which, in portfolio terms, its exposure is heavily concentrated. India and Indonesia are two such markets. The importance of these markets to United Kingdom exporters is recognised and this will be taken fully into account in the review.

Atlantic Computers Company

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry whether he will establish an inquiry into the accounting policies of Atlantic Computers Company and their implications for public accountability of public limited companies.

Mr. Redwood: No. Any such implications are primarily for the accountancy profession to address and I therefore welcome the recent decision of the research board of the Institute of Chartered Accountants in England and Wales to support a research study into accounting for the residual value of leased assets.

Thatching

Mr. Speller: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what representations he has received about the dumping in the United Kingdom from eastern Europe of combed wheat reed for thatching; and if he will make a statement on the state of the United Kingdom thatching industry at present.

Mr. Redwood: I have received no representations about the dumping of combed wheat reed. The thatching industry is a matter for my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for the Environment. I understand, however, that business is generally good, particularly because of work needed after the storms that occurred earlier this year, although there are obviously regional variations.

GATT Textile Negotiations

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will list those parts of the United Kingdom that will be visited by Ministers responsible for the general agreement on tariffs and trade negotiations prior to the textile committee meeting in June.

Mr. Redwood: Ministers in this Department responsible for the general agreement on tariffs and trade negotiations plan to visit the following parts of the United Kingdom before 12 June, the start of the next GATT textiles negotiating group meeting:

Cheltenham; Derby; Edinburgh; Kettering; Manchester; Slough; Wales; Yorkshire.

Environment

Mrs. Mahon: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he has any new proposals to encourage British industry to be environmentally friendly.

Mr. Forth: I shall continue to encourage British industry to respond positively to the challenges and opportunities presented by environmental issues.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Bulgaria

Mr. Thorne: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what plans he has to visit Bulgaria.

Mr. Hurd: I have no immediate plans to do so.

Romania

Mr. Thorne: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what plans he has to visit Romania.

Mr. Hurd: I have no immediate plans to do so.

Departmental Savings

Mr. Devlin: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what value for money savings have been achieved by (a) the diplomatic wing and (b) the Overseas Development Administration in the last year; and how much of this was as a result of advice from the Central Unit on Purchasing.

Mr. Sainsbury: A table of value for money savings made in 1989-90 by the diplomatic wing of the Foreign and Commonwealth Office has been presented to Parliament in the committee proceedings of the Foreign Affairs Committee. These savings include some made under the purchasing initiative.

Savings on the purchase of goods and services in 1989-90 were:

Diplomatic wing—£13·1 million on an expenditure of £146 million

ODA—£8·48 million on an expenditure of £121 million

It is not possible to attribute particular value for money savings to advice from the Central Unit on Purchasing. The role of the unit is to provide advice on best purchasing practice; it provides overall support and guidance and encourages value for money across all Departments.

Supply Index

Mr. Devlin: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement about his Department's decision not to participate in the Government supply index.

Mr. Sainsbury: The Foreign and Commonwealth Office considered joining the Government supply index in 1989. It was decided, at that time, that membership would not be cost effective.

This Department will look again at this question as the range of products and services covered by the index expands.

Central and Eastern Europe

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will provide updated figures on assistance to countries of central and eastern Europe from the group of 24, in similar form to the tables in his Department's supplementary memorandum submitted to the Foreign Affairs Committee, printed in HC 58-i.

Mr. Maude: The G24 countries are now considering how to extend co-ordinated assistance to the countries of central and eastern Europe in addition to Poland and Hungary. As far as G24 assistance to those two countries is concerned, the European Commission has continued to compile a "scoreboard" of contributions by participating states. This was most recently published on 24 April, and a copy is being placed in the Library of the House. This provides the most comprehensive review available of G24 aid to Poland and Hungary.

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how much emergency relief and humanitarian assistance has been provided to eastern Europe so far in the current year; how much more is promised; and from which budget the funds are drawn.

Mr. Waldegrave: In 1990, we have allocated £500,000 for a donation to the World Health Organisation's programme of aid to the Romanian health service. Details were given by my right hon. Friend the Minister for Overseas Development on 26 April, at column 283. We have also allocated a total of £223,000 for various humanitarian projects for Romania, including donations of disposable syringes, treatment in the United Kingdom for victims of the fighting and a family planning project. These allocations were from the Foreign and Commonwealth Office class II, vote 2. No further aid of this nature is planned at present.

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how much food aid has been provided to eastern Europe in 1989 and 1990; what further food aid has been promised; and from which budget the food aid is taken.

Mr. Maude: In 1989 the European Community provided £97 million of food aid to eastern Europe. Since January 1990 it has provided a further £53 million. Funding has come from the "other policies" provisions within the Community's budget and from the FEOGA guarantee fund.

No further food aid has been requested or therefore promised.

Energy Consumption

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, pursuant to his answer of 30 April, Official Report, column 405, if he will give the expenditure on energy consumption, broken down by fuel, of the buildings occupied by his Department.

Mr. Sainsbury: In the financial year 1988-89, expenditure on fuel and utilities in Foreign and Commonwealth Office buildings was:

(1) Electricity	925,600
(2) Gas	104,500
(3) Fuel oil	146,200

Overseas Development Administration expenditure was contained in our answer of 30 April, at column 405.

Endangered Species

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will give details of the current stocks of animal tusks, skins, antlers and other products held by the Hong Kong authorities arising from confiscation; and what plans are being considered for disposal of the items.

Mr. Waldegrave [holding answer 23 April 1990]: The following stocks of confiscated CITES specimens were held by the Hong Kong authorities as at 15 April 1990:

DEFENCE

Defence Procurement

Mrs. Fyfe: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what recent discussions he has had with the defence industries on future economic prospects.

Mr. Alan Clark: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Defence recently chaired a meeting of the National Defence Industries Council at which I was also present, and a number of issues were discussed. In addition, we have frequent informal contacts with the defence industry.

Mr. Thurnham: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what economies he is making in defence procurement; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Alan Clark: The Department continues to seek value for money in procurement through the increased use of competition and taut contracting. This strategy has achieved substantial savings although these cannot be precisely quantified. Chapter 3 of volume 1 of the 1990 Statement on the Defence Estimates (Cm. 1022-I) gives more information on the ways in which we seek to make our procurement activities more cost effective.

Nuclear Weapons Policy

Mr. Canavan: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what recent consideration he has given to a review of Government policy on nuclear weapons; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: We keep our policy on nuclear weapons under constant review.

Conference on Economic Development and Defence Expenditure

Dr. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what representation his Department will have at the conference on economic development and defence expenditure to be held in Sheffield on 24 May.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: I am not aware of any invitations having been issued to officials of the Ministry of Defence.

SGL Defence Ltd.

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on his contacts with SGL Defence Ltd. since 3 April.

Mr. Alan Clark: My right hon. Friend has had no such contacts.

Arms Statistics

Mr. Battle: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will publish a table in the Official Report showing, for the last five years for which data are available, in real and cash terms (a) the value of trade in arms betweeen the United Kingdom and (i) Burma, (ii) China, (iii) India, (iv) Indonesia, (v) Jordan, (vi) Malaysia, (vii) Phillipines, (viii) Sri Lanka, (ix) Thailand and (x) the Yemen Republic correlated in each year against (b) domestic United Kingdom arms production in cash and real terms and (c) United Kingdom procurement of domestically produced arms.

Mr. Alan Clark: It has been the practice of successive Administrations not to publish such detailed information for reasons of commercial confidentiality and national security. However, statistics of United Kingdom defence sales from 1984-89 by broad geographic areas are set out in volume 2 of the Statement on the Defence Estimates 1990.

Compensation (Upper Heyford)

Mr. Boswell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many households within the 83 dbn contour around RAF Upper Heyford have sold their properties to his Ministry; and what has been the total amount of compensation paid under this particular scheme.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The Ministry of Defence has completed the purchase of 15 homes within the 83db(A) noise contour at RAF Upper Heyford at a total cost of £1,966,507. A further 15 properties are subject to negotiations with the local district valuer.

Mr. Boswell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many households, around RAF Upper Heyford, have applied for injurious effects in compensation following the change of flight path; how many so far have received compensation; and what is the total amount paid out to date under this scheme.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: Claims have been submitted by 591 households seeking compensation for a depreciation in property value resulting from an increase in noise following the change in fight path on 1 June 1988. The district valuer's assessment of the basis for compensation is nearing completion but no payments have yet been made.

Mr. Boswell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many households received compensation in the vicinity of RAF Upper Heyford for injurious effects in respect of the tank squadron at RAF Upper Heyford; and what has been the total amount of compensation paid under this particular scheme.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: There is no tank squadron at RAF Upper Heyford, although armoured personnel carriers have been deployed during exercise periods. Injurious affection compensation under the Land Compensation Act 1973 relates to the adverse effect of new works.

Polish Resettlement Act 1947

Mr. Barry Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when he expects to reply to the letter from the hon. Member for Isle of Wight of 3 April on the Polish Resettlement Act 1947.

Mr. Neubert: I refer my hon. Friend to my noble Friend the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State's letter of 24 April 1990. Our researches into this complex topic are continuing, as are consultations with the other Government Departments involved. My noble Friend will write to my hon. Friend again in due course.

Tritium

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what steps his Department is taking to safeguard future sources of tritium.

Mr. Alan Clark: I refer the hon. Member to my reply to the hon. Member for Meirionnydd Nant Conwy (Dr. Thomas) on 18 January 1990 at column 421.

European Fighter Aircraft

Mr. Jack: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when he expects outstanding issues affecting the European fighter aircraft's development phase to be resolved.

Mr. Alan Clark: I have nothing to add to the statement made by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State on 8 May at columns 33-34.

Military Radar Base

Dr. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether he gave any consideration to developing the over-the-horizon military radar base site outside the United Kingdom.

Mr. Alan Clark: Among the objectives of the planned two-year trial of an over-the-horizon radar in the United Kingdom are to determine whether the system is capable of functioning satisfactorily in British latitudes and to assess whether it could constitute a worthwhile permanent addition to the United Kingdom's early warning capability. It would not be possible to achieve these objectives if the system were to be situated outside the United Kingdom.

Dr. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will publish the full list of sites considered for developing the latest over-the-horizon military radar base; and how many of these sites were located in (a) England, (b) Scotland, (c) Wales and (d) Northern Ireland.

Mr. Alan Clark: It is not the practice to reveal such details.

Dr. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether his Department has received any representations from Churches in Wales concerning the construction of a radar base in the St. David's area.

Mr. Alan Clark: My Department has received representations from the honorary secretary and the honorary treasurer of the Friends of St. David's cathedral about the proposed construction of an over-the-horizon radar transmitter at St. David's airfield.

Dr. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will publish the text of the memorandum of understanding signed by the United Kingdom and United States Governments on 20 April concerning St. David's military radar base.

Mr. Alan Clark: I shall be writing to the hon. Member on this and related issues.

Energy Consumption

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his answer of 30 April, Official Report, column 429, if he will give the expenditure on energy consumption, broken down by fuel, of the buildings occupied by his Department, for the latest year available.

Mr. Neubert: The gross expenditure (without allowing for appropriations in aid) on energy consumption in the defence estate for the financial year 1988-89, broken down by fuel, is as follows:

	£ thousands
Furnace fuel oil	31,053
Other Liquid fuels	4,762
Electricity	150,368
Gas	39,043
Solid fuel	8,165
Utilities	1,886
Total	235,277

The expenditure on energy consumption in the civil estate for the financial year 1988-89, broken down by fuel, is as follows:

	£ thousands
Liquid fuel	505
Electricity	3,537
Gas	510
Solid fuel	1
Utilities	485
Total	5,038

Iraq (Arms Sales)

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what contact he has had with Ordnance Technology Ltd. over sales of arms to Iraq; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Alan Clark: None.

SCOTLAND

Energy Consumption

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland, pursuant to his answer of 30 April, Official Report, column 453, if he will give the energy consumption, broken down by fuel, of the buildings occupied by his Department for the latest year available measuring electricity in kilowatts, gas in therms, liquid fuel in litres and solid fuel in tonnes.

Mr. Rifkind: The figures for 1989-90 are:

Electricity—25,807,925 kilowatt hours
Gas—98,215 therms
Liquid fuel—126,048 litres
Solid fuel—170 tonnes

These figures exclude prisons and the minor Scottish Departments.

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland, pursuant to his answer of 30 April, Official Report, column 453, if he will give the expenditure on energy consumption, broken down by fuel, of the buildings occupied by his Department for the latest year available.

Mr. Rifkind: The figures for 1989-90 are:

Electricity	508,977
Gas	82,576
Liquid fuel	59,290
Solid fuel	15,237

These figures exclude prisons and the minor Scottish Departments.

TRANSPORT

Manchester Ship Canal

Mr. Butler: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if, during the reconstruction of the Thelwall viaduct on the M6, he will conduct negotiations with the Manchester Ship Canal Company to suspend the tolls on the Warburton toll bridge.

Mr. Atkins: No. We expect to keep three lanes open in each direction on the M6 during construction of the new viaduct and the reconstruction of the existing structure.

"The Road User and the Law"

Mr. Rathbone: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what administrative action has so far been taken to implement the proposals contained in the White Paper "The Road User and the Law"; what remains to be done; and what timetable has been set to complete such actions.

Mr. Atkins: The extended high-risk offenders scheme will operate from 1 June. We are studying the comments made in response to consultation on retesting, prohibition and enforcement technology which cover both the legislative framework and detailed administrative arrangements of the proposals. We look forward to receiving comments on our papers on drivers' physical fitness and rehabilitation of drink-drivers by 12 June and 29 June respectively. Copies of all the consultation papers have been placed in the Library.

Discussions are continuing with the police and other interested organisations on the use of warnings, the operation of vehicle defect rectification schemes and the use of the Bail Acts. We aim to press ahead as speedily as possible to complete the development of our proposals arising from the North report.

Mr. Rathbone: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, pursuant to his reply to the hon. Member for Cheadle (Mr. Day), Official Report, 7 March, column 665, if he is now in a position to make a further statement on his intention to bring forward legislation to implement the proposals in "The Road User and the Law".

Mr. French: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what plans he has to introduce legislation based on the contents of "The Road User and the Law".

Mr. Atkins: The proposals contained in the White Paper, "The Road User and the Law", are an important part of our strategy to achieve a one third reduction in road accident casualties by the year 2000 and I intend to introduce legislation at the earliest opportunity.

Paddington to South-West Railway Services

Mr. David Nicholson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what information he has on the number of occasions in the first four months of 1990 the railway service from Paddington to the south-west has been seriously disrupted by (a) the weather, (b) flooding, (c) damage to bridges, (d) damage to cables controlling the signalling at Paddington and (e) other factors; whether he has received any request for financial assistance from British Rail with the aim of avoiding repetition of such disruption; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Freeman: I understand that railway services from Paddington to the south-west were disrupted by a number of factors on a total of seven days in the first four months of this year. These are operational matters for British Rail and my right hon. Friend has received no special request from BR for financial assistance.

Loran C Station, County Kerry

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what plans there are for the provision of a Loran C base station in County Kerry; whether its services will be available to fishermen from the United Kingdom and the Republic of Ireland; how the provision of this station will be financed; and whether any financial contribution towards this new service will be required from United Kingdom and Irish Republic fishermen.

Mr. McLoughlin: The proposals for a north-west European Loran C system currently envisage a new transmitter station in south-west Ireland, but I understand that no site has yet been chosen. The system, if established, would be available for all marine users around the British Isles. Subject to an international agreement being reached, the participating countries would share the cost of establishing and running the system. The United Kingdom's cost-sharing obligations would be a charge against the general lighthouse fund through the light duties levied on shipping, including fishing vessels liable to such dues. The financial obligations of the Republic of Ireland are a matter for the Irish Government, as also is the determination of light dues charges in the Republic.

Air Passengers

Mr. Hayward: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many United Kingdom airports with an annual throughput of over 750,000 passengers have passenger forecast levels to the year 2005 at the same or within 10 per cent. of that level forecast by the Civil Aviation Authority.

Mr. McLoughlin: Individual airports forecast their own levels of traffic, in some cases to 2005. Where forecasts are supplied to the Department, they are provided in confidence, and my hon. Friend should approach the airports themselves for information about them.

Any comparison with the CAA forecasts in CAP 548, published in January 1989, would need to take account of the variety of scenarios considered by the CAA for 2005.

King's Cross

Mr. Gerald Bowden: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list his responsibilities in relation to the development of the King's Cross railway lands.

Mr. Freeman: Apart from the general policy objective of encouraging the British Railways Board to dispose of non-operational land on a proper commercial basis, my right hon. Friend has a responsibility to consider the possible impact which the development may have on the public transport system and the adjacent trunk road.

East London Assessment Study

Mr. Sedgemore: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when he intends to publish details of his junction schemes at the Old street roundabout and in the Shoreditch one-way system arising out of his decisions on the east London assessment study.

Mr. Atkins: The Department will be discussing with the boroughs concerned a co-ordinated approach to the improvement of the inner ring road which, at the points mentioned, is not a trunk road. It is too soon to say if those discussions will lead to the publication of possible schemes.

Energy Consumption

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, pursuant to the answer of 30 April, Official Report, column 434, if he will give the expenditure on energy consumption, broken down by fuel, of the buildings occupied by his Department for the latest year available.

Mr. Atkins: Expenditure on energy consumption by the Department of Transport in 1989-90 is calculated to have been:

	£ (thousands)
Electricity	1,698
Gas	559

EDUCATION AND SCIENCE

Energy Consumption

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science, pursuant to the answer of 30 April, Official Report, column 392, if he will give the expenditure for the latest year available on energy consumption, broken down by fuel, of the buildings occupied by his Department.

Mrs. Rumbold: The information requested by the hon. Member is as follows:

Expenditure on energy consumption for calendar year 1989

Electricity	268,252
Gas	33,953
Liquid Fuel	32,473

This information relates to the Department's headquarters premises and all Her Majesty's inspectorate's local offices.

EMPLOYMENT

Youth Training

Ms. Short: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will publish details for each of the standard economic regions within Great Britain for each year from April 1986 to the most recent date, the number of contracted YTS places (a) in total and (b) contracted to schemes specifically catering for trainees with disabilities.

Mr. Nicholls: Details for each of the standard economic regions within Great Britain for each year from April 1986 to the most recent date, the number of contracted YTS places (a) in total; and (b) contracted to schemes specifically catering for trainees with disabilities are as follows:

Scotland	55,384	63,285	62,493	60,989
Northern	35,155	42,288	39,781	37,490
North West	78,406	90,069	81,112	76,962
Yorkshire and Humberside	53,592	60,987	61,469	60,197
Midlands	68,136	77,342	68,962	62,067
Wales	31,061	32,311	29,019	29,326
South West	36,427	46,363	43,397	41,282
South East	59,266	66,301	58,907	58,722
London	37,249	36,320	30,383	32,699
East Midlands and East	58,510	68,455	61,533	60,679
Great Britain	513,186	583,721	537,056	520,413

[1] To the 31 March

The figures showing the number of YTS places contracted to schemes specifically catering for trainees with disabilities are not available.

Ms. Short: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will list and make available any research on young people with disabilities and YTS undertaken or commissioned by the Manpower Services Commission, the Training Commission and the Training Agency.

Mr. Nicholls: Reports of relevant research are listed and include reports on young people with special training needs in YTS where disability issues are a major component of the research concerned. I will place copies of these documents in the Libraries of both Houses.

—Going on YTS: The recruitment of young people with disabilities;
—Note on YTS experience of young people with special training needs;
—Young people with special training needs: the survey report;
—Employer involvement in special training needs training.

Biotechnology

Mr. Ted Garrett: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he has estimated the number of new jobs that will be created by the development of biotechnology.

Mr. Nicholls: No.

Labour Statistics

Mr. Ralph Howell: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will state the total number of persons engaged in (i) agriculture, (ii) steel industry, (iii) coal mining, (iv) the car industry, (v) the electrical goods industry, (vi) local government and (vii) the National Health Service in 1979 and 1989, showing the percentage increase or decrease in each case.

Mr. Nicholls: The Department's estimates of employment are categorised according to the 1980 standard industrial classification (SIC80). This classification does not specifically identify the industries requested.

Medical and other health services (SIC80 groups 951, 952, 953 and 954) covers the National Health Service along with other employers.

Estimates for the steel industry are available only from periodic censuses of employment, the results of which are published in the Employment Gazette.

The available information is given in the table.

Employees in employment—Great Britain

Thousands (unadjusted for seasonal variation)

Industries (SIC80)	June 1979	June 1989	Change	Percentage change
Agriculture and horticulture (class 01)	339	263	−77	−22·6
Coal extraction and manufacture of solid fuels (group 111)	299	102	−198	−66·0
Manufacture of motor vehicles and parts (class 35)	464	268	−196	−42·2
Electrical and electronic engineering (class 34)	752	548	−204	−27·1
Local government service not elsewhere specified (activity 9112)	662	570	−91	−13·8
Medical and other health services (group 951, 952, 953 and 954)	1,170	1,386	216	18·5

Coal Mines (Inspectors' Visits)

Mr. Strang: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what was the number of (a) British Coal deep coal mines, (b) licensed private deep coal mines, (c) British Coal opencast mines and (d) licensed private opencast coal mines visited by Her Majesty's mines inspectors in (i) 1986-87, (ii) 1987-88, (iii) 1988-89 and (iv) 1989-90.

Mr. Nicholls: The numbers of British Coal deep coal mines in operation for the years given are 110, 94, 86 and 73 respectively. Each mine was visited by the Health and Safety Executive's inspectorate of mines.

The number of operating licensed coal mines is normally between 170 and 180 and all major sites are visited at least once a year.

The numbers of opencast coal mines in operation for the years given are 186, 194, 179 and 178 respectively. All sites would normally be visited at least once a year.

Tourism

Mr. Simon Coombs: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many United Kingdom workers in the tourism industry have been assisted by the European social fund's training programmes.

Mr. Eggar: The information requested is not available.

Training and Enterprise Councils

Mr. Blair: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment when he next expects to terminate contracts with training providers including TECs.

Mr. Eggar: Training providers are currently re-negotiating contracts with the Training Agency or with training and enterprise councils (TECs) where these are now operational. As further TECs become operational they will take over contracts with training providers in line with their approved corporate and business plans. Termination of contracts with training providers will depend on the terms of individual contracts and on operational requirements.

Sheltered Places Scheme

Sir David Steel: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will make more funds available to the sheltered place scheme to increase the number of new places on that scheme.

Mr. Eggar: An additional £4·2 million has been made available towards the cost of expenditure on sheltered employment by local authorities and voluntary bodies this year, an increase of 14 per cent. over 1989-90. I do not at present expect that it will be possible to add further resources, but I shall keep the matter under review.

Energy Consumption

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment, pursuant to the answer of 30 April, Official Report, column 448, why figures for energy consumption by unit of consumption are not available for his Department.

Mr. Nicholls: The nature of the Department of Employment group estate and the methods by which energy bills were paid is such that overall records by unit of consumption are not available. Where PSA was responsible for payment of energy bills information by unit of consumption is available. Where the Department has paid energy bills direct, only the cost element of the bill has been recorded and information by unit of consumption is not available.

Unemployed Claimants

Mr. Nellist: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will estimate for 1988 and 1989 (a) the number of claimants without paid jobs who wanted full-time jobs, (b) the number who wanted part-time jobs, (c) the number who had no preference and (d) the number who did not want a job who (i) had not looked for a job in the last week, (ii) had not looked for a job in the last four weeks, (iii) were not available for work within the next two weeks, (iv) were in categories (i) and (iii), (v) were in categories (ii) and (iii), breaking the estimates down by sex and according to whether the main reason for not seeking work in the last week was (1) looking after family/home, (2) long-term sick/disabled, (3) believed no jobs available, (4) retired, (5) temporarily sick, on holiday, awaiting results of job applications or waiting to start a job already obtained, (6) did not want/need work, (7) studying, (8) not yet started looking, (9) other reasons/no reply/not applicable and (10) all reasons.

Mr. Nicholls [holding answer 30 April 1990]: The available information is given in the tables. It is not possible to provide a reliable analysis of these figures by reason for not seeking work in the last week.

The reconciliation of the claimant count with the claimant figures obtained from the 1989 Labour Force Survey has been affected by an improvement in the design of the questionnaire and also by the change in benefit regulations for under 18 year in September 1988. As a result the reconciliations for both 1988 and 1989 have been restricted to claimants aged 18 and over to enable valid comparisons to be made between the two years.

Coal Mining (Fatal Injuries)

Mr. Strang: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what was the number of fatal injuries in (a) British Coal deep coal mines, (b) licensed private deep coal mines, (c) British Coal opencast mines and (d) licensed private opencast mines in 1989-90.

Mr. Nicholls [holding answer 4 May 1990]: This information is not yet available.

Education Business Partnerships

Mr. Paice: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what will be the total level of financial support made available by his Department for the initial funding of the local education business partnerships and the maximum receivable by each partnership.

Mr. Eggar [holding answer 8 May 1990]: I refer my hon. Friend to the announcement made by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry on 24 April 1990 at column 116.

NATIONAL FINANCE

Local Enterprise Companies

Mr. Hanley: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer whether he intends to introduce a tax relief for contributions by businesses to local enterprise companies in Scotland.

Mr. Lilley: Yes. As was foreshadowed in the Inland Revenue's Budget day press release, my right hon. Friend the Chancellor of the Exchequer is today tabling amendments to clause 68 of the Finance Bill to extend to local enterprise companies in Scotland the proposed new tax relief for business contributions to training and enterprise councils in England and Wales on the same terms and for the same period.

European Monetary System

Mr. Shore: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what swap arrangements are available to the United Kingdom from other central banks in the European monetary system; and what additional funds are available to those European monetary system members that are also members of the exchange rate mechanism.

Mr. Major [holding answer 3 May 1990]: Since 1984, a mobilisation mechanism has existed which allows EMS members to obtain dollars in exchange for the ecu provided by the European monetary co-operation fund (EMCF) against the deposit of 20 per cent. of gold and 20 per cent. of dollars in official reserves.

In addition, some credit facilities are available to EMS members. All members have access to medium-term financial support (MTFS), which is an inter-governmental facility to help member states with balance of payments difficulties, and short-term monetary support (STMS), which is a central bank facility providing support for temporary balance of payments difficulties. ERM members also have access to the very short-term financing facility (VSTF) to enable interventions to be made in Community currencies.

CIVIL SERVICE

COSH Regulations

Dr. Marek: To ask the Minister for the Civil Service, pursuant to his answer of 20 April, Official Report, column 1042-43, whether assessments under the Control of Substances Hazardous to Health Regulations have been undertaken for all workplaces used by civil servants in the Department for which he has responsibility.

Mr. Luce: With professional guidance from the civil service occupational health service, assessments are now under way in all the Cabinet Office buildings, which will concentrate particularly on areas where chemicals are used as part of the work. Staff have been encouraged to comment on anything which they regard as hazardous.

PRIME MINISTER

Edinburgh

Q53. Mr. Ron Brown: To ask the Prime Minister if she will make an official visit to Edinburgh.

The Prime Minister: I hope to visit Edinburgh shortly.

European Union

Q159. Mr. Dykes: To ask the Prime Minister if she will list her proposals for presentation to European Community Heads of Government to develop United Kingdom participation in aspects of European union.

The Prime Minister: As I made clear in the House on 1 May, we shall be putting forward a series of constructive ideas for strengthening the Community by making its institutions more effective and efficient.

West German Chancellor

Q167. Mr. Hunter: To ask the Prime Minister when she will next meet the Chancellor of West Germany; and what matters she will discuss with him.

The Prime Minister: I meet Chancellor Kohl frequently. We met at the Anglo-German summit on 30 March and at the special European Council meeting in Dublin on 28 April. I expect that there will be further contacts soon. Subjects for discussion include EC and NATO issues, east-west relations and German unification.

Engagements

Mr. Conway: To ask the Prime Minister if she will list her official engagements for Thursday 10 May.

Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Prime Minister if she will list her official engagements for Thursday 10 May.

Mr. Stern: To ask the Prime Minister if she will list her official engagements for Thursday 10 May.

The Prime Minister: This morning I presided at a meeting of the Cabinet and had meetings with ministerial colleagues and others. In addition to my duties in the House, I shall be having further meetings later today.

OVERSEAS DEVELOPMENT

Eastern Europe

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many staff of the Overseas Development Administration worked full time on matters concerning eastern Europe in each month in the current year; and how many staff worked part time on east European issues in each month.

Mrs. Chalker: The numbers of Overseas Development Administration staff who have worked full time on assistance to eastern Europe in each month of the current year are:

	Staff
January	3
February	3
March	5
April	6

The number of staff who spend some part of their time on bilateral or multilateral matters concerning eastern Europe varies greatly from day to day. It is not possible to provide a breakdown of the numbers involved in each month.

Mr. McFall: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many staff with the Overseas Development Administration have been relocated from work on development issues with the Third world to work on assistance to eastern Europe: and if they have been replaced.

Mrs. Chalker: To date, six ODA staff have been assigned to posts exclusively concerned with assistance to eastern Europe. All of them have been, or will be, replaced in their previous jobs.

Budgetary provision has been made for a further six such posts to be filled by the ODA in 1990-91.

European Bank for Reconstruction and Development

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what is the planned United Kingdom contribution to the European bank for reconstruction and development; and whether this will come from existing budgets.

Mrs. Chalker: Subject to parliamentary approval and the deposit of an instrument of ratification, it is envisaged that the United Kingdom will subscribe to 85,175 shares of the initial authorised capital stock of 1 million shares. The cost per share will be 10,000 ecu. Thirty per cent. of each shareholding would be for paid-in shares, with payment in five equal annual instalments; half of each instalment being paid in cash, and half in non-negotiable, non-interest-bearing promissory notes. On this basis, the current annual cost to the United Kingdom of taking up the full shareholding allocated would be about £19 million, depending on the sterling/ecu exchange rate at the time of payment. Provision of such sums for the years to 1993-94 will be discussed in this year's public expenditure survey.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Biotechnology

Mr. Ted Garrett: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what are the benefits to the farming, fishing and food processing industries of the development of biotechnology.

Mr. Maclean: Biotechnology offers a wide range of opportunities within the farming, fishing and food processing industries for the development of safer, more effective and less costly products and processes, for the benefit of consumers, producers and the environment generally.

British Horse Society

Mr. Bellingham: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food when he next expects to meet the president of the British Horse Society.

Mr. Maclean: The Department is regularly in touch with the British Horse Society on matters of mutual interest, but I have no immediate plans to meet its president.

Beef and Butter

Mr. Speller: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what representations he has received complaining that the distribution scheme for surplus EC beef and butter is too complex; and how long was allowed from notification date to submission of applications to become a distributor.

Mr. Curry: Since my announcement on 19 March that the EC surplus food scheme should operate for one further year, I have received two representations critical of the administrative arrangements for the operation of this scheme. Charitable and other non-profit-making organisations interested in participating in the scheme were allowed nearly seven weeks—until 4 May—in which to apply.

Mr. Speller: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many organisations have co-operated with the scheme to distribute surplus EC butter and beef in 1990 and in previous years; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Curry: Some 127 organisations were originally designated to distribute surplus EC produce during 1988 and 1989. There has been a large response to the invitation to charitable and other non-profit-making organisations to participate in the distribution during 1990. Applications are currently being considered and I will make a statement once decisions have been taken.

Energy Consumption

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food, pursuant to his answer of 30 April, Official Report, column 458, why figures for energy consumption by unit of consumption are not available for his Department.

Mr. Maclean: For the 1989-90 financial year the Department was billed for energy use by the Property Services Agency in financial terms. MAFF has some 300 properties throughout the country, many of which are shared premises without separate meters, where an agreed proportion of the energy cost is paid. The total number of energy units, even if it could be worked out in detail, could be compiled only at disproportionate cost.

Bovine Spongiform Encephalopathy

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how much he has either spent or allocated on bovine spongiform encephalopathy (a) research or (b) compensation for each year from 1985 to 1992 in the United Kingdom; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Gummer [pursuant to his reply, 30 April, 1990, column 456]: The amount given for expenditure on BSE compensation in the financial year 1989-90 was incorrect and should read £4,028,063. I should also make clear that the information provided refers to expenditure in Great Britain only.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Inward Investment

13. Mr. Michael Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement on the progress of inward investment.

Mr. Needham: The Industrial Development Board will shortly be announcing its results for 1989-90 and the inward investment achievements will show a further improvement on the very encouraging figures of the previous year.

House Prices

14. Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what was the average price of a house in the Province in each of the past three years; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: The average price of second-hand dwellings sold on the open market in the Province during 1987 was £27,750. In 1988 this rose by 7 per cent. to £29,730.

During the first three quarters of 1989 the average price was £30,840, a 3·7 per cent. increase on 1988.

The average price of new-build properties was £31,060 in 1987 and, after a 2·2 per cent. rise, £31,740 in 1988. No figure is yet available for 1989.

The lower cost of housing means that more people can buy. At a given level of income, many people in Northern Ireland can be better housed or better off than in parts of Great Britain.

Debenhams plc

16. Mr. Hague: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what financial assistance was given by his Department to Debenhams plc to assist in setting up its Belfast store; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Needham: No financial assistance was given to Debenhams plc to assist in setting up its Belfast store.

Security

17. Mr. Ron Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement about the security situation in the Province.

21. Mr. William Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement on the current security situation in Northern Ireland.

26. Mr. Kilfedder: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement about the security situation in the Province.

Mr. Brooke: Since I answered a similar question on 29 March 1990, the Chief Constable issued on 26 April a warning that PIRA was intent on a campaign of bombing and shootings. This warning was justified by the attempts to bomb police and Army bases, as well as numerous other explosions. Fortunately, vigilance prevented the serious loss of life and damage to property which would otherwise have occurred. Since 29 March there have been 10 deaths arising from the security situation in Northern Ireland. Four full-time members of the Ulster Defence Regiment and two civilians were murdered by Republican terrorists, two civilians are believed to have been murdered by so-called "Loyalists" and one member of the Regular Army was murdered by paramilitaries unknown. One civilian, since claimed as a member of IPLO on active service, was killed by the security forces.

Stevens Report

18. Mr. McAvoy: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how he intends to respond to the Stevens report.

25. Mr. Loyden: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what is his response to the Stevens report.

Mr. Ernie Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement on the Stevens inquiry.

Mr. Cope: This inquiry was commissioned by the Chief Constable of the RUC and I understand that Mr. Stevens delivered his report to him on 5 April. The Chief Constable is still considering it. It is at present too early to say what response by Government may be necessary.

Mr. Beggs: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many persons normally resident in the constituency of Antrim, East are currently being held in custody in Her Majesty's prison, Crumlin road, Belfast, and denied bail pending charges being preferred as a result of the Stevens inquiry.

Mr. Cope: I understand that two people from the constituency of Antrim, East are now in custody on remand, after being charged with offences following the investigations led by DCC Stevens. I also understand that one person currently held in custody has refused to give details of his address.

Mr. A. Cecil Walker: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many persons normally resident in the constituency of Belfast, North are currently being held in custody at Her Majesty's prison, Crumlin road, Belfast, and denied bail, pending charges being preferred as a result of the Stevens inquiry.

Mr. Cope: I understand that three people from the constituency of Belfast, North, are now in custody on remand after being charged with offences following the investigations led by DCC Stevens. I also understand that one person currently held in custody has refused to give details of his address.

Extradition

19. Mr. Hunter: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a further statement on the current arrangements with the Republic of Ireland regarding the extradition of convicted or suspected terrorists.

35. Mr. Tony Lloyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement on extradition arrangements.

39. Mr. Hanley: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he has had discussions with the Irish Government on the obstacles in Irish law to extradition from the Republic of those convicted of crimes in Northern Ireland.

Mr. Cope: I refer my hon. Friends and the hon. Member to the answer which I gave earlier today to the hon. Member for Birmingham, Erdington (Mr. Corbett).

33. Mr. Andrew F. Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will outline his policy on extradition.

Mr. Cope: We remain committed to ensuring that the arrangements between the authorities in the United Kingdom and in the Republic of Ireland for bringing fugitive offenders to justice are made fully effective. To that end, British and Irish officials have been instructed to undertake a review of the situation and report to a future meeting of the Anglo-Irish Intergovernmental Conference.

Mr. Stern: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many people wanted for questioning or trial in respect of alleged offences in Northern Ireland are currently awaiting the conclusion of extradition proceedings in the Irish Republic.

Mr. Cope: Three cases, all concerning individuals who are wanted to complete outstanding prison sentences for offences committed in Northern Ireland, are currently being actively considered by courts in the Republic of Ireland.

NHS Reform

20. Rev. Martin Smyth: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what guidance has been given to health and social service boards in the purchase of services under the proposed National Health Service reforms.

Mr. Needham: Since "Working for Patients" was published there has been a continual flow of information to boards about the purchase of services. The main guidance has been Northern Ireland working paper No. 2, a paper on purchasers and providers published last November and a paper on the operational principles of contracting published in February.

Drink-driving

22. Mr. Roger King: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement on the statistics for drinking and driving in the Province.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: In Northern Ireland there has been a downward trend over the last 10 years in road deaths due to alcohol or drugs, from 53 in 1980 to 35 in 1989.

While this trend is welcome, any death caused by drinking and driving is entirely avoidable.

We shall continue to work with the drink industry, hoteliers, publicans and club organisers in order to influence public attitudes towards the unacceptability of drinking and driving.

We each have responsibilities: as hosts to provide a range of alcohol-free drinks for our guests; as drivers to refrain from drinking and driving; as passengers to choose a non-drinking driver.

Small Businesses

23. Mr. Carrington: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many small businesses have started up in Northern Ireland over the last three years; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Needham: There is no comprehensive system of measuring small business start-ups in Northern Ireland, although there are several useful proxy indicators. One of the most widely used is the number of businesses (of all sizes) registering for VAT, of which there were an estimated 10,000 in three years ending in 1988. The figure for 1989 is not yet available.

Anglo-Irish Agreement

24. Mr. Pawsey: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement on the operation of the Anglo-Irish Agreement.

Mr. Brooke: The Government remain committed to the Anglo-Irish Agreement and the principles it embodies. However, we remain willing to examine any proposals concerning the agreement, particularly if they are likely to command widespread support.

27. Mr. Andrew MacKay: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement on his discussions with the Irish Government within the Anglo-Irish Agreement.

Mr. Brooke: The last meeting of the Intergovernmental Conference was on 19 April. Copies of the joint statement issued afterwards were placed in the Library and the Vote Office. I expect another meeting to be held within the next few weeks.

37. Mr. Flannery: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland when the next meeting of the Anglo-Irish Conference will take place.

Mr. McFall: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland when he next expects the Anglo-Irish Conference to meet.

Mr. Brooke: I expect the Intergovernmental Conference to meet in the next few weeks.

Irish Foreign Minister

28. Mr. Duffy: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland when he will next meet the Irish Foreign Minister; and what matters he proposes to discuss.

Mr. Brooke: I expect to meet the Irish Foreign Minister at an Intergovernmental Conference in the next few weeks and that we shall discuss a range of matters including the political situation in Northern Ireland, security co-operation and cross-border economic and social co-operation.

Health Expenditure

29. Mr. Andrew Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how much was spent on health per head of the population in Northern Ireland in 1989-90; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Needham: Spending on health and personal social services in Northern Ireland per head of the population in 1989-90 was about £608.

This remains substantially above levels in England and Wales and is a continued recognition of the Province's need for additional health and social services care, despite other pressures on resources.

Economy

30. Mr. Burt: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement on the state of the Northern Ireland economy.

Mr. Cope: The state of the Northern Ireland economy is reflected by a range of indicators. The latest available economic data for Northern Ireland show that compared with a year earlier the number unemployed in March 1990 has fallen by 10,600 and manufacturing output in quarter four, 1989 has risen by 7 per cent.

Education

31. Mr. Dover: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement on the progress of integration in education in Northern Ireland.

Dr. Mawhinney: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply given to the hon. Member for Nottingham, North (Mr. Allen) on 29 March, at column 310.

Capital Value Rates

32. Mr. Neil Hamilton: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he has received any representations to introduce capital value rates in Northern Ireland; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Cope: No such representations have been received.

Payments for Debt

34. Mr. Clifford Forsythe: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what plans he has to repeal the Payments for Debt Emergency Provisions Act (Northern Ireland) 1971.

Mr. Cope: There are presently no plans to repeal the Act. However, the need for the legislation is kept under review in the light of prevailing circumstances and developments.

Irish Language (Schools)

36. Mr. Beggs: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland to how many schools in Northern Ireland the Northern Ireland Curriculum Council sent consultative documents on Irish as a medium; and how many responses have been returned.

Dr. Mawhinney: Copies were sent to all grant-aided schools in Northern Ireland. The council received a total of 165 responses.

Road Deaths

38. Mr. Summerson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement on road deaths in Northern Ireland.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: Since my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State announced the road casualty reduction programme on 31 October 1989, 86 people have been killed on the roads of Northern Ireland up to the end of April 1990. This includes three people killed in the Slaght level crossing accident and compares with 98 killed in the corresponding period last year.

While this shows a significant improvement, we are still behind our target of a reduction to 140 by 31 October 1990. The Department of the Environment for Northern Ireland will continue to work closely with the other statutory and voluntary agencies in the road casualty reduction field.

The key to reducing the number of deaths is effective promotion of involvement and participation by all road users. That requires constant efforts to promote effective media coverage.

Neither advertising nor enforcement can be a full answer. We need drivers to drive skilfully and in accordance with the Highway Code even when a marked police car is not in sight.

Advertising is not available on BBC radio and television.

Death and injury is newsworthy. The news and current affairs coverage by broadcasters and journalists has contributed to the drop in deaths. I am grateful.

Mr. Boyes: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many pedestrians, drivers and passengers died in the six months from 1 November 1989 and in the six months from 1 November 1988.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: There has been a 20 per cent. fall to 76 from 94 in the numbers of deaths in these major categories since the start of the casualty reduction campaign.

Deaths	1 November—30 April
	1989-90	1988-89
Pedestrians	28	38
Drivers	31	36
Passengers	17	20
Total	76	94

The numbers of cyclist and motor cyclist fatalities have, sadly, risen.

We shall continue to pursue our objective of making Northern Ireland's roads the safest in Europe.

Belfast Stamp Office

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what were the responsibilities of his Department in the decision to transfer the stamp office for deeds from Belfast.

Mr. Cope: None.

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland (1) what consultation there was with the staff of the Belfast stamp office for registration of deeds and with the legal profession before the decision to transfer its work to Scotland and England;

(2) what is the income and expenditure of the stamp office for deeds in Belfast; if he will make a statement on its cost to the public Exchequer; and what savings he estimates arising from its closure;

(3) how many people are presently employed in the stamp office for deeds in Belfast; how many will be offered posts (a) elsewhere in Northern Ireland and (b) at the stamp offices in England and Scotland when the Belfast stamp office is closed;

(4) how long there has been a stamp office for deeds in Belfast;

(5) by what means he announced the proposed closure of the stamp office for deeds in Belfast;

(6) what arrangements are being made to acquaint the staff in the stamp office in Scotland and England with the differences in property law between Northern Ireland and elsewhere in Great Britain.

Mr. Major: I have been asked to reply.

The Board of Inland Revenue's intention to close the Belfast stamp office in 1992 was notified to the staff on Budget day; the Law Society of Northern Ireland was informed by letter. Prior consultation would have been incompatible with Budget confidentiality for my decision to abolish stamp duty on shares.

There has been a stamp office in Belfast since about 1922, but with a revenue of about £12 million and costs of about £190,000 in 1989-90, the cost of collecting stamp duty in Northern Ireland is now more than three times greater than the average cost in similar offices throughout the United Kingdom. Closure is expected to save about £160,000 a year at current prices.

The office currently employs eight staff. Apart from one person on secondment, all staff will, wherever possible, be offered jobs in line with their preferences. Any necessary guidance to staff in England and Scotland on differences between the property law of Northern Ireland and the rest of the United Kingdom will be given nearer the time of closure.

Non-denominational Nurseries

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what proposals he has for assisting non-denominational nurseries attached to schools in Northern Ireland.

Dr. Mawhinney: Given constraints on resources, I have no plans at present to grant-aid nurseries attached to integrated schools.

Ministerial Visits

Mrs. Gorman: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he has any plans to visit Portadown or Lurgan before 17 May.

Mr. Brooke: It is not the custom to give details of ministerial programmes in advance.

Electricity Privatisation

Mr. John Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what representations he has received from consumer groups in Northern Ireland about the effects of the privatisation of Northern Ireland Electricity; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Needham: The General Consumer Council for Northern Ireland has submitted the results of a survey of consumers' views on electricity privatisation. No other consumer groups have made formal representations so far, but there will be ample opportunity to do so when Government's proposals are published in a White Paper later this year.

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what discussions he has had with trade unions in Northern Ireland over the proposed privatisation of NI Electricity; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Needham: There have been several discussions between Northern Ireland Ministers and the trade unions over the past 18 months. There will be an opportunity for all interested parties to comment on the Government's proposals which it is planned to publish in a White Paper later this year. In the meantime, it is open to the trade unions to bring forward further views on the subject at any time.

Mortgage Repossessions

Mr. Mallon: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what information he has on the number of occasions dwelling houses were repossessed by building societies in Northern Ireland, due to default in mortgage payments, in each year since 1980; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: Building society repossession statistics are not available on a regional basis. National totals are published by the Council of Mortgage Lenders in its quarterly publication "Housing Finance".

Mr. Mallon: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what information he has on the number of occasions housing applications were received by the Northern Ireland Housing Executive from applicants whose homes were subject to repossession due to non-payment of mortgage levies.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: I understand from the chairman of the Northern Ireland Housing Executive that during the year ended 31 March 1990 a total of 532 applications were received from people who claimed mortgage default as their reason for needing to be rehoused.

Information is not available on the number of applicants whose homes were repossessed.

Local Government Finance

Mr. Ian Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what proportion of local government expenditure to Northern Ireland is raised from (a) domestic ratepayers, (b) business ratepayers, and (c) Government grant.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: The information sought is not available in the precise form requested because of the structure of the rating system in Northern Ireland.

Of planned gross expenditure of £177·4 million by district councils in 1990-91, it is estimated that £106·3 million or 60 per cent. will be raised from domestic and business ratepayers, £36·1 million or 20·3 per cent. from Government grants and £35·0 million or 19·7 per cent. from fees, charges and other income.

It may be noted that, in Northern Ireland, local government is not responsible for roads, education or social services.

Consultancies

Mr. Tim Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what was the total amount spent by his Department in 1989 on management and computer consultancy contracts; excluding hardware and software purchases; if he will list each management or computer consultancy contract awarded by his Department in 1989, giving in each case the name of the consultancy firm and the subject of the assignment; and what is the total amount that his Department has budgeted to spend in the current year.

Mr. Cope [holding answer 28 March 1990]: The total amount spent on management and computer consultancy by the Northern Ireland Office and Northern Ireland Departments in 1989 was £5,747,531; the amount budgeted to spend in the current year is £4,543,300; the remainder of the information is as follows:

Fish Stocks

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will, further to his answer to the hon. Member for Londonderry, East of 24 April, Official Report, columns 111-13, indicate how many of the pollution incidents referred to in each of the years 1987, 1988 and 1989 which involved sewerage and water treatment works resulted in fish kills; which lakes and rivers were affected in each year; and what was the cost to public funds of restocking each of the waters affected.

Mr. Peter Bottomley [holding answer 8 May 1990]: There were two incidents in 1987, two in 1988 and six in 1989.

In 1987 the rivers affected were the Callan and Creggan, in 1988 the Callan and Cusher, and in 1989 the Maine, Blackwater, Creggan, Quigger, Ballinderry and Cusher.

The Department of the Environment for Northern Ireland has agreed to pay £3,000 to restock the Callan, £12,000 to restock the Creggan and £100 for the Quigger.

Written Answers to Questions

Friday 11 May 1990

ENERGY

Power Cut, West London

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy if he will inquire into the circumstances which caused the power cut in west London on the morning of 8 May; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Baldry: The National Grid Company was carrying out switching operations at its St. John's Wood substation to release a circuit breaker for maintenance during the morning of 8 May, when at 0653 hours other circuit breakers operated due to some technical problem, leading to a loss of supply to London Electricity. Supplies were rapidly restored within 23 minutes.

The National Grid Company is carrying out an urgent investigation into the causes of the operation of these circuit breakers and the Department's engineering inspectorate will be inquiring into the matter as seems appropriate.

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what representations he has received regarding the power cut in west London and the substation failure at St. John's Wood in the morning of 8 May.

Mr. Baldry: No representations have been received by the Department of Energy regarding the electricity supply failure in west London during the morning of 8 May.

Chapelcross and Calder Hall Power Stations

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy (1) whether future maintenance work at Chapelcross and Calder Hall has any implications for levels of radiation exposure for workers; and if he will make a statement;

(2) what steps are being taken to reduce radiation exposure to workers at Chapelcross and Calder Hall; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Baldry: British Nuclear Fuels plc has a programme of measures designed to reduce radiation doses to workers at the Calder Hall and Chapelcross nuclear installations. The Health and Safety Executive's nuclear installations inspectorate's assessment of British Nuclear Fuel's latest long term safety reviews of the two installations requires British Nuclear Fuel to review radiation doses to its workers, to agree improvements, and to make arrangements to consider progress annually with the nuclear installations inspectorate. The nuclear installations inspectorate's assessment recognised that maintenance operations are a major contributor to radiation exposure.

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy (1) if he will list those representations he received in favour of extending the operational life of Chapelcross and Calder Hall nuclear power stations, prior to that decision being announced;

(2) if he will list those representations he has received in favour of and against extending the operational life of Chapelcross and Calder Hall nuclear power stations, subsequent to that decision being announced.

Mr. Baldry: I have received no such representations.

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy (1) what is the purpose of extending the operational life of Chapelcross and Calder Hall nuclear power stations; and if he will make a statement;

(2) what is the estimated cost of (a) a second emergency shutdown system, (b) improved seismic protection and (c) improved leak detection in respect of (a) Chapelcross and (b) Calder Hall nuclear power stations; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Baldry: This is an operational matter for British Nuclear Fuels plc.

Dounreay (Discharge)

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy if he will make a statement on the discharge of liquid sodium metal from one of the cooling circuits at Dounreay.

Mr. Baldry: This is an operational matter for the United Kingdom Atomic Energy Authority.

ATTORNEY-GENERAL

Departmental Savings

Mr. Devlin: To ask the Attorney-General what value for money savings have been achieved by the Lord Chancellor's Department in the last year; and how much of this was as a result of advice from the central unit on purchasing.

The Attorney-General: The return submitted to the central unit on purchasing for 1989-90 shows that the Lord Chancellor's Department achieved overall value for money savings of £3·9 million on the supply of goods and services. In general, it is not possible to attribute particular value for money savings to advice from the central unit on purchasing. The role of the unit is to provide advice and guidance on best purchasing practice and to encourage value for money savings across all departments.

Crown Prosecution Service

Mr. Ralph Howell: To ask the Attorney-General for each week in financial years 1987-88 and 1988-89, how many cases had to be adjourned in (a) the magistrates courts and (b) the Crown courts because the prosecution witnesses did not appear; and what those adjournments cost were in respect of (a) the Crown prosecution service, (b) defendants and (c) costs of running the courts, giving the figures in respect of (b) separately for those legally aided and those not legally aided.

The Attorney-General: The information requested about the number of cases adjourned because prosecution witnesses did not appear is not collated centrally and could only be obtained by examining many thousands of case files. Information about the cost of those adjournments to the various parties is not available. Some limited research by the Crown prosecution service and the Home Office has been carried out into the broad reasons for adjournments and the results were presented to the Home Affairs Committee during the conduct of its inquiry into the Crown prosecution service.

Mr. Ralph Howell: To ask the Attorney-General for each of the financial years since the establishment of the Crown prosecution service what was the number of occasions the Crown prosecution service had costs awarded against it; what those costs amounted to for each of those years; and what were the precise grounds on which the costs were awarded in each case.

The Attorney-General: The number of occasions an award of costs was made against the Crown prosecution service and the amounts of costs paid by the Crown prosecution service since its establishment are as follows:

Year	Number of awards	Amount paid £
1986-87	731	115,324
1987-88	950	85,586
1988-89	525	89,547
1989-90	410	163,949

These figures cover only the 31 areas of the Crown prosecution service and do not include awards of costs made in cases handled by the headquarters casework group. The number of awards made in headquarters casework is not known, but the amounts paid in respect of each financial year were:

Amount paid in headquarter cases

Year	£
1986-87	[1]
1987-88	[1]
1988-89	66,537
1989-90	78,346

[1] Reliable figures not readily available.

Information as to the precise grounds on which the costs were awarded in each case is only available on the individual case file, but an award of costs may only be made against the Crown prosecution service where a court is satisfied that costs have been incurred as a result of an unnecessary or improper act or omission by or on behalf of the service. Thus an award of costs can be made against the service for act or omissions over which it has no control.

Mr. Ralph Howell: To ask the Attorney-General what is the present day cost for the Crown prosecution service in the areas of each of the former metropolitan counties (a) at today's prices and (b) at 1986 prices.

The Attorney-General: The cost of the Crown prosecution service in 1989-90 in the areas of each of the former metropolitan counties was as follows:

Area	Cost 1989-90 prices £	1986-87 prices £
Durham-Northumbria	5,522,286	4,533,907
Greater Manchester	9,522,758	7,818,375
Merseyside	6,132,525	5,034,925
South Yorkshire	3,943,197	3,237,444
West Midlands	7,652,803	6,283,104
West Yorkshire	6,845,423	5,620,229

Legal Aid Fund

Mr. Ralph Howell: To ask the Attorney-General if he will list (a) each individual barrister and (b) each firm of solicitors who have received more than £5,000 from the legal aid fund, and the amount paid to each of those people, in each of the last five years; and if he will list each barrister who has received more than £5,000 in fees for acting on behalf of the Crown, and the individual amount paid to each of those people, in each of the last five years.

The Attorney-General: Information about the income of individuals and individual firms is not kept centrally so far as legal aid records are concerned. Payments made to individuals for services are regarded as private and confidential.

EDUCATION AND SCIENCE

School Leavers

Mr. Terry Fields: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will publish in the Official Report a table showing the destination of school leavers from 5th, lower 6th and upper 6th forms into the following categories (a) returned to school, (b) gone to further education, (c) entered employment, (d) on Government schemes and (e) unemployed for each year since 1980 and the predicted destinations of school leavers to the mid 1990s.

Mr. Alan Howarth: The most recent published information on the educational and economic activity of young people in England aged 16, 17 and 18 at the previous 31 August, from 1977-78 to 1987-88, is available in DES Statistical Bulletin 14/88 a copy of which is in the Library. An updated version is due to be published later this summer.

Recycled Paper

Ms. Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what information he has on how many Natural Environment Research Council publications were printed on 100 per cent. recycled paper in the last year.

Mr. Jackson: No Natural Environment Research Council publications were printed on 100 per cent. recycled paper in the last year: the council considers that the technology for recycling paper has not yet produced a product of sufficient quality for high definition colour printing. The NERC's "in-house" newspaper is printed on 85 per cent. recycled paper and all NERC's stationery and photocopy paper is either 100 per cent. recycled or based upon recycled paper.

Environment Protection

Ms. Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what lead he is taking to improve environment protection education and training.

Mrs. Rumbold: The national curriculum includes much that is relevant to the protection of the environment. Science includes learning about human influences on the earth such as activities which can cause pollution and changes in the biosphere, while technology includes understanding something of the environmental consequences of design and technological innovations. Geography, when it is introduced, will be a major vehicle for environmental education, including the area of environmental protection.

Provision for further and higher education, including for vocational training, is made by local education authorities or by individual institutions such as universities, polytechnics and colleges of higher education. Our education reforms are ensuring that institutions are increasingly able to respond flexibly to the retraining and updating needs of employers and their employees. In consultation with his colleagues, my right hon. Friend is considering what further action could be taken in the area of further, higher and continuing education.

British Antarctic Survey (Airstrip)

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science if the British Antarctic survey airstrip being built at Rothera point will be used for any activity other than that connected with pure science, or by an organisation which is not part of the Natural Environment Research Council; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Jackson: The Rothera airstrip, which will replace the current ice ski-way, will be used to support the scientific programme of the British Antarctic survey. This programme of fundamental investigation uses the unique natural laboratory conditions in Antarctica both to address problems of global relevance (such as ozone depletion and related atmospheric chemistry and climate history) and to improve the understanding of this least known continent.

Under the general requirements of the Antarctic treaty, the airstrip will be available for use by other Antarctic national operations, subject to specific requests, agreed in advance. It will not be available to non-governmental or commercial organisations, except in emergency where life is significantly at risk.

HOUSE OF COMMONS

Parliamentary Business

Mr. Onslow: To ask the Lord President of the Council on how many days in the present session the hon. Member for Nottingham, North (Mr. Allen) has tabled notices of motion relating to a Select Committee on Legal Affairs, the reform of House of Commons procedure, the sittings of the House, and Members' facilities; and what estimate he has made of the total cost to public funds, and the volume of newsprint, that have been involved in the printing of these motions.

Sir Geoffrey Howe: To 30 April the hon. Member for Nottingham, North (Mr. Allen) has tabled the notices of motion in question on 74 days this Session. The estimated cost of printing the 89,000 sheets of A4 paper which have been used is around £10,000.

OVERSEAS DEVELOPMENT

India

Mr. Jack: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what plans he has to use the overseas aid programme to help the Government of India solve their environmental problems.

Mrs. Chalker: In India earlier this month I offered £50 million new aid for energy efficiency projects which, by promoting the more cost-effective generation, distribution and use of power, will reduce environmentally damaging emissions. This offer reflects the high priority I attach to using our aid programme to assist India to tackle its environmental problems which can have both national and global implications. The new aid is in addition to £40 million offered, last year, for environmental projects, in particular for forestry and to develop alternatives to the use of chlorofluorocarbons (CFCs). A British aid funded study of the latter will be ready for the meeting in London in June of the parties to the Montreal protocol. Good progress is also being made with the development of a major new project for the conservation of the forests of the Western Ghats.

Common Land

Ms. Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when he now expects to announce the Government's intentions on common land legislation.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: My right hon. Friend expects to make an announcement very soon.

Landscape Change

Ms. Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment whether he will place in the Library a copy of the survey carried out by Hunting Surveys and Consultants Ltd., on landscape change and hedgerow depletion.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: A copy of the survey report was deposited in the Library in 1986.

Mid-Sussex Water (Discolouration)

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment why Mid-Sussex Water has been allowed 20 years in which to deal with the problem of discolouration of drinking water supplies; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: The undertaking the Mid-Sussex Water Company has given to my right hon. Friend under section 20 of the Water Act 1989 includes a commitment to carry out a mains refurbishment programme in priority zones over the next five years. Provisional estimates are that this will involve replacing approximately 30 km of mains and relining approximately 207 km. At the end of that period the Drinking Water inspectorate will examine with the company what more needs to be done to its distribution system. Before he accepted an undertaking from the company, my right hon. Friend satisfied himself that it is taking all appropriate steps to remedy breaches of the Water Supply (Water Quality) Regulations 1989, and that these breaches in question do not constitute a hazard to health.

Housing Grants

Mr. Soley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) which organisations previously funded by section 73 of the Housing Act 1985 have recently had their grants terminated; and on what grounds;

(2) what was the level of Department of the Environment funding of those organisations previously funded by section 73 of the Housing Act 1985 at the point of termination.

Mr. Michael Spicer [holding answer 10 May 1990]: This year we have trebled the funds available under section 73 to £2 million. Half will go to a new national advice service based on citizens' advice bureaux and involving Shelter and SHAC. The remaining £1 million goes to a total of 26 bodies providing direct assistance and practical help to single homeless people. Priority in choosing successful applications has been given to projects which will either take single homeless people off the streets or will work directly with young people and persuading them not to leave home and/or come to London.

The following organisations which received grant under section 73 in 1989-90 have submitted unsuccessful applications for funding of specific projects in 1990-91:

Bayswater Hotel Homeless Project
Birmingham Settlement, Housing Debtline
British Refugee Council
CHAR "Housing Campaign for Single People"
Central London Housing Advisory Service Ltd.
Community House Information Centre
Empty Property Unit
First Key
Homes for Homeless People
Resource Information Service
National Association for the Care and Resettlement of Offenders (NACRO)
National Association of Voluntary Hostels
National Council of One Parent Families
Specialist Information Training Resource Agency (SITRA)

These organisations received 44 per cent. of the funds granted under section 73 in 1989-90. All bodies which received funding in 1989-90 were reminded four times that existing recipients had no guarantee of continued funding.

Football Fans (Charter Trains)

Ms. Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what discussions he has had with British Rail in respect of its ability to accept charter train applications to transport football fans to Wembley and the implications for crowd control and safety; and if he will make a statement in relation to the arrangements for the FA Challenge Trophy cup final.

Mr. Moynihan: There are well established procedures for providing and policing trains to Wembley. The British Rail special trains from Manchester travelling to Wembley for the FA Cup Final will be supervised by officers of the British Transport police and as is normal the charter train, hired by the Manchester United football club, will be supervised by the club itself. No alcohol will be permitted on any of these trains. British Transport police will be on duty at Wembley Central station to supervise the arrival of the trains and their departure after the match. British Transport police and the Metropolitan police are satisfied with these arrangements.

Voluntary Groups (Doncaster)

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list the voluntary groups within the Doncaster metropolitan borough council area, that have received funding agreed by the Government and how much the Government grant was in each case.

Mr. Moynihan: In 1989-90 the voluntary groups within the Doncaster metropolitan borough council area for which funding was agreed by the Government under the urban programme, and the amounts involved in each case were as listed:

1989-90—Doncaster's inner area programme

	Capital £	Revenue £
First Interpreters	25,000	5,000
Doncaster council for voluntary services		33,900
Doncaste under-fives support programme		31,5000
Homestart		22,600
Rape Crisis		15,000
Doncaster Money Advice		15,135
Doncaster inter-agency liaison project		11,663
Punjabi community centre		15,000
Denaby community association	75,000	5,650
Additional staffing/rape crisis centre		11,060
Transport for the disabled	22,000
Manor House project	100,000	10,000

TRANSPORT

British Rail

Mr. Fearn: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he has any plans to change the circumstances in which buses may be substituted for train services on parts of British Rail's provincial network.

Mr. Freeman: No.

King's Cross

Mr. Gerald Bowden: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what discussions he has had with British Rail about the public and private investment arrangements for the King's Cross railway lands.

Mr. Freeman: None. There is no public financial investment in the King's Cross lands development.

Mr. Gerald Bowden: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what discussions he has had with British Rail about the development policy for the King's Cross railway lands.

Mr. Freeman: None.

Mr. Gerald Bowden: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what discussions he has had with British Rail about a code of compensation for local residents affected by the development of the King's Cross railway lands.

Mr. Freeman: None.

Radioactive Substances (Air Transport)

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many flights carrying radioactive fuel, spent or otherwise, occurred between Carlisle and Dounreay in 1989; what was the total of fuel transported; what was the purpose of such flights; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. McLoughlin: Spent fuel has to be transported in packages which are too heavy to be economically transported by air. The Department does not collect data of the kind requested but I understand that an average of around eight flights per year from Carlisle carry fresh fuel to Dounreay to supply the nuclear facility there.

Baggage Checks, Gatwick

Mr. Bowis: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when the thermal neutron analysis machine for the detection of explosives in passengers' baggage will be installed at Gatwick; and whether he will make a statement.

Mr. McLoughlin: A thermal neutron analysis machine made by Science Applications International Corporation of Santa Clara, California will be installed at Gatwick over the next few days for a one year trial. The machine has been lent to the Department by the United States Federal Aviation Administration. I am pleased that we are able to carry out a one-year trial of this explosives detection machine. We have taken many initiatives to improve the security of air travel in the past 16 months and we are exploring new techniques for explosive detection. I am grateful to Mr. Samuel Skinner, the United States Secretary for Transportation, and to the Federal Aviation Administration for offering to let us try one of their first thermal neutron analysis machines in the United Kingdom so that we can see at first hand how effective it is.

I am also grateful to British Airports Authority for agreeing to install the machine at Gatwick and for making the necessary arrangements with the manufacturers. I shall watch the progress of the trial with great interest, but of course I cannot say at this stage whether we shall require the use of such machines at our airports in future as part of the national programme of aviation security measures.

NATIONAL FINANCE

Friendly Societies

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many friendly societies are currently registered as having their headquarters in Wales.

Mr. Ryder: There are six friendly societies registered as having their registered office in Wales.

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many friendly societies there are currently registered with the registrar of friendly societies; and what is the corresponding figure 10 years previously.

Mr. Ryder: There are 474 friendly societies currently registered. The corresponding figure on 31 December 1979 was 519 societies.

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what was the asset value of those friendly societies which became defunct during the past 10 years; and in what ways those assets were dissipated.

Mr. Ryder: In the 10 years 1980 to 1989 the number of friendly societies (excluding branches of orders) removed from the register following dissolution, cancellation or winding up, totalled 182. The aggregate assets of those societies and method of dissipation are not readily available. In general the assets after meeting all liabilities would have been distributed to the members on an equitable basis determined by an actuary.

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is the total cost of running the department of the registrar of friendly societies; and how many employees there are in this department.

Mr. Ryder: Details of the cost of running the department of the registrar of friendly societies are given on pages 52-54 of Supply Estimates 1990-91, class XVIII, a copy of which is available in the Library.

One hundred and forty staff are employed in the department, half of whom are engaged on Building Society Commission work. The remaining 70 employees are engaged in work connected with the 16,500 mutual organisations, 468 of which are friendly societies.

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many persons are employed in the office of the registrar for friendly societies for Scotland; and what is the annual cost of running this office.

Mr. Ryder: Three and a half persons are employed in the registry of friendly societies (Scotland). The cost of running this office in 1990-91 is expected to be about £55,000.

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many friendly societies are registered with their headquarters in Scotland.

Mr. Ryder: There are currently 85 friendly societies on the register in Scotland.

Mortgage Tax Relief

Mr. Wells: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is the amount of tax revenue forgone because of the payment of mortgage interest relief at the higher rate of income tax in the financial years 1988-89 and 1989-90.

Mr. Lilley: The cost of mortgage relief at excess over the basic rate of income tax is provisionally estimated at £310 million in 1988-89 and £430 million in 1989-90.

Income Tax

Mr. Tim Smith: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer on what legal authority the Inland Revenue has sent to married women a tax return seeking details of their income for the year ended 5 April 1990.

Mr. Lilley [holding answer 26 April 1990]: Some married women are being sent special forms this year which ask for details of their income for 1989-90. As Inland Revenue booklet IR83 "Independent Taxation—A guide for tax practitioners" explains, this is a transitional arrangement designed to help with the introduction of independent taxation. The forms will give a married women's own tax office information it needs to calculate the correct amount of tax she must pay in 1990-91—in particular where income arising in 1989-90 is assessable on her for 1990-91. The forms also enable married women to claim the allowances due to them for 1990-91.

These special forms are a request for information rather than a normal statutory tax return. There is no penalty for non-completion. Nevertheless, I hope that any married woman who has received one will complete it and send it to her tax office as that will help to ensure that the transition to independent taxation goes as smoothly as possible.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Peru

Mr. Dunnachie: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what steps he intends to take to encourage the Government of Peru to take action to bring to an end the attacks being made upon human rights workers and organisations.

Mr. Sainsbury: We frequently raise with the Peruvian Government individual cases involving alleged human rights abuses. We are considering with our European partners what further action we may usefully take.

Hong Kong

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when the reservation on behalf of Hong Kong's ivory stock is due to expire; and whether it will be extended.

Mr. Maude: The six-month reservation entered by the United Kingdom on Hong Kong's behalf will be withdrawn on 18 July 1990. The reservation will not be extended.

Falkland Islands

Mr. Kirkhope: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what reports he has received about the illex fishing season in Falkland Islands waters.

Mr. Sainsbury: I am informed that, after analysis of all available biological and commercial data, the Falkland Islands Government decided to close the fishery for illex squid on 10 May, three weeks early. I understand that this was necessary to meet their scientifically determined conservation goals. This should ensure that sufficient breeding stocks survive for future seasons. Effective conservation is the first priority for the management of the Falkland Islands interim conservation and management zone.

Hazardous Wastes

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what arrangements exist respectively in (a) the Crown Territories of Hong Kong, (b) the Falkland Islands, (c) Belize and (d) Gibraltar for the disposal of (i) hazardous and toxic wastes and (ii) radioactive wastes from medical or industrial uses; and what is the relationship between these arrangements and the environmental standards applying in the United Kingdom.

Mr. Waldegrave [holding answer 1 May 1990]: In Hong Kong toxic and hazardous wastes are disposed of together as landfill. Medical or industrial radioactive wastes are either stored, returned to suppliers, or disposed of under the Hong Kong radiation ordinance.

So far as we know, there is no radioactive waste in the Falkland Islands, neither is hazardous nor toxic waste produced there.

Belize is an independent country. Its civilian disposal policies are a matter for the Belize Government.

Gibraltar produces no medical or industrial radioactive waste, and very little hazardous or toxic waste. When required, however, advice about the disposal is sought from the Department of the Environment.

At United Kingdom establishments in these territories, and in Belize, hazardous, toxic and radioactive wastes are either disposed of in accordance with local regulations, or returned to the United Kingdom for disposal.

There is no direct link between methods of disposal and United Kingdom environmental standards.

SCOTLAND

Lochinver Harbour

Mr. Maclennan: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when he anticipates responding to the application submitted by Highland regional council for grant aid to enable the development of Lochinver harbour.

Mr. Lang [holding answer 4 May 1990]: Consideration of this application is now well advanced and I hope that it will be possible to announce a decision shortly.

Loft Insulation

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what was the total expenditure by his Department on grants towards the cost of loft insulation under the homes insulation scheme for (a) 1988-89 and (b) 1989-90.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton [holding answer 4 May 1990]: The total expenditure through specific grants made to local authorities under the homes insulation scheme for 1988-89 and 1989-90 was £0·929 million and £0·368 million respectively. This scheme covers the costs of loft, tank and pipe insulation work and it is not possible to identify a figure for loft insulation alone.

SOCIAL SECURITY

Housing Benefit (Students)

Mr. Dewar: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) what was the cost of paying housing benefit to students in Scotland in the latest year for which figures are available;

(2) how many students in Scotland currently receive housing benefit.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: Estimates of the numbers of students receiving housing benefit and of the level of expenditure are made on a Great Britain basis and no disaggregation for individual countries is possible. I regret that it is not, therefore, possible to provide information in the form requested.

Community Care Grant

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security when he proposes to respond to the request by Clwyd county council for community care grants to those not on income support and affected by the north Wales sea floods; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Scott: I wrote to the chief executive of Clwyd on 7 March explaining the help available under the social fund scheme and, in particular, that community care grants are intended to help people re-establish themselves in the community. I will be replying to his further letter shortly. I also explained that our policy of restricting eligibility to the grants to those receiving income support was to target resources on those most in need.

HEALTH

Hospital Beds

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what was the total of hospital beds in each of the past five years within the constituency of Richmond and Barnes.

Mr. Dorrell: Information about hospital beds is collected centrally by district health authority, and is not available for individual parliamentary constituencies. The figures for Richmond, Twickenham and Roehampton health authority are given in the table. The recent fall is due to the closure of St. John's hospital in Twickenham.

Food Poisoning

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what are the latest figures published for the incidence of salmonella food poisoning of all types; and what is the year on year percentage change for each type.

Mr. Dorrell: The latest figures for England and Wales published for the incidence of salmonella infection of all types appear in the PHLS-SVS Update on Salmonella Infection, Edition 3, April 1990 copies of which are available in the Library. These show that there were 3,768 human isolations of salmonella (all serotypes) in the first quarter of 1990; the comparable figure for 1989 is 3,946.

There are over 2,200 serotypes of salmonella. Each year in England and Wales about 200 of these different serotypes are isolated from humans. The information requested is given in the table for the 10 most prevalent serotypes in each of the years 1987, 1988 and 1989. The remaining serotypes are isolated in small numbers only and have a negligible contribution to the burden of food poisoning in this country.

Accident and Emergency Units

Mrs. Gordon: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what is the number of hospital accident and emergency units planned to be closed during 1990;

(2) how many hospital accident and emergency units have been closed in the last three years in England and Wales.

Mr. Dorrell: The information requested is not collected centrally. Information relating to Wales is the responsibility of my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Wales.

Dental Checks

Mr. Hayward: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what are the latest figures for the change in dental check-ups since the introduction of charges and prior to charges.

Mr. Dorrell: For England and Wales the total number of dental examinations for which fees were scheduled for payment by the Dental Practice Board was 30·5 million in 1989 by comparison with 31·2 million in 1988.

Eye Tests

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will give details of the wording of the questions asked in the survey of eye tests conducted by NOP on behalf of the Government.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: The wording of the questions in the NOP sight test volume survey is as follows:

Question 1. "Have you had your eye sight tested at an opticians—not at a hospital and not at your own doctor's—since Christmas?" If yes,

Question 2. "Was this an NHS sight test or did you pay for a private sight test?"

In framing these questions, the Department took professional advice from NOP's market researchers.

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will give details of the publicity campaign on entitlement to free National Health Service eye tests which his Department intend to launch, the launch date, duration and cost of the campaign.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: Arrangements will be finalised after we have received the results of the NOP survey on sight test demand.

Renown Management Initiative

Mr. Atkinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement of progress on the Renown management initiative.

Mr. Dorrell: We are now more than half way to fulfilling the Government's White Paper commitment announced in January 1989, to have all the larger acute hospitals in the resource management programme by the end of financial year 1991-92. In March 1989 we announced the names of the first 50 hospitals in England to join the programme. The names of 50 more hospitals to join the programme in this financial year were announced in Janaury. These 100 hospitals with the initial six pilot sites were joined by a further 30 announced on 2 May by my hon. Friend the then Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State. In this financial year the Government have made available an additional £78 million for resource management.

Stillbirths

Miss Emma Nicholson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what proportion of births in hospitals have been stillborn in each of the last 10 years.

Mr. Dorrell: The percentage of births in hospitals in England and Wales which have been stillborn over the last 10 years are as follows:

Year	Stillbirths as a percentage of all births in hospital
1978	0·84

Lottery Tickets

Mr. Teddy Taylor: To ask the Prime Minister if she will raise at the next meeting of the European Council the practice of West German state and institutional lottery organisations of sending lottery tickets to United Kingdom citizens in breach of United Kingdom law; and if she will make a statement.

The Prime Minister: No. As my right hon. Friend the Minister of State at the Home Office explained to my hon. Friend on 8 May at column 30, the measures which we are taking to curtail the postal promotion here of lotteries based in the Federal Republic of Germany contrary to the Lotteries and Amusements Act 1976 already include bilateral exchanges with relevant authorities in the Federal Republic.

Conference on Security and Co-operation

Dr. Thomas: To ask the Prime Minister what measures Her Majesty's Government propose to place on the agenda at the forthcoming conference on security and co-operation in Europe.

The Prime Minister: Her Majesty's Government want the CSCE summit to be linked to signature of a CFE agreement and to explore the way ahead on arms control in Europe, to establish conciliation machinery within CSCE, to reaffirm the Helsinki Final Act's commitments on frontiers, to enshrine the principles of democracy and the rule of law, to encourage market-oriented economic reforms and to intensify political consultation among the 35 participants.

Nautical Archaeology

Mr. Onslow: To ask the Prime Minister when she expects that Ministers will be able to consider a collective response to the recommendations of the joint nautical archaeology committee; and if she will make a statement.

The Prime Minister: Good progress is being made and Ministers expect to be reaching conclusions during the course of the summer.

Voluntary Bodies

Mr. Hayes: To ask the Prime Minister if she will list the total amount paid in grants by Government Departments to voluntary bodies during the financial year 1988-89; and if she will make a statement.

The Prime Minister: Government funding to voluntary organisations in 1988-89 amounted to £2·1 billion. Of this,

£1,075 million was payments to housing associations; £510 million was payments under a variety of employment programmes; and £344 million went to support the provision of services and a wide range of activities and projects by a variety of voluntary organisations. The amount spent under individual departmental programmes is as follows:

—Housing associations and societies	69,040,000
—Sports Council for Wales	1,184,977
Grand total	2,065,800,448

Direct grants, other than those under employment programmes and to housing associations and societies, have increased by 17·5 per cent. over the level of provision in 1987-88. In the period between 1979-80 and 1988-89 the level of this Government support for voluntary bodies has risen by 110 per cent. in real terms.

I am placing in the Library of the House a list of voluntary bodies funded by Government in 1988-89, other than those funded under employment and housing programmes and the urban programme or via non-departmental public bodies.

Energy Consumption

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Prime Minister if she will give the energy consumption, broken down by fuel, of the buildings occupied by the Cabinet Office for the latest year available in units of consumption, kilowatt hours, therms and litres.

The Prime Minister [holding answer 10 May 1990]: Comprehensive energy consumption figures in the form requested by the hon. Member for each of the buildings occupied by the Cabinet Office are not available.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

EC Import Bans

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry on how many occasions in each of the last five years article 36 has been used by other European Community states, and by which countries, to ban imports from the United Kingdom.

Mr. Redwood: This information is not available. There is no general requirement under the treaty of Rome for EC member states to notify the European Commission of prohibitions or restrictions on imports justified on the grounds specified in article 36 of the treaty of Rome. Prohibitions or restrictions on the free movement of goods within the Community normally come to light as a result of complaints by the firms or individuals affected by them. The European Commission examines over a thousand such cases each year, although by no means all of them relate to prohibitions or restrictions justified under article 36 itself.

For their part, the Government are keen to promote free movement of goods throughout the Community, and to that end has set up a single market compliance unit within the Department of Trade and Industry. The compliance unit stands ready to pursue vigorously any well-founded complaints about prohibitions or restrictions elsewhere in the Community which affect import from the United Kingdom. In some cases, however, we would accept that certain prohibitions or restrictions, such as those on pornography, are fully justified under article 36 and we would not therefore press for their removal.

Auditors

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry whether he will describe the manner in which his Department scrutinises the annual report and accounts published by the Institute of Chartered Accountants in England and Wales.

Mr. Redwood: There is no requirement for the institute to submit its annual report and accounts to my Department.

Bryanston Insurance

Mr. Campbell-Savours: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what consideration he has given to the public interest issues raised by the purchase of (a) Bryanston Insurance and (b) Trident by Mr. Grant Fowler.

Mr. Redwood: Before Trinity Insurance (formerly Trident) and Bryanston Insurance were purchased by Mr. Grant Fowler and companies associated with or controlled by him, prior notice was served on the Department as required by section 61 of the Insurance Companies Act 1982. The Department, in deciding not to object, took fully into account the interests of policyholders.

Mr. Campbell-Savours: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what representations his Department has received in relation to the conduct of Bryanston Insurance and the payment of claims over the last three years; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Redwood: None.

Airport (Hong Kong)

Mr. Hayward: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what representations he has made to the Hong Kong Government concerning the allocation of contracts for the construction of a new airport in Hong Kong.

Mr. Redwood: The award of contracts for the construction of the new airport in Hong Kong is a matter for the Hong Kong Government.

United Kingdom firms have outstanding capabilities in this sector. The Hong Kong authorities are well aware of this.

Mr. Hayward: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he has received any request for assistance from British companies in their submission of tenders to the Hong Kong Government for the new Hong Kong airport.

Mr. Redwood: My Department is fully supporting the efforts of British companies pursuing this project, but particular approaches by companies are regarded as confidential.

Supply Index

Mr. Devlin: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make a statement about his Department's decision not to participate in the Government's supply index.

Mr. Forth: Two of the Department's research establishments were early participants in this scheme but found that in practice the contents of the index did not meet their requirements and the benefits were at best marginal. A more targeted modular version of the scheme has been drawn up and is currently under consideration.

Accounting Standards Board

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry (1) what steps he has taken to assure himself that written representations to the Accounting Standards Board are placed on public record;

(2) what steps he has taken to assure himself that voting on accounting standards will be recorded by the Accounting Standards Board;

(3) what steps he has taken to assure himself that internal working papers and proposals in draft of the Accounting Standards Board are available to all on an equal basis;

(4) what steps he has taken to assure himself that access to internal working papers and proposals in draft of the Accounting Standards Board are restricted to major accountancy firms;

(5) what steps he has taken to assure himself that meetings of the Accounting Standards Board are open to outside observers;

(6) what steps he has taken to assure himself that the membership of working parties set up by the Accounting Standards Board will be published.

Mr. Redwood: None. These are matters which the Financial Reporting Council and the proposed Accounting Standards Board will no doubt consider.

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what steps he proposes to take to inform himself and the House if and when members of accountancy firms criticised in reports by his Department's inspectors are appointed to membership of working parties set up by the Accounting Standards Board.

Mr. Redwood: None.

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry whether he proposes to make it his policy that members of the Accounting Standards Board sever links with accountancy firms during their term of office.

Mr. Redwood [holding answer 8 May 1990]: The terms of appointment of members of the proposed Accounting Standards Board will be a matter for the Financial Reporting Council. It is envisaged that most of the members of the Board will serve on a part-time basis and it would therefore be both unreasonable and impracticable to require members of the board to sever links with the organisations from which they are drawn.

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry whether he will place a copy of any guidelines that govern potential conflicts of interest between members of the Accounting Standards Board and other firms, partnerships or businesses in the Library.

Mr. Redwood [holding answer 8 May 1990]: Detailed procedures for dealing with matters of this kind have yet to be determined, but I am sure that the Finance Reporting Council and the proposed Accounting Standards Board will be conscious of the desirability of the greatest possible openness in such matters.

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry whether any non-accountants will be represented on the Accounting Standards Board.

Mr. Redwood [holding answer 8 May 1990]: I understand that the composition of the proposed Accounting Standards Board has yet to be decided.

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry (1) what steps he is taking to ensure that the Accounting Standards Board attends to the users and readers of both the conventional and the short corporate reports created under the Companies Act 1989;

(2) how he proposes to ensure a reflection of the views and interests of the consumer and personal shareholder in the workings of the Accounting Standards Board;

(3) if he will list the members of the Accounting Standards Board.

Mr. Redwood [holding answer 8 May 1990]: The ASB does not yet exist but I am sure that the Financial Reporting Council and the chairman designate of the board will have taken note of the hon. Member's question and will consider the issue he addresses.

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry whether the deliberations of the Accounting Standards Board will be in public; and what guidance he has offered on this point.

Mr. Redwood [holding answer 8 May 1990]: The procedural arrangements of the proposed Accounting Standards Board will be a matter for the board to decide. I am sure that the board will be fully conscious of the need to maximise public understanding of and involvement in its work.

Atlantic Computers

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry (1) whether he will make a statement on the collapse of Atlantic Computers;

(2) how and when his Department became aware of the financial difficulties at Atlantic Computers and British and Commonwealth Holdings;

(3) whether the Government will offer any financial aid to British and Commonwealth Holdings.

Mr. Redwood [holding answer 8 May 1990]: My Department became aware of financial difficulties at Atlantic Computers when it was announced early on 17 April that administrators had been appointed by British Commonwealth Holdings. I have no plans to offer financial aid.

Arms Exports

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry whether he will make it his policy to compile an annual register of arms exporters to be placed in the Library and made available outside the House.

Mr. Redwood: No.

WALES

Housing

Mr. Gwilym Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will state the number of households and numbers of houses in Wales and the ratio between each at the end of each of the five-year periods for the last 30 years.

Mr. Grist: The available information is as follows:

	Estimated number of households (000's)	Estimate stock of dwellings (000's)	Households as percentage of stock
1961	804	824	97·6
1966	835	897	93·1
1971	910	967	94·1
1976	959	1,029	93·2
1981	1,012	1,089	92·9
1986	1,049	1,128	93·0
1989	1,078	1,159	93·0

Notes:

1. Estimates of households given for 1961 and 1966 are the number of private households enumerated at the 1961 census and 1966 sample census, each of which took place in April. Estimates of households for 1971 and later years are taken from the latest relevant household projections and relate to usually resident households at 31 June. Such household projections are based on the most recently preceding census of population and take account of household formation and dissolution and migration. For the 1981 Census household was taken as either one person living alone or a group of people who share either common housekeeping or a living room. In previous censuses people who catered separately were counted as separate households even if they shared a living room. 1989 estimates are calculated from 1987 based projections by interpolation.

2. Dwelling stock estimates (at December each year) are based on information collected in the most recently preceding Census of Population and take into account subsequent housebuilding and demolition. Due to changes in the census information collected, stock figures based on different censuses are not strictly comparable.

Mr. Gwilym Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what were the numbers of the population and the numbers of habitable rooms in Wales and the ratio between each at the end of each of the five-year periods for the last 30 years.

Mr. Grist: The available information is as follows:

Year	Population[1]	Number of rooms[2,3]	Persons per room
1961	2,567,900	4,125,575	0·62
1966	2,594,390	4,717,230	0·55
1971	2,647,015	4,769,835	0·55
1981	2,727,220	5,287,914	0·52

1961, 1971, 1981; census of population. 1966; sample census.

[2] Rooms in private households enumerated on census night.

[3] 1961-1981 excludes bathrooms, WCs, lobbies and those rooms used solely for business etc.; 1961 kitchens were counted only if they were used regularly for meals; 1966 all kitchens were counted; 1971 and 1981 kitchens under 2 metres wide were not counted.

Local Government Finance

Mr. Gwilym Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales, pursuant to his answer to the hon. Member for Cardiff, North, Official Report, column 20, of 26 March, if he will now state in the Official Report for each county and district council in Wales (a) the current community charge, (b) the equivalent of raising the same sum by the rating system and (c) the increase for each of those equivalent rates over last year's rates.

Mr. Grist: I wrote to my hon. Friend on 3 May 1990 in response to his original question. The table placed in the House of Commons Library contained the figures that he has requested.

Flexi-ownership

Mrs. Gorman: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how much has been spent to date to promote his housing flexi-ownership scheme.

Mr. Grist: The Department has provided an explanatory booklet, a leaflet and application forms at a cost of some £9,896 and the Development Board for Rural Wales, who administer the scheme, have incurred costs of between £150 and £200, mainly on the delivery of a letter from my right hon. Friend to the tenants.

Health Service

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales (1) what are the implications of paragraph 40 of annex A of his letter of 20 April sent by P. R. Gregory to the general managers of Gwynedd health authority for that authority's consideration of further hospital closure programmes; and if he will make a statement;

(2) if he will make a statement on paragraph 10 of annex A of his letter sent by P.R. Gregory of his Department to the general manager of Gwynedd health authority concerning changing circumstances causing a delayed implementation of plans for improved provisions of community hospitals in the county; and what circumstances caused this change of policy;

(3) if he will take steps to assess the adequacy of arrangements made by general practitioners in Caernarfon for the transfer to them of responsibility for aspects of casualty cover following the proposed closure of Caernarfon cottage hospital before agreeing to the final closure; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Grist: I shall write to the hon. Gentleman and place a copy of my letter in the Library of the House.

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what potential deficit Gwynedd health authority has identified for the current financial year; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Grist: As noted in my reply to the hon. Gentleman of 9 May, the Gwynedd health authority has identified a deficit of some £4 million on its budget requirements for 1990-91 by comparison with its notified revenue cash allocation.

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales whether the non-dental services at the cottage hospital, Caernarfon may be deemed to be closed prior to the three conditions laid down by the Welsh Office being met.

Mr. Grist: My right hon. Friend would have no objection to Gwynedd health authority closing the non-dental services at the cottage hospital prior to meeting the three conditions relating to dental services.

A55

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what is his most up-to-date estimate of the out-turn cost of (a) the A55 Conwy crossing project and (b) its adjoining westward extension to Penry-Clip; and what is his best estimate of the overspend on these contracts.

Mr. Roberts: The estimated total out-turn costs for the A55 Conwy crossing and Pen-y-Clip schemes, as set out in the Welsh Office commentary on public expenditure in Wales 1990-91 to 1992-93, are £170·8 million and £85·3 million respectively. These estimates are in line with expectations at the time the contracts were let.

Computerisation

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales pursuant to his answer of 8 May what penalty clause will be triggered or exacted from IBM UK in request of the computerised management information system ordered in August 1986 for delivery in April 1987 being three years late on stream.

Mr. David Hunt: This matter has been settled. I refer the hon. Gentleman to the reply that I gave him on 8 May.

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales whether he contemplates awarding any further contracts in respect of computerised financial management systems for his Department.

Mr. David Hunt: There are no plans to do so.

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales, pursuant to his answer of 8 May, what further payment was made to IBM UK in January for the computerised finance system for his Department.

Mr. David Hunt: A total of £102,827 was paid to IBM UK Ltd. in January 1990 for goods and services provided in accordance with the terms of the contract between my Department and the company.

Floods

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales when he proposes to respond to the request by Clwyd county council for funding of a social work support team following the flood disaster on the north Wales coast; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. David Hunt: Clwyd county council's request for financial assistance towards a social work support team has been discussed with the director of social services. The council is aware that expenditure on social services incurred in dealing with the emergency falls to be considered under the Bellwin arrangements.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Drugs

Mr. Butler: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if, pursuant to his answer of 2 May to the hon. Member for Sheffield, Heeley (Mr. Michie), Official Report, column 564, Ministers are considering recycling confiscated money from drug traffickers towards schemes designed to reduce demand run under the auspices of local health authorities.

Mr. John Patten: Ministers are still considering the detailed arrangements for the proposed scheme and how priorities might best be determined between the possible candidates for the use of such monies.

Sir Dudley Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what new initiatives are being pursued in an effort to prevent the laundering of illegal drug profits by reputable banks and financial institutions in the United Kingdom.

Mr. John Patten: The Drug Trafficking Offences Act 1986 created a criminal offence of money laundering, punishable by up to 14 years' imprisonment. The Government recently extended the scope of this offence through new provisions contained in the Criminal Justice (International Co-operation) Act 1990. The new Act will enable us to ratify the United Nations convention against illicit trafficking in narcotic drugs and psychotropic substances later this year. It also introduced a new power to prevent evasion of the controls on money laundering by those attempting to import or export the proceeds of drug trafficking as cash. The Act meets a number of specific proposals in the recent Home Affairs Committee report on Drug Trafficking and Related Serious Crime. In response to a further recommendation by the Committee the Government has set up a working party to consider how the provisions on the confiscation of drug traffickers' assets have worked since their introduction, and to identify any changes to the law that may be necessary.

In addition to this, we are involved in a number of other initiatives, both domestically and internationally, aimed at ensuring that the measures taken to combat money laundering are as effective as possible.

On 19 April my right hon. Friend the Chancellor of the Exchequer announced the publication of the report of the financial action task force on money laundering, a copy of which is in the Library. The United Kingdom were active contributors to the work of the task force; the priority is now on the implementation of its recommendations. In the light of the report a working group has been established, bringing together representatives of banks, building societies and the enforcement agencies, under the chairmanship of the Bank of England, to take forward those recommendations of the task force which relate to banks and building societies.

We are seeking to negotiate further international agreements under the 1986 Act to trace, freeze and confiscate the proceeds of drug trafficking. Thirteen such agreements or arrangements have already been concluded. That with the United States of America came into force in April 1989; an Order in Council currently before Parliament will designate the remaining countries with whom agreements of arrangements have already been made, together with the Channel Islands and the Isle of Man.

Within Europe, the United Kingdom is involved in developing a draft Council of Europe convention on tracing, freezing and confiscating the proceeds of crime. The European Commission has recently published a draft directive on money laundering, and the United Kingdom looks forward to taking an active part in its consideration.

Ms. Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many women from Nigeria and Colombia have been convicted for drug smuggling offences in the last five years.

Mr. John Patten: The number of women convicted of unlawful import or export of controlled drugs whose country of birth was recorded as Nigeria and Colombia was as follows:

United Kingdom

Number of women

Country of birth	1984	1985	1986	1987	1988
Nigeria	53	12	23	54	42
Colombia	6	3	2	6	4

Motoring Offences

Mr. Ralph Howell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department in each of the financial years 1987-88, 1988-89 and 1989-90, how many motorists the Crown prosecution service prosecuted who were acquitted because of a Magill type defence; and how much such cases cost to (a) the Crown prosecution service, (b) the legal aid fund, (c) central funds and (d) the magistrates court.

Mr. John Patten: The information requested is not collected centrally.

Prison Incidents

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what has been the number of serious incidents in prisons in England and Wales for 1990 to date.

Mr. Mellor: The following numbers of incidents are recorded as having been reported by prison service establishments between 1 January and 8 May 1990 under the broad headings shown, excluding incidents under headings categorised as minor:

	Number
Escapes	32
Attempted escapes	4
Escapes from escort	35
Attempted escapes from escort	3
Recapture/surrender of escaped inmates	35
Assaults—on staff	24
—on inmates	57
—on others	6
Deaths of inmates believed to be suicide	14
Other deaths of inmates	13
Deaths of staff	2
Fires causing personal injury, or serious and/or extensive damage to property	7
Acts of concerted indiscipline	48
Barricade incidents	7
Rooftop demonstrations	21
Food refusals	28
Key/lock compromises	4
Hostage incidents	8
Bomb threats/explosions	17
Other miscellaneous incidents	25

Television Licences

Mr. Winnick: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he will reply to the letters from the hon. Member for Walsall, North of 6 March, 12 March and 22 March, regarding the concessionary television licence fee.

Mr. Mellor: I hope to be able to reply to all three letters shortly.

Power Cut, West London

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will call for a report from the Commissioner of Police of the Metropolis on the disruption to traffic caused by the power cut in west London on the morning of 8 May.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: I understand from the commissioner that no significant additional traffic disruption was caused in west London by the power cut on 8 May.

Electronic Tagging

Mr. Butler: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is the average cost of electronic tagging per offender.

Mr. John Patten: The total cost of the electronic monitoring trials to date is £602,000 and the number of defendants monitored has been 50. But the former figure includes the cost of setting up three different schemes on an experimental basis and the special production of the different equipment needed. It would not be sensible to take the figure yielded by dividing the latter figure into the former as a realistic average cost for the use of electronic monitoring on a larger scale. The evaluation of the trials now being prepared will attempt to identify the factors which ought to be counted for longer-term cost purposes.

DEFENCE

Bases (Wales)

Mr. Nicholas Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many (a) service men and (b) civilian employees are based in establishments situated in (i) the former county of Pembroke, (ii) Dyfed and (iii) Wales.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The total numbers of military and civilian personnel in the areas specified, as at 1 January 1990, are as follows:

	Service	Civilian	Total
Former county of Pembroke	763	984·5	1,747·5
Dyfed	790	1,638·5	2,428·5
Wales	5,403	5,395·5	10,798·5

The figures for the former county of Pembroke cover establishments in the Preseli and South Pembrokeshire local authority areas.

Defence Lands (Multiple Use)

Mr. Boswell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence to what extent he makes multiple use of defence lands.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The Ministry of Defence owns or leases 241,000 hectares, of which 110,000 hectares are let to tenants for agricultural use. This is in line with the Department's policy of allowing public access to our land and facilities for recreation, social or commercial purposes wherever this is consistent with operational, safety and security requirements and does not conflict with the interests of tenants or have a detrimental effect on local amenities and the environment.

WRNS

Mr. Viggers: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many Wrens have volunteered for sea-going duties; and what is the current number of WRNS personnel.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: As at 9 May 283 ratings and 90 officers had volunteered to go to sea this year.

The number of WRNS officers and ratings serving on 1 April 1990 were 320 and 2,904 respectively.

Early Release (Royal Navy)

Mr. Viggers: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the numbers of applications for early release from the Royal Navy for each month in the last two years.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The numbers of applications for early release from the Royal Navy by month over the last 24 months have been as follows:

	Royal Navy applications
	Officers	Ratings
April 1988	15	188
May 1988	29	217
June 1988	24	271
July 1988	36	204
August 1988	12	97
September 1988	29	303
October 1988	24	277
November 1988	16	367
December 1988	11	301
January 1989	27	165
February 1989	45	281
March 1989	28	218
FY 1988-89 Total	296	2,889
April 1989	21	452
May 1989	21	265
June 1989	14	294
July 1989	18	305
August 1989	15	143
September 1989	21	346
October 1989	23	195
November 1989	13	209
December 1989	18	481
January 1990	23	233
February 1990	24	310
March 1990	36	468
FY 1989-90 Total	247	3,701

Applications to leave are not the same as actual departures because there is a fairly lengthy period of notice during which people may change their minds and withdraw their applications.

Shiplift (Faslane)

Mr. McFall: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when the decision to build the shiplift facility at Faslane was taken.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: In 1983.

Mr. McFall: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if the shiplift contract at Faslane was awarded as a single tender contract.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The shiplift is being constructed as part of a larger contract package which was awarded through competitive tender. The manufacturer of the syncrolift platform is a nominated sub-contractor and was selected by single tender action.

Mr. McFall: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) what consideration was given by the Nuclear Safety Committee to the merits of marine chain as opposed to wire rope for the shiplift facility at Faslane;

(2) on what grounds the decision was taken to proceed with marine chain as opposed to wire rope for the shiplift facility at Faslane.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The Ministry of Defence nuclear safety authorities assessed all aspects of the Faslane shiplift design including the platform components and the means by which it is raised and supported. The particular syncrolift mechanism being incorporated in the Faslane shiplift makes use of wire ropes rather than marine chains.

The company responsible for the design and manufacture of the syncrolift mechanism was selected because of its competence and unique experience with shiplifts of this size and function. The Ministry of Defence nuclear safety authorities recognise the importance of adopting a well proven system and design used in other comparable shiplifts.

Mr. McFall: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) what representations he has received from the safety and reliability directorate of the United Kingdom Atomic Energy Authority on an acceptable safety case for the shiplift project at Faslane;

(2) if any representations have been made by the United Kingdom Atomic Energy Authority or its safety and reliability directorate regarding fundamental concerns by this body on the shiplift project at Faslane.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The safety and reliability directorate advises MOD's nuclear safety authorities. In this role it has submitted a number of observations on the shiplift programme. These are being taken into account in its design development and construction. The safety and reliability directorate has not questioned the fundamental ability of a shiplift to meet nuclear safety requirements.

Mr. McFall: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will provide the costs to date and the latest estimate for the completed shiplift project at Faslane.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The latest approved costs of the shiplift which, along with some other major projects, forms part of the shiplift contract package, is £147 million. It is not our policy to discuss estimated costs of individual projects or contract packages.

Mr. McFall: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) on what grounds the construction of a dry dock facility at Faslane was rejected;

(2) if he will provide the estimated cost of (a) a dry dock facility and (b) a shiplift at Faslane; and on what grounds the decision was made to go for the latter.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: When the decision was taken in 1983 that a shiplift was the preferred docking solution, on the basis of comparable provision the estimated capital costs of a dry dock facility were significantly greater than a shiplift. The shiplift met programme requirements and combined the greatest operational flexibility with both the lowest capital and running costs.

Shiplift Systems

Mr. McFall: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what statistics are held by his Department on (a) the failure of wire rope shiplifts and (b) accidents involving failure of shiplift systems around the world.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: A variety of data has been collected on an in confidence basis from a number of sources on both the reported failures of wire rope shiplifts and accidents involving the failure of shiplift systems.

Community Charge

Mr. Rooker: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what advice he has issued regarding duties of commanding officers to issue certificates for the purposes of regulation 4 of the Community Charge (Students) Regulations 1989.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: None.

Military Bands

Mr. Fisher: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what information he has on the number of public performances undertaken by military bands in 1989.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: Details of public performances carried out by Army bands in 1989 are not held centrally and could only be produced at disproportionate cost.

The Royal Marines gave a total of 596 public performances in 1989 and the Royal Air Force gave 389.

Mr. Fisher: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether he will publish a table showing the case of military bands in each of the last 10 years.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: Full details of all the costs of maintaining Service bands are not held centrally and could not be obtained without disproportionate cost and effort. The table shows estimated staff costs (including overheads) based on the numbers serving in the bands in each year.

Year	Total of Service bands £ million
1981-82	46·0
1982-83	49·5
1983-84	51·3
1984-85	46·6
1985-86	48·2
1986-87	50·1
1987-88	51·2
1988-89	52·7
1989-90	55·2

Sports

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the sports which are recognised by the Combined Services Sports Board.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: There is no Combined Services Sport Board list of recognised games and sport. However, there are 18 sports which are played at combined services level:

Association Football
Athletics
Badminton
Basketball
Boxing
Cricket
Cycling
Fencing
Golf
Hockey
Judo
Lawn Tennis
Rugby Union
Squash
Swimming
Volleyball
Water Polo
Winter Sports

EMPLOYMENT

Tourism

Mr. Simon Coombs: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what has been the value to date given by the European investment bank to tourism projects in the United Kingdom.

Mr. Nicholls: The European investment bank offers loans to eligible projects within the European Community. It does not offer grants. Information on the value of loans given by the EIB to tourism projects in the United Kingdom is not readily available and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Supply Index

Mr. Devlin: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will make a statement about his Department's decision not to participate in the Government supply index.

Mr. Eggar: Purchasing arrangements in the Department of Employment are devolved to the constituent parts of the group. The Training Agency and the Health and Safety Executive have joined the supply index because they consider it appropriate to do so; other parts of the group do not consider that the index is suitable for their organisation.

Departmental Purchases

Mr. Andrew Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what measures he is taking to encourage Government Departments to increase the proportion of purchases they make from small firms.

Mr. Eggar: Following the publication of a widely distributed booklet "Think Big, Buy Small" addressed to Government purchasers, my Department is now supporting a purchasing specialist to work with the Treasury's central unit on purchasing on encouraging Government Departments to improve both small firms access to them, and opportunities for small firms to bid for Government contracts. The specialist is advising on better information systems and improved purchasing procedures, and is also seeking feedback from small firms themselves. Later this year I hope to meet the heads of Government purchasing Departments to reinforce this work and demonstrate the benefits to Government of using small firm suppliers.

Environment Protection.

Ms. Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what initiatives he is undertaking regarding training for environmental protection-related careers.

Mr. Nicholls: A range of opportunities for such training is available to young people and unemployed people, particularly the long-term unemployed, through youth training and employment training. A number of training places in high technology environmental skills are also supported through the high technology national training programme.

Action for Jobs

Mr. Terry Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what were the main headings of expenditure on action for jobs in 1985-86.

Mr. Eggar: The main headings for expenditure on action for jobs in 1985-86 were press and radio advertising.

Grain Silos (Gases)

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he has made an assessment of the implications for the health of workers in grain silos arising from the presence of harmful gases; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Nicholls: The Health and Safety Executive is well aware of the hazards to the health of workers who may have to enter grain silos. The main hazards are the presence of carbon dioxide together with an oxygen-deficient atmosphere and the Health and Safety Executive has published guidance on the precautions which should be taken before workers enter such silos.

Restart

Mr. Andrew MacKay: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he plans to make any further changes to the restart programme; and whether he will make a statement.

Mr. Howard: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Social Security and I have been considering whether the current position whereby a claimant's failure to attend a restart interview results in a disallowance for unemployment benefits should be extended to restart courses.

Such courses are already a very successful extension of the interview process designed to help those hardest hit by unemployment to regain confidence, identify potential and plan a route back to work. We believe that the very long term unemployed, whose length of time without a job clearly shows that they have been unable or unwilling to take full advantage of the wide range of available opportunities, clearly have much to gain from such a course.

My right hon. Friend therefore intends to introduce regulations later this year which will enable employment service staff to require the attendance at a restart course of those who have been unemployed for two years or more and who, at subsequent restart interviews, refused to participate in any of my Department's employment and training programmes.

Earnings Statistics

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many full-time employees on adult rates (a) earned less and (b) earned more than two-thirds of average male earnings in Great Britain in 1979 and 1989; and how many of these were employed in Wales.

Mr. Nicholls [holding answer 10 May 1990]: Figures of the average earnings of full-time adult male employees in Great Britain in 1979 and 1989 are published in table 1 of part A of the 1979 and 1989 new earnings survey reports, copies of which are in the Library. The estimated numbers of full-time adult employees earning below specified amounts weekly are published in table 14 part A of the same reports. Comparable figures are not available by region but data on the percentage distribution of gross weekly earnings of full-time adult employees in Wales are published in table 114 of part E of the reports.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Slaughtering

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what steps he takes to ensure animals in knackers' yards are given the same protection as animals at abattoirs in respect of (a) feeding and watering, (b) lairage and (c) slaughtering techniques; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Maclean: Extensive legislation already exists to provide for the welfare of animals in abattoirs and knackers' yards. It affords the same level of protection as regards feeding, watering, lairaging and slaughtering for animals in knackers' yards as for those in abattoirs.

Local authorities are responsible for enforcing the legislation and officers of the state veterinary service visit abattoirs and knackers' yards to monitor standards and to give advice.

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he has made an assessment of the animal welfare implications of the ritual slaughtering of animals; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Maclean: The Farm Animal Welfare Council reported in 1985 on the welfare of animals when slaughtered by religious methods. The Government's response, accepting 15 of the Council's 17 recommendations, was published in October 1987. Proposals for new regulations on the welfare of animals at slaughter, including religious slaughter, were issued to interested parties for comment on 20 June 1989. Copies of all these documents are available in the Library of the House. We are considering representations on the proposed regulations which will be laid before Parliament shortly.

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what percentage, and how many in actual numbers, of animals were subject to ritual slaughter in 1989; and if he will give a breakdown by species.

Mr. Maclean: Statistics of animals slaughtered by religious methods are not maintained centrally. However our most recent estimates are that less than 2 per cent. of cattle, 4 per cent. of sheep and goats and 1 per cent. of poultry slaughtered in Great Britain are slaughtered under the exemption from prior stunning.

NATIONAL FINANCE

Retail Prices Index

Mr. Marlow: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make it his policy that on each future occasion when he publicises the retail prices index he will also publicise the annual increase in the cost of living excluding mortgage rate and such taxes as the community charge.

Mr. Lilley: A series is already published in the monthly press notice for "all items excluding housing" which is very close to the index requested, since two thirds of the weight for housing is accounted for by mortgage payments and domestic rates/community charges.

Inland Revenue Officers

Mr. Cox: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what was the number of Inland Revenue executive officers who resigned from the service in the years 1988 and 1989.

Mr. Lilley: One hundred and eighteen and 92 respectively.

Mr. Cox: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many Inland Revenue executive officers applied for the internal trawl for the AT-HEO'D' scheme in the months of May and June 1989; and how many were successful.

Mr. Lilley: Ten executive officers from the Inland Revenue applied for this scheme, of whom one was successful.

Value Added Tax

Mr. Stern: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) what was the annual cost to Her Majesty's Customs and Excise of administering the value added tax on the sale of gold coins and bars in the latest available year;

(2) what was the annual value added tax revenue accruing from the sales of gold (a) coins and (b) bars in the latest available year;

(3) what was the annual value added tax revenue accruing from the sale of Britannia gold coins in the latest available year.

Mr. Ryder: I regret that the information requested by my hon. Friend is not available.

Correspondence

Mr. Pawsey: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer when the hon. Member for Rugby and Kenilworth will receive a reply to his letter dated 6 March referring to Mr. Allan Gear of the Henry Doubleday Research Association.

Mr. Lilley: I replied to my hon. Friend's letter on 11 May.

Energy Consumption

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer, pursuant to his answer of 30 April, Official Report, column 444, if he will give the expenditure on energy consumption, broken down by fuel, of the buildings occupied by his Department, for the latest year available.

Mr. Ryder [holding answer 10 May 1990]: The information, which covers major offices only, is as follows:

	Gas £000	Electricity £000	Solid/Liquid Fuel £000
Government Offices, Great George Street, London, SW1	38·6	189·6	4·4
Chessington Computer Centre, Surrey	0·3	39·7	10·3
Alencon Link, Basingstoke, Hampshire	0·2	5·8	2·6
Grosvenor House, Basingstoke, Hampshire	1·8	3·1	—
Riverwalk House, London, SW1	13·7	73·3	—

Note: All figures reflect consumption in calendar year 1989.

I regret that a figure given to the hon. Member in response to his previous question was incorrect. The figure for gas consumption for Chessington should be 1,000 therms not 71,000 as quoted.

THE ARTS

Royal Opera House

Mr. Soley: To ask the Minister for the Arts whether the Royal Opera house has applied for additional funds.

Mr. Luce [holding answer 11 May 1990]: The Royal Opera house has consistently argued for additional Government funding. At the end of last year it alerted the chairman of the Arts Council and me to the prospect of a £2 million deficit in the coming year. This was despite an 11 per cent. increase in its grant from the Arts Council and a severe pruning of projected expenditure plans. I recognise the excellent record of the Royal Opera house in increasing its self-generated income but, in reply, I made it clear that all arts organisations must, like any other business, demonstrate a commitment to good housekeeping and to controlling costs. It is also an important part of Arts Council policy that all arts organisations receiving grant-in-aid should balance their books over a three year period. I expect the Royal Opera house to discuss with the Arts Council how that policy can be complied with.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Iraq (Arms Component Exports)

Mr. Gordon Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry (1) when his Department first knew that Dr. Gerald Bull had a connection with SRC;

(2) to which Iraqi Government agency the order seized by Customs and Excise was being sent;

(3) what action was taken in respect of the Iraqi armaments order after it was known that the Space Research Corporation was involved in the order;

(4) what is now known of the destination of the Iraqi pipe order now in Iraq;

(5) what information he has on the intended use of the armament being produced for the Iraqis;

(6) what action was taken to investigate the Iraqi export order after the death was reported of Gerald Bull of the Space Research Corporation;

(7) what information he has as to (a) the military purpose of the armaments order of Iraq and (b) the possible uses of the completed order.

Mr. Ridley: In the light of the criminal charges laid against individuals and in the light of the continuing investigations by Customs and Excise, it would be inappropriate to give any further information on these matters.

Mr. Gordon Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry (1) when his Department was first made aware of a meeting in Brussels between Sheffield Forgemasters and the Space Research Corporation in June 1988, and of additional meetings that took place in Brussels in July 1988 between those parties;

(2) if he has any information on the fire-testing in Iraq of any equipment provided for Iraq by Sheffield Forgemasters and Walter Somers.

Mr. Ridley [holding answer 26 April 1990]: In the light of the criminal charges laid against individuals and in the light of the continuing investigations by Customs and Excise, it would be inappropriate to give any further information on these matters.

Mr. Gordon Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry (1) when he first received information about the activities of SRC Composites;

(2) when he became aware of the project of SRC Composites to develop in Northern Ireland;

(3) when he was first aware of SRC Composites' involvement with Iraq;

(4) what investigations took place into Space Research Corporation after its involvement in the Iraqi export order became known.

Mr. Ridley [holding answer 30 April 1990]: In the light of the criminal charges laid against individuals and in the light of the continuing investigations by Customs and Excise, it would be inappropriate to give any further information on these matters.

Export Finance Scheme

Mr. Thurnham: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what further steps he will take to raise funds from the capital markets to reduce the costs of the fixed rate export finance scheme; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Redwood: As part of a programme of measures to reduce the cost of ECGD's fixed rate export finance scheme, the Guaranteed Export Finance Corporation plc (GEFCO) issued a second £250 million bond issue on 8 May which again carried the guarantee of the Secretary of State. The previous issue was launched last July and further periodic issues are envisaged.

Financial Services

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what recent representations he has received on the working of (a) the Securities and Investments Board, (b) FIMBRA, (c) the Financial Services Act 1986 and (d) recognised professional bodies in the financial services industry; and from whom.

Mr. Redwood: My right hon. Friend and I regularly receive a variety of representations on these matters from a wide range of sources.

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will visit the state of California to study its regulatory system in the financial services industry.

Mr. Redwood: Neither my right hon. Friend nor I have any plans at present to visit California.

Mr. Colin Shepherd: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what representations he has received concerning the nature and level of capital adequacy for firms involved in the small independent intermediary sector of the financial services industry.

Mr. Redwood: I have received a number of representations from organisations and firms in the independent financial intermediaries sector about capital adequacy requirements. Their views will be taken into account during the forthcoming negotiations on the proposed capital adequacy directive.

Mr. Colin Shepherd: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will set out in the Official Report an outline of the nature of the stance he will be adopting with regard to any European Commission proposals in respect of the harmonisation of the financial services industry prior to 1992 with particular regard to the small independent intermediary sector.

Mr. Redwood: The Government welcome proposals from the European Commission which are designed to create a single market in financial services and which are based upon mutual recognition of member states' competent authorities and agreement on key standards. Our response to such proposals will be based upon two principles: first, that such measures should not undermine the Community's international competitiveness and, secondly, that they should not erect unnecessary barriers to market entry.

British American Tobacco

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what recent representations he has received on the Hoylake bid for British American Tobacco; and from whom.

Mr. Redwood: I have received many representations from hon. Members and others about various aspects of Hoylake Investments' bid for BAT Industries, but none since Hoylake announced on 23 April that it would not renew its offer for BAT.

South Africa

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what is the number and value of grants made by the Export Credits Guarantee Department to South Africa for each year since 1985.

Mr. Redwood [holding answer 10 May 1990]: The ECGD has not made any grants to South Africa in the period in question.

Since ECGD's normal fixed-rate export finance arrangements apply to medium and long-term export credits to South Africa, some grants to banks in Britain supporting such export credits will have been made as part of the overall arrangements.

National Measurement Accreditation Service

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry, pursuant to his reply to the hon. Member for Gateshead, East (Ms. Quin), Official Report, 30 April, column 386, what steps he is taking to increase the number of laboratories accredited by the NAMAS scheme, in the north-east, Wales, Scotland and Northern Ireland.

Mr. Douglas Hogg [holding answer 10 May 1990]: The national measurement accreditation service, NAMAS, actively encourages laboratories to become accredited for calibration and testing measurements. In conjunction with the Department's regional offices, promotional seminars have already been held in the north-east, Wales and Scotland. A seminar in Northern Ireland is currently being planned.

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what steps he has taken or has suggested that the National Physical Laboratory takes to increase the number of laboratories accredited with the national measurement accreditation service for radiological calibration; and if he will name the accredited laboratory.

Mr. Douglas Hogg [holding answer 10 May 1990]: Discussions are taking place between the national measurement accreditation service (NAMAS), involved in the radiological field of measurements both for calibration and testing with the view of increasing the number of accreditations in this area. The laboratory currently accredited for radiological calibration is Amersham International plc. Three further laboratories are currently being assessed prior to accreditation.

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what staff committment is devoted through the National Physical Laboratory to ensuring as wide as possible membership to the national measurement accreditation service; and how this staff commitment is broken down between accreditations awards to calibration laboratories and testing facilities.

Mr. Douglas Hogg [holding answer 10 May 1990]: The total number of staff currently employed in the national measurement accreditation service is 52. Of these, eight are directly involved in the accreditation of calibration laboratories and 25 in the accreditation of testing laboratories. In addition, three further staff are directly involved in accreditation of both calibration and testing laboratories.

Energy Consumption

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry, pursuant to his answer of 30 April, Official Report, column 387, if he will give the expenditure on energy consumption, broken down by fuel, of the buildings occupied by his Department for the latest year available.

Mr. Forth [holding answer 10 May 1990]: Expenditure on energy consumption in buildings occupied by the Department of Trade and Industry in 1988-89, the latest full year for which figures are available, was as follows:

	£ million
Electricity	2·3
Gas	0·7
Oil	0·3

May I also apologise for an error in my answer to the hon. Gentleman on 30 April at column 387. The figure for gas consumption in the Department of Trade and Industry in 1988-89 should have read 2·3 million therms.

ATTORNEY-GENERAL

Perjury

48. Mr. Teddy Taylor: To ask the Attorney-General what information he has on the number of prosecutions which have been initiated under the provisions of the Perjury Act of 1911 relating to persons wilfully making statements false in a material particular to judges or persons with the legal status of judges.

The Attorney-General: The only information available to me relates to convictions rather than proceedings instituted. Eighty-four persons were convicted for offences contrary to section 1 of the Perjury Act 1911 during 1988. All such convictions related to false statements made in judicial proceedings.

Courts

49. Mr. Rathbone: To ask the Attorney-General what representations he has received recently about the operations of the courts.

The Attorney-General: The Lord Chancellor frequently receives correspondence from Members of this House, legal practitioners and members of the public about the operations of the courts. All these are responded to by the Lord Chancellor or his officials.

Director of Public Prosecutions

50. Mr. Winnick: To ask the Attorney-General when he last met the Director of Public Prosecutions to discuss prosecution policy.

53. Mr. Greville Janner: To ask the Attorney-General when he last met the Director of Public Prosecutions; and what matters were discussed.

The Attorney-General: I refer to the answer I gave today to the hon. Member for Bolsover (Mr. Skinner).

Covenants

51. Mr. Thurnham: To ask the Attorney-General whether he plans to have any discussions with the Law Reform Committee on the length of time for which covenants should be in force; and if he will make a statement.

The Attorney-General: There are no plans to refer any aspect of the law relating to covenants to the Law Reform Committee.

Crown Prosecution Service

52. Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Attorney-General if he will make a statement about the operation of the Crown prosecution service.

The Attorney-General: The operation of the Crown prosecution service has been the subject of very recent scrutiny and report by the Home Affairs Select Committee of this House. The Committee recognised the impressive progress made by the Crown prosecution service despite its initial difficulties and confirmed our confidence that by proper assertion of its independence the CPS has contributed to a fairer and more just prosecution system. The Government will be responding to its recommendations in the normal manner.

Professor Wilhelm Feldberg

Mr. Campbell-Savours: To ask the Attorney-General whether he will prosecute Professor Wilhelm Feldberg for a contravention of section 1 of the Protection of Animals Act 1911.

The Attorney-General: A decision about the commencement of a prosecution could be properly taken only on the basis of evidence assembled through a criminal investigation. The investigation of an alleged criminal offence is a matter for the police service. The proper course for any person having evidence suggesting the commission of an offence is to make the evidence available to the police.

It is to be noted that by virtue of section 1(3) of the Protection of Animals Act 1911 and section 27(2) and schedule 3 to the Animals (Scientific Procedures) Act 1986 the provision to which hon. Member refers does not apply to anything lawfully done in accordance with the 1986 Act.

Criminal Law Jurisdiction

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Attorney-General how many prosecutions have been mounted in (a) the Republic of Ireland, (b) Northern Ireland and (c) Great Britain under the terms of the Criminal Law Jurisdiction Acts; and what is the outcome of each prosecution for each year since the passing of the legislation for 1990 until the earliest convenient date.

The Attorney-General: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave my hon. Friend the Member for Orpington (Mr. Stanbrook) on 19 December 1988, at column 92. All the prosecutions listed in that answer as having taken place in the United Kingdom took place in Northern Ireland. Those trials took place in the following years:

Fearon
Morgan
O'Rourke

1981
Gormley

1982
Smyth
Hannigan
Callaghan
Ward
Patterson

1986
McCormack

1987
Collins

1988
Ellis
Orr
Clements
Verner
McKenna

Since my previous answer another person has been tried in Northern Ireland, in 1990, for offences allegedly committed in the Republic of Ireland:

Offence	Sentence
John William Gilmour
Counselling and Procuring and causing an explosion	Convicted—16 years imprisonment
Possession of Explosives with intent (1)	Convicted—16 years imprisonment
Possession of firearm with intent (1)	Convicted—10 years imprisonment
Possession of Firearms (2)	Left on file
Carrying of Firearm with intent	Convicted—10 years imprisonment

The trials in the Republic of Ireland listed in my previous answer took place in the following years:

Lynagh
McGurk
McNally

1981
Campbell
Ryan

1982
McKee
Sloan
Magee
Fusco
Tuite

1983
Flynn
Soraghan

One trial which took place in the Republic of Ireland in 1978 and was omitted from my previous answer was:

Offence	Sentence
John Brendan Brady
Control of firearms and ammunition	Convicted—2 years imprisonment
Possession of explosive substances	Convicted—6 years imprisonment
Unlawful seizure of a vehicle	Convicted—4 years imprisonment

Since my previous answer four further persons have been tried in the Republic of Ireland for offences allegedly committed in the United Kingdom:

Offence	Sentence
198922
Gerard Michael Sloan
Escape Lawful Custody	Convicted—5 years imprisonment
Gerald Bernard Hamilton
Possession of Explosives	Convicted—7 years imprisonment
1990
Damien Martin Harkin
Possession of Explosives	Acquitted
Brian McQuade
Causing an Explosion	Convicted—3 years imprisonment
Possession of Explosives	Convicted—3 years imprisonment

NORTHERN IRELAND

Sewage Sludge

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what proposals he has to allow the spreading on land of human sewage sludge for fertilisation purposes; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: Sewage sludge is used as a fertiliser in Northern Ireland in accordance with the advice contained in the "Code of Practice for Agricultural Use of Sewage Sludge", published by the Department of the Environment in 1989.

Police Liaison Committees

Mr. Ashdown: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will list the local councils which have police liaison committees; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Cope: The following councils have police liaison committees:

Ards
Antrim
Ballymena
Ballymoney
Banbridge
Belfast
Carrickfergus
Castlereagh
Coleraine
Craigavon
Derry
Down
Dungannon
Fermanagh
Larne
Limavady
Lisburn
Magherafelt
Moyle
Newtownabbey
North Down
Strabane

I understand that the Police Authority for Northern Ireland is hopeful that further committees will be established. But if this is not possible alternative arrangements will be considered to ensure that there is effective consultation between the RUC and the community.

Fishing Vessels

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will supply figures for the costs and earnings of United Kingdom fishing vessels in the Province for the period 1983 to 1989, broken down by vessel size (a) under 40 ft., (b) 40 to 79·9 ft., (c) 80 to 109·9 ft., (d) 110 to 139·9 ft., and (e) 10 ft. and over.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: The information requested is not readily available. I will write to the hon. Member as soon as possible.

Meat and Livestock

Mr. Beggs: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland (1) what percentage of the meat and livestock produce of Northern Ireland is required for Northern Ireland consumption;

(2) what percentage of the meat and livestock produce of Northern Ireland is exported to (a) Great Britain, (b) other European Community countries and (c) countries outside the European Community.

Mr. Peter Bottomley [holding answer 8 May 1990]: The table sets out the estimated utilisation of cattle, sheep and pig slaughterings in Northern Ireland in 1989.

Percentages

	Northern Ireland consumption	Great Britain	Exports European Community	Countries outside European Community
Cattle	25	54	19	2
Sheep	4	1	95	Nil
Pigs	45	35	20	[1]

[1] Negligible.

Mr. Beggs: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what percentage of the Livestock Marketing Commission budget for advertising is used to promote the consumption of Northern Ireland meat and livestock produce in Northern Ireland.

Mr. Peter Bottomley [holding answer 8 May 1990]: Approximately 30 per cent. of the commission's development budget is used for such promotion.

PRIME MINISTER

Lithuania

Mr. Atkinson: To ask the Prime Minister if she will make a statement on her discussions with the Prime Minister of Lithuania.

The Prime Minister: I had talks with Mrs. Prunskiene on 9 May. We stressed that the Lithuanian people have the right to self-determination. We also shared the view that the gains that have been made in east-west relations must be preserved and strengthened. The present situation should and can be resolved through discussion.

Local Government Finance

Mr. Rooker: To ask the Prime Minister if she will identify the community charge regulation she referred to on 3 May, Official Report, column 1204, relating to the sending out and writing-off of small accounts.

The Prime Minister: The regulation I referred to on 3 May at column 1204 is regulation 61 of the Community Charges (Administration and Enforcement) Regulations 1989, Statutory Instrument No. 438.

EDUCATION AND SCIENCE

Learning Difficulties

Dr. Goodson-Wickes: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science how many representations he has received on the subject of specific learning difficulties in reading, writing, and spelling, dyslexia, since 23 January; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Alan Howarth: The Department has received a number of such representations since the British Dyslexia Association began its dyslexia awareness campaign on 23 January. I shall be meeting representatives of the BDA shortly to discuss this important area of special educational needs.

Under the Education Act 1981, it is the responsibility of LEAs to make appropriate provision for all pupils with special educational needs in their area. It is therefore for LEAs and schools to ensure that suitable provision is made for children with specific learning difficulties, including the teaching of reading and writing by methods appropriate to their needs.

Nuclear Engineering

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science, pursuant to his answer to the hon. Member for Meirionnydd Nant Conwy (Dr. Thomas), Official Report, 10 January, columns 621-22, what is the relationship between the nuclear engineering course which commenced at Queen Mary college in autumn 1989 and courses which closed in nuclear engineering in 1988.

Mr. Jackson: My reply to the hon. Member for Meirionnydd Nant Conwy (Dr. Thomas) on 10 January reflected the position stated in the handbook for 1989 entry produced by the Universities Central Council on Admissions. I regret that this was incorrect. Further investigations have shown that Queen Mary and Westfield college, London university decided not to proceed with the indicated first-degree course in mechanical and nuclear engineering.

Higher Education Statistics

Mr. Andrew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will make a statement on his Department's decision no longer to collect advanced courses early statistics, with the reasons for this decision; and what assessment he has made of the impact of this decision on planning for higher education provision on a regional basis.

Mr. Jackson: Some 80 per cent. of enrolments in higher education in England outside the universities are in institutions funded by the Polytechnic and College Funding Council. That body is planning its own early statistics survey for next October, which should enable trends in enrolments to be estimated within broad subject-groups.

Displaced Persons

Ms. Armstrong: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science which local education authorities made applications for funding under section 210 of the Education Reform Act 1988 for displaced persons and refugees but were refused grants which (a) had reception centres-hostels for refugees and displaced people and (b) had a significant number of refugees in other accommodation; and on what grounds these applications were rejected.

Mr. Alan Howarth: The bids for funding in 1990-91 under section 210 of the Education Reform Act 1988 exceeded the total resources available. In accordance with the advice contained in the draft circular issued in July 1989 priority was given, as far as possible, to the maintenance of existing special provision. It was consequently not possible to allocate any grant in response to the applications from the London boroughs of Lambeth and Wandsworth in respect of new provision for displaced persons and refugees in reception centres-hostels and in other accommodation.

Ms. Armstrong: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what proportion of funding granted under section 210 of the Education Reform Act 1988 for displaced people and refugees was for (a) adults and (b) children; and what proportion was for (i) English language provision and (ii) advice and careers counselling.

Mr. Alan Howarth: About half the funding in 1990-91 is for adults and about half for children. Some 90 per cent. of the funding is for teaching provision including English language provision. Advice and careers counselling account for the remainder.

Ms. Armstrong: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what proportion of funding under section 210 of the Education Reform Act 1988 was made available for refugees as opposed to travellers for the year 1990-91.

Mr. Alan Howarth: The proportion of funding to be made available for refugees in 1990-91 is some 4 per cent. of the total.

Ms. Armstrong: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what funding has been made available under section 210 of the Education Reform Act 1988 for newly arrived refugees and asylum seekers from all nationalities who are living in reception centres or other accommodation in London; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Alan Howarth: The London borough of Richmond-upon-Thames has been allocated grant to support expenditure of £54,100 in 1990-91.

Local Management of Schools

Mr. Madden: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what adjustments and flexibility he has approved in respect of the implementation of LMS; and if he will list those local education authorities where such adjustment or flexibility has been agreed.

Mrs. Rumbold: I refer the hon. Member to the reply that I gave to the hon. Member for Carlisle (Mr. Martlew) on 8 May, Official Report, column 11.

Mr. Madden: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will list those local education authorities implementing LMS in (a) 1990-91 and (b) 1991-92.

Mrs. Rumbold: A total of 87 local authorities' schemes for LMS were approved to start from 1 April 1990. The 87 authorities are:

We shall continue to work with the 10 authorities, outside of inner London, that we were not able to approve this year, with the aim of getting approved schemes in place by April 1991. We want to keep delays to a minimum and will expect those authorities to phase in LMS according to the original timetable. Those 10 authorities are Croydon, Hereford and Worcester, Hertfordshire, Hillingdon, Isles of Scilly, Leicestershire, Manchester, Newham, Stockport, and Wirral.

Mr. Madden: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will list those local education authorities which have submitted requests to defer the implementation of LMS by (a) six months; (b) a year, and (c) for any other period.

Mrs. Rumbold: Of the 87 LEAs that have approved LMS schemes in force from 1 April 1990, we have received a representation from one seeking to defer implementation of the scheme.

Mr. Madden: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what arrangements there are in cases where a school, under LMS, requires a teacher to accept redundancy to determine who is liable to pay the appropriate redundancy payments.

Mrs. Rumbold: Section 46(5) of the Education Reform Act 1988 specifies that the costs incurred by a local education authority in respect of the dismissal or premature retirement, or for the purpose of securing the resignation, of any member of the staff of a school within the scope of an LMS scheme shall not be met from the school's budget except in so far as the authority has good reason for deducting those costs, or any part of those costs, from that share.

Mr. Madden: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will list the statutory provisions that relate to his duties in respect of implementation of a local management scheme by a local education authority; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Rumbold: The statutory provisions that relate to the duties of my right hon. Friend in respect of implementation of a local management scheme by a local education authority are:

(i) to consider the approval of a scheme prepared by a local education authority under section 33 of the Education Reform Act which—

(a) replaces a previous scheme; or
(b) makes a significant variation to a previous scheme;
(ii) to determine within 2 months of notification, whether a variation proposed by a local education authority as a minor variation, falls within the description of a minor variation;
(iii) to consult the local education authority in question before varying a scheme by direction;
(iv) to consider any appeal made by a governing body against—
(a) the imposition of any suspension of delegation;
(b) the refusal of a local education authority to revoke any such suspension of delegation or any review required;
(v) in the event of an appeal made by a governing body as described in (iv) above; a duty to;
(a) allow or reject the appeal;
(b) have regard to the gravity of the default on the part of the governing body and the likelihood of its continuance or recurrence;
(vi) to make Regulations under section 42 of the Education Reform Act.

British Airstrip, Antarctic

Ms. Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science whether the new British airstrip in the Antarctic will be used for purposes other than scientific research, except in cases of emergencies.

Mr. Jackson: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave to the hon. Member for Southwark and Bermondsey (Mr. Hughes) on 11 May.

Emphysema and Bronchitis

Mr. Strang: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science how much has been spent by the Medical Research Council on research into emphysema and bronchitis since 1988.

Mr. Jackson [holding answer 8 May 1990]: The expenditure on research into respiratory diseases which is in whole or part relevant to bronchitis and emphysema was as follows:

1987-88	1,845,301
1988-89	1,832,953

Figures for the financial year 1989-90 will be available in July from the Medical Research Council.

WALES

Gwynedd Health Authority

42. Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales whether he is satisfied with the financial control exercised by Gwynedd health authority in each of the two most recent financial years; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Grist: Subject to submission of the authority's accounts for 1989-90, it would appear that the authority has continued to keep its cash spending within the sums allotted by my right hon. Friend. However, it would also appear from reports received from the authority that its underlying financial position, as measured in terms of the balance between its income and expenditure in accruals terms, is once again deteriorating, following the limited progress which was made towards restoring financial balance during 1987-88 and 1988-89. This is, of course, disappointing; but my right hon. Friend will not be in a position to comment more substantially on the authority's performance in exercising financial control until (i) the authority has had an opportunity to consider the results of the study which its general manager is currently undertaking with the assistance of management consultants, (ii) the authority's response to that study has been discussed with Welsh Office officials as part of the next round of annual performance reviews and (iii) the statutory auditor's audit of the authority's 1989-90 accounts has been completed.

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what discussions his Department has had with Gwynedd health authority concerning the effects of the recent secretarial strike on the delivery of services in the county; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Grist: The effect of the secretarial strike on the delivery of health services in Gwynedd is a matter for the district health authority and Welsh Office officials have not been in discussion on this aspect.

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will publish in the Official Report the amount of capital expenditure on new facilities by Gwynedd health authority in 1988-89, 1989-90 and the projected level for such spending in 1990-91.

Mr. David Hunt: The information is not centrally available in the form requested since neither the annual accounts nor the 10-year capital programmes prepared by health authorities provide expenditure figures under the heading of "new facilities".

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will publish a list of the repayable loans made by the Welsh Office to Gwynedd health authority over the past five years indicating for each such loan the sum involved, the period for repayment and the interest charged.

Mr. David Hunt: The information requested is as follows:

Date of loan	Amount of loan £ million	Date repaid
1985-86	0·200	1986-87
1986-87	—	—
1987-88	1·450	1988-89
1988-89	0·738	1989-90
1989-90	—	—

No interest was charged on any of these loans.

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what are the terms of reference given to the current team of consultants appointed by the Welsh Office to study the problem facing Gwynedd health authority; and by what date they are required to present their report.

Mr. Grist: In common with other district health authorities in Wales, Gwynedd has been asked to submit a pathfinder procurement plan in June and has commissioned management consultants to help it prepare this plan. Together with other health authorities, Gwynedd has secured a measure of Welsh Office funding for this exercise.

In addition to the procurement plan project, Gwynedd health authority has asked the management consultants to assist in its review of its finances and services. I understand that the authority's report on the outcome of the review is likely to be considered by its members in June.

As the study is being carried out by Gwynedd health authority, details of its management consultants' terms of reference should be obtained from the DHA.

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales by what date Gwynedd health authority was due to attain a financial balance following the Welsh Office consultant's investigation undertaken in 1987; and if he will make a statement on progress to date.

Mr. David Hunt: The action plan which was drawn up by the general manager of the authority early in 1988 with the help of the management consultants, Deloitte, Haskins and Sells was aimed at bringing the authority back into financial balance by 1991-92. This action plan remains the basic strategy for the financial restructuring of the authority. However, in view of the length of time taken to realise some of the planned savings associated with service rationalisation measures within the action plan, some slippage on this target would seem inevitable. The question of a revised target date will be considered in due course in the light of the review of the authority's financial position which is currently being undertaken by the authority with the assistance of management consultants.

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what was the (a) revenue budget and (b) capital budget allocated by the Welsh Office to Gwynedd health authority for each of the years 1986-87, 1987-88, 1988-89 and 1989-90; and for each year what was the actual revenue and capital expenditure of the authority.

Mr. David Hunt: The information requested is as follows:

	Revenue cash limit £ million	Revenue charge against cash limit £ million	Capital cash limit £ million	Capital charge against cash limit[1] £ million
1986-87	49·905	49·903	1·388	1·389
1987-88	55·855	55·841	3·433	3·434
1988-89	62·614	62·637	1·860	1·859
1989-90	65·436	[2]65·397	2·829	[2]2·829

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales on how many occasions during the past 12 months a minister of his Department has (a) visited Gwynedd for purposes related to Gwynedd health authority or (b) met the chairman or members of Gwynedd health authority at a location other than in Gwynedd.

Mr. Grist: Ministers have met the chairman of the authority on four occasions during the last 12 months in London and south Wales. In addition, senior officials of the Welsh Office have visited and met the authority's chairman and officers frequently, and briefed me comprehensively on the key issues involved.

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales whether his Department approved the discontinuation by Gwynedd health authority of the nursing surveillance service.

Mr. Grist: No approval was needed or sought.

Sewage Discharges

Mr. John P. Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales (1) whether the announcement made on 5 March that the discharge of new sewage into the sea would be stopped will apply with equal force to discharges from Wales;

(2) whether he will make it his policy to ban the discharge of new sewage from Wales into the estuaries and seas round Wales and to set a timetable for completing the implementation of such a policy.

Mr. Michael: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales (1) whether he will make it his policy to ban the discharge of new sewage from Wales into the estuaries and seas around Wales and to set a timetable for completing the implementation of such a policy;

(2) whether the announcement made on 5 March that the discharge of new sewage into the sea would be stopped will apply with equal force to discharges from Wales.

Mr. Grist: The policies set out by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for the Environment on 5 March will apply to discharges from Wales. Discussions will be held with the National Rivers Authority, the Office of Water Services and the sewerage undertaker to work out the detailed arrangements for implementing this policy as soon as is practicable.

Mr. John P. Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales whether he will make it his policy that the new sewage outfall into the Severn estuary at Lavernock will include full secondary treatment works, and to require that design work takes into account this policy to avoid delay in the implementation of the scheme.

Mr. Michael: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales whether he will make it his policy that the new sewage outfall into the Severn estuary at Lavernock will include full secondary treatment works, and require that design work takes into account this policy to avoid delay in the implementation of the scheme.

Mr. Ian Grist: This is a matter for Dwr Cymru and the National Rivers Authority which are fully aware of and will take into account relevant Government policies.

Red Slime, Blackpill

Mr. Alan Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will seek urgent advice on the occurrence of a red slime on the beach at Blackpill, Swansea, on 7 May; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Grist: I am advised by the National Rivers Authority that it has analysed a sample of the slime which was found to comprise diatoms and flocs of iron particles. The iron flocs, which gave the slime an orange-brown colour, emanated from the River Clyne which receives a significant proportion of drainage from abandoned coal mines in the Dunvant and Killay areas and enters the sea at Blackpill. The ferruginous inputs from these mines are of relatively constant flow and thus have a much greater impact on the appearance of the river when river levels are low, as has been the case during the recent dry spell. The slime, though aesthetically unpleasant, does not in the opinion of environmental health officials threaten human or animal health.

Optical Services

Mr. Michael: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will commission research into the identification of cases of glaucoma in Wales in the past five years, the effectiveness of measures taken by opticians, general practitioners and hospitals in preventing deterioration of eyesight in patients during the same period, and the effect of Government policy on these matters with particular reference to the period from 1 April 1989.

Mr. David Hunt: I shall write to the hon. Gentleman and place a copy of my letter in the Library of the House.

Mr. Michael: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many new out-patient attendances at ophthalmic clinics were recorded in each quarter of (a) 1986, (b) 1987 and (c) 1988 in Wales as a whole.

Mr. David Hunt: The following table shows the number of new ophthalmology out-patients recorded in NHS hospitals in Wales:

Quarter Ended	Number
March 1986	9,247
June 1986	9,905
September 1986	9,678
December 1986	10,383
March 1987	9,616
June 1987	9,825
September 1987	9,531
December 1987	10,263
March 1988	11,545
June 1988	10,280
September 1988	10,242
December 1988	10,771

Mr. Michael: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many new out-patient attendances at ophthalmic clinics were recorded (a) in South Glamorgan and (b) in Wales in the last quarter of 1989.

Mr. David Hunt: The information is not yet available.

Mrs. Noreen Edwards

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales on what date Mrs. Noreen Edwards was first appointed to the chair of Gwynedd health authority and for what period; on what subsequent dates and for what periods of time she was reappointed; and on what date her present appointment terminates.

Mr. Grist: Mrs. Edwards was first appointed to chair the authority on 1 August 1982 for four years. She was reappointed on 1 August 1986 for a further four years to 31 July 1990.

Health Authorities

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will publish in the Official Report the acreage of land and the price realised for such land, arising from the sale of the land by each of the district health authorities in Wales since 1979.

Mr. Grist: The information is not immediately available in the form requested. I will write to the hon. Gentleman as soon as possible and will place a copy of my letter in the Library of the House.

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what is his estimate of the actual cost of wage and salary increases for each of the district health authorities in Wales in the financial year 1989-90; and what was the financial provision made by the Welsh Office in his revenue funding of each authority to meet wage and salary inflation in that year.

Mr. David Hunt: It is for each authority to decide how much of its annual increase in discretionary cash provision should be set aside for pay settlements in the light of the Chancellor of the Exchequer's Industry Act forecast of general inflation in the economy for the year in question and in the light of the particular composition of its work force. For 1989-90 the forecast of general inflation was 5 per cent. and the initial percentage increase in cash provision of district health authorities in Wales (by comparison with their 1988-89 final allocations) were as follows:

Clwyd	6·5
East Dyfed	8·8
Gwent	5·8
Gwynedd	5·8
Mid Glamorgan	6·1
Pembrokeshire	6·8
Powys	8·6
South Glamorgan	5·8
West Glamorgan	5·8

However, it should be noted that these initial discretionary cash increases were subsequently enhanced to take account of the contribution which the Government made towards the cost of meeting the recommendations of the pay review bodies covering doctors and dentists, nurses and professions allied to medicine. This supplementary funding was distributed by reference to paybill data for those categories of staff in authorities 1988-89 accounts and resulted in revised discretionary cash increases for Welsh district health authorities, prior to further enhancement in respect of White Paper requirements, as follows:

	Increase Per cent.
Clwyd	7·4
East Dyfed	9·6
Gwent	6·6
Gwynedd	6·6
Mid Glamorgan	7·0
Pembrokeshire	7·6
Powys	9·5
West Glamorgan	6·6

It is not possible to estimate the actual cost of pay settlements in 1989-90 without details of the number, grades, and so on of staff employed by each of the district health authorities in Wales during that year. Acccounts data will be submitted to the Welsh Office in June but these will give only the increase in total expenditure on the various categories of staff and will not distinguish the increase in pay levels from changes in the number or composition of staff.

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many established posts are currently frozen in each of the nine district health authorities in Wales; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Grist: The information requested is not held centrally. Staffing levels are operational issues for health authorities.

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he has any plans to improve the reporting procedures which enable him to monitor the financial performance and delivery of services of district health authorities in Wales; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Grist: The main mechanism for monitoring the performance of individual district health authorities is the annual review undertaken each autumn by the executive committee of the Health Policy Board. This provides the opportunity for a rigorous central assessment of local management action and performance, and constitutes a key channel of accountability to the Secretary of State in relation to each health authority's stewardship of health care services and the public moneys which fund them.

The annual review process is being developed to reflect the distinction between the purchaser and provider roles of district health authorities proposed in the White Paper "Working for Patients".

In addition to the annual review, health authorities are required to submit a wide range of financial and service specific returns within the year. These are analysed carefully, and kept under continuous review to ensure that they remain fit for purpose.

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what was the salary or fee paid to each of the chair persons of district health authorities in Wales during 1989-90; and what were the expenses paid to each of these persons.

Mr. Grist: In 1989-90, the chairmen of district health authorities in Wales received a flat-rate taxable honorarium of £12,462. Information about other expenses which may have been drawn from their own authorities is not held centrally.

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will publish a table showing the total sums paid by way of performance-related pay to senior managers in each of the new Welsh district health authorities in 1989-90; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Grist: No. I refer the hon. Gentleman to the reply I gave him on 15 March at column 346. Particulars of actual performance-related pay additions to salary made by employing authorities are confidential and information thereon is not held centrally.

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if, pursuant to his answer of 18 April to the right hon. and learned Member for Aberavon (Mr. Morris), Official Report, columns 932-33, he will publish a table showing for each of the district health authorities in Wales the level of capital allocation in 1990-91 and the corresponding figure in real terms for 1982-83; and what has been the percentage change in each instance.

Mr. David Hunt: The information requested is given in the table:

	Discretionary capital allocations 1990-91 £ million	Discretionary capital allocations 1982-83 expressed at 1990-91 prices £ million	Percentage change in allocation in period 1982-83 to 1990-91 percentage
Clwyd	6·277	1·520	313
East Dyfed	3·205	0·956	235
Gwent	6·184	1·924	221
Gwynedd	1·710	0·870	97
Mid Glamorgan	8·054	2·170	271
Pembrokeshire	1·968	0·306	543
Powys	1·113	0·454	145
South Glamorgan	7·938	2·574	208
West Glamorgan	8·072	1·483	444

Note:

The methodology used since 1984-85 in the distribution of capital resources for the discretionary use of district health authorities (which is reflected in the table above) is not comparable to that used previously. Prior to 1984-85 the distribution of discretionary capital resources between authorities was pro rata to the distribution of their recurrent revenue allocations. Since 1984-85, authorities; discretionary capital allocations have been determined by reference to a formula which was specifically devised for this purpose. The formula, which is population based, also takes into account the distribution of NHS capital stock throughout Wales. The distribution of the resources available for 1990-91 reflects the implementation of the second update of this capital formula.

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make it his policy to meet jointly the chairman of a district health authority in Wales together with hon. Members whose constituencies are served by that health authority when circumstances justify; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Grist: My right hon. Friend will continue to consider each request for a meeting on its individual merits.

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will publish a table showing the most recent figures available on the death rate for each district health authority in Wales with corresponding figures for five and 10 years previously.

Mr. David Hunt: The information requested is given in the table:

Welsh district health authorities	Crude death rate[1] 1988	1983	1978
Clwyd	12·6	12·9	13·6
East Dyfed	12·4	14·2	[2]14·3

[2] Heatlh Authorities were reorganised into nine District Health Authorities in 1982. For 1978 Pembrokeshire figures are shown with East Dyfed.

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will publish in the Official Report a table showing for each health authority area in Wales the number of cancer cases newly diagnosed in each of the last five years; and if he will show these figures as a proportion of the base population in each health authority district.

Mr. Grist: The most recently available information on cancer incidence rates in Wales is presented in "Cancer Registration in Wales, 1974-84" published in 1988. It is intended that full data in respect of the period 1984 to 1986 together with a commentary will be published during 1990.

Felinheli Bypass

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales why the engineer from his Department who had agreed to attend a public meeting at Felinheli on Friday 4 May failed to arrive at that meeting; why the person who did attend was not authorised to inform the meeting of the Welsh Office's latest information on the Felinheli bypass; and if he will review the workings of his Department to avoid the public being let down in this manner in future.

Mr. David Hunt: The terms of reference for the attendance of an official at the meeting were explained to those who made the request.

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what is the latest estimate of his Department of the date of commencement of work on the Felinheli bypass; by what date it is expected that land purchase will be completed; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. David Hunt: Felinheli bypass is programmed to start in the period April 1991 to March 1994 as shown in "Roads in Wales: Progress and Plans for the 1990s". Land purchase is programmed to meet this timetable.

Caernarfon Cottage Hospital

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what is the estimated cost of complying with each of the three conditions for closure of the Caernarfon cottage hospital laid down by the Welsh Office in its letter of 20 April, concerning alternative dental provision for the area; and by what date he expects each of these conditions to be met.

Mr. Grist: I shall write to the hon. Gentleman and place a copy of my letter in the Library of the House.

Madog Memorial Hospital

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what are the latest estimated annual savings of closing the Madog memorial hospital; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Grist: Following the issue of the Welsh Office's letters of 3 and 22 March 1989 which conveyed approval of Gwynedd health authority's proposals to close Madog memorial hospital, detailed issues relating to the closure are a matter for the health authority, subject to compliance with the relevant conditions set out in the letter of 3 March. The hon. Gentleman should therefore contact the health authority for further information.

Charities

Mr. Michael: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will commission research into the effect of Government funding in the Health Service on (a) the approach of NHS managers to charitable contributions, (b) the degree to which fund-raising is attracted to different areas of need within the Health Service and (c) the attitudes of fund-raising and charitable groups.

Mr. Grist: My right hon. Friend has no plans to do so.

NHS Trusts

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales whether he will take steps to ensure that in circumstances in which former trust hospitals are to be closed notwithstanding the provisions of section 88(2) of the National Health Service Act 1977, those hospital buildings will first be offered back to trustees, or acting trustees in the area, and that if such trustees wish to take over the hospital building, they shall not be required to pay more for them than was paid, if at all, by the National Health Service for them when they were taken over from the trustees.

Mr. Grist: No.

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list the hospitals and other units in Wales which have expressed an interest in seeking National Health Service trust status once the current legislation has reached the statute book.

Mr. Grist: No firm expressions of interest have been received to date.

Hospital Travel Costs

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what has been his expenditure in each of the last five years on the National Health Service hospital travel costs scheme in each of the district health authority areas in Wales.

Mr. David Hunt: The information requested was not identified separately in health authorities' accounts until 1985-86. The figures for the years since then are shown in the table:

	1985-86	1986-87	1987-88	1988-89
Clwyd	26·7	29·0	28·7	38·4
East Dyfed	13·4	12·2	12·0	18·0
Gwent	31·4	28·1	28·3	39·6

	1985-86	1986-87	1987-88	1988-89

South Glamorgan	61·6	54·9	60·2	77·7

However, it should be noted that prior to 1 April 1988 when responsibility for administering the scheme transferred wholly to district health authorities in Wales, some of the claims made under this scheme were met by local offices of the DHSS. The figures for 1985-86, 1986-87 and 1987-88 are therefore not directly comparable with those for 1988-89.

Hospital Services, Llangefni

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what was the average cost per in-patient day at (a) the Cefni hospital, Llangefni and (b) the Druid hospital, Llangefni, on the basis of the most recently available information.

Mr. David Hunt: Information on average costs per in-patient day is not centrally available. However, the average treatment costs per day per patient using a bed (both in-patients and day cases) are given on page 208 of "Welsh Health Costing Returns 1988-89" a copy of which is in the Library of the House. These costs exclude general services—catering, laundry, cleaning, administration, and so on—it being not possible to distribute these costs between patients using a bed and out-patients.

Sports Council for Wales

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales who appoints the members of the Sports Council for Wales.

Mr. Grist: The members are appointed by the Secretary of State for Wales.

Flooding, Towyn

Sir Anthony Meyer: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what help will be available to Towyn and the flood-affected areas to renovate their homes to a proper standard.

Mr. David Hunt: Owners of homes damaged by the floods will be eligible for up to 100 per cent. grants for approved expenditure subject to the test of resources under the new grant scheme to be introduced in seven weeks' time.

The test of resources for owner-occupiers will be similar to that for housing benefit.

Savings of £5,000 or less will be completely disregarded. Over £5,000 every £250 of savings will be treated as if it were £1 income. There will be no upper limit on capital or savings.

Below a certain income an owner will qualify for 100 per cent. grant on eligible works. The threshold will depend on individual family circumstances—for example a couple with two children would have a different threshold from a single person. In every case this income threshold will be £20 per week higher than housing benefit levels.

Where income exceeds the threshold, 20p in the pound of that excess will be regarded as available to help finance the works through a notional loan. The amount of grant will be the excess of the cost of works over the notional loan.

My Department has been holding discussions with Colwyn borough council to assist it in ensuring that the preparatory work is done now to enable applications to be processed and work to be undertaken immediately the scheme takes effect after 1 July 1990.

SOCIAL SECURITY

Incomes

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will list the average income for each county in England and Wales.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: Provisional estimates for 1987 were published by the Central Statistical Office in the July edition of "Economic Trends" (pages 116 and 117). Revised estimates for the same year will be published later this month in the April 1990 "Economic Trends".

Social Security Appeals

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is the average interval, in each region, between a social security appeal tribunal's oral hearing at which a decision is made and the notification of the decision to the claimant; and how much of this is attributable to administrative delay.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: The administration of social security appeal tribunals is the responsibility of the president of the Social Security Appeal Tribunals, His Honour Judge Holden, and the hon. Member may care to contact him direct.

Housing Benefit

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will list each of the (a) inquiries and (b) research products initiated by his Department into the housing benefit scheme.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard [holding answer 3 May 1990]: When the reformed housing benefit scheme was introduced in April 1988, the Department established, in conjunction with local authorities, the housing benefit management information system (HBMIS). This system enables the Department to collect information about housing benefit caseload on a regular basis. Caseload counts are carried out at quarterly intervals, and a survey of 1 per cent. of the housing benefit caseload is conducted on an annual basis.

In addition, the Department's officials make regular visits to local authorities to obtain feedback about the operation of the housing benefit scheme, and meet representatives of the local authority associations quarterly at the housing benefit standing committee.

In the period following the implementation of the reforms a number of research projects have been commissioned as follows:

(i) the reform of housing benefit—a project commissioned in 1986 which resulted in the publication by the Housing Centre Trust entitled 'Housing Benefit: A Discussion About Reform';

(ii) a special survey of amenity charges conducted by the social policy research unit at the university of York in 1986, the results of which formed part of the above mentioned publication and produced a working paper;

(iii) research into the housing benefit review system, commissioned from the social policy research unit, university of York in 1988, and due to report in the autumn of 1990;

(iv) research recently commissioned from the Institute of Public Finance, in relation to the formula used for distributing housing benefit administration costs subsidy, and due to be completed in the summer.

HEALTH

Hospital Catering

Mr. Robin Cook: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what was the cost of catering provisions per patient per day in each regional health authority in each year since 1979, expressed in cash and constant prices.

Mr. Dorrell: The information requested for the financial years 1979-80 to 1987-88 is shown in the table.

Hospital Beds (Statistics)

Mr. Battle: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what was the total available medical patient beds, not including beds for those with mental illness or mental handicap, for each year since 1979 for each Yorkshire and Humberside health authority.

Mr. Dorrell: The tables set out the available information on bed availability and in-patients treated.

Salmonella

Mrs. Gorman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement regarding the ending of the practice of publishing weekly the salmonella food poisoning figures, by the communicable disease surveillance centre in the PHLS communicable disease reports.

Mr. Dorrell: The change to monthly reporting of gastro-intestinal illness in the communicable disease report is part of a programme of general operational changes designed to produce more detailed and comprehensive reports.

Mrs. Gorman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how the figures for salmonella infections published in the PHLS-SVS update on salmonella infections are calculated; and whether the basis for calculation is different from that used for the communicable disease reports.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: To obtain the most complete picture possible, the public health laboratory service monitors the frequency of food poisoning in this country via a number of different surveillance systems. The figures published in the PHLS-SVS update on salmonella infection and those in the communicable disease report are both elements of PHLS surveillance. The two sets of figures are obtained in different ways. It is clearly noted in the "Update" that they cannot be directly compared. Moreover, trends cannot be deduced from any single set of figures but only by comparison of data over a prolonged period of time.

The "Update" figures relate to human isolates of salmonella sent to the PHLS Division of enteric pathogens for detailed identification and phage typing. The data in the CDR are derived from reports sent to the PHLS communicable disease surveillance centre.

Low Vision Clinics

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list, by region, those hospitals which have special low vision clinics.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: This information is not held centrally.

Funding (South West Thames)

Mr. Nelson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) whether he has received representations or discussed with the chairman of the South West Thames regional health authority the redistribution of funds within the region to assist underfunded district health authorities such as Chichester;

(2) whether he will list the financial allocations for current expenditure from the South West Thames regional health authority to each district health authority in the region for the years 1989-90 and 1990-91.

Mr. Dorrell: We have not received any representations or held discussions with the chairman of South West Thames regional health authority about these matters, although the chairman has kept the Department informed about Chichester health authority's financial position. The distribution of funds within the region is a matter for the regional health authority and information on the revenue allocations to individual districts is not held centrally. My hon. Friend may like to write to South West Thames regional health authority for this information.

Ambulance Service

Mr. Evennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what consideration he has given to transfering responsibility for emergency ambulance services to the fire service.

Mr. Dorrell: My right hon. and learned Friend the Secretary of State has recently considered this suggestion but concluded that the emergency service is and must remain an integral part of the National Health Service.

Maternity Care

Mr. Evennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) if he will list in the Official Report the unit cost per birth for in-patient maternity care in (a) Bexley health district and (b) the South East Thames health region for the last year for which figures are available; and if he will make a statement;

(2) if he will list in the Official Report the unit cost per birth for maternity services in (a) Bexley and (b) Dartford and Gravesham health districts for the last year for which figures are available; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Dorrell: I regret that the information is not available in the form requested.

Mr. Evennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list in the Official Report the revenue expenditure on maternity services in (a) Bexley and (b) Dartford and Gravesham health districts for the last year for which figures are available; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Dorrell: Revenue expenditure on maternity services (excluding general services overheads) for the financial year 1988-89 totalled £3·16 million for Bexley health authority and £3·74 million for Dartford and Gravesham health authority.

I understand that, because of the pattern of hospital provision in this part of Kent, and resultant attendance patterns, the expenditure of these districts do not relate solely to their resident populations.

Computer Costs

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) whether general practices which submit applications for the reimbursement of computer costs which meet Government criteria will automatically be paid in the current financial year if they submit their application in the next few months;

(2) how much money is in his 1990-91 budget for the reimbursement of computer costs for general practice; and what happens to applications for reimbursement if the budget is exhausted.

Mr. Dorrell: There has been made available £24 million in 1990-91 for direct reimbursement of general practice computing costs in England, the balance of expenditure being reimbursed indirectly through fees and allowances. Claims which meet the criteria will be paid in this financial year. Should funds become fully committed valid claims which are not paid in 1990-91 may be resubmitted in the next financial year. The resources available in Wales and Scotland are matters for my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Wales and my right hon. and learned Friend the Secretary of State for Scotland.

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many general practice budgets qualify for the fund for the reimbursement of computer costs.

Mr. Dorrell: All GP practices are entitled to claim up to 50 per cent. reimbursement of the costs of purchasing, upgrading or leasing computers. In addition, those practices which formally commit themselves to participation in the practice funding scheme will be eligible for a further 25 per cent. reimbursement of these costs.

Child Abuse

Miss Lestor: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what was the number of children in England and Wales on the at risk register for each of the last 10 years.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: The regular collection of information about children on all child protection registers in England and Wales commenced in 1989. The provisional number on the registers at 31 March 1989 was 42,800. Final figures for 1989 will be published in the summer. An initial survey of all registers was carried out in March 1988. The estimated number on the registers was 41,100 but there is some evidence of under-reporting in this total.

Cancer Patients, Yorkshire

Mr. O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what information his Department has on the number of people in the Yorkshire region who are registered on the Yorkshire regional cancer register for each of the health districts in the Yorkshire region.

Mr. Dorrell: This is a matter for the Yorkshire regional cancer registry.

Sugar

Miss Lestor: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps he is taking to publicise the findings of the Health Education Authority and the Committee on Medical Aspects of Food report on sugar consumption; and what steps he is taking to promote the reduction of dental caries by restraining the promotion of sweet substances through television advertisements aimed at children.

Mr. Dorrell: The Committee on Medical Aspects of Food report "Dietary Sugars and Human Disease" published on 12 December 1989 was accompanied by a press briefing and press release. Written answers to questions were given in both Houses and copies of the report were placed in the Library. Action on the report's recommendations is being taken forward by this and other Departments. The Health Education Authority has produced a detailed briefing paper for health professionals based on the report. The Health Education Authority is taking account of the recommendations in all its nutrition and dental education activities.

The Committee on Medical Aspects of Food report did not make any recommendations regarding the advertising of sweet substances. Responsibility for television advertising lies with my right hon. and learned Friend the Secretary of State for the Home Department.

Children (Employment)

Miss Lestor: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when he expects to implement the Employment of Children Act 1973; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: The Government have no plans to implement the Employment of Children Act 1973. All local authorities (except Isles of Scilly) have byelaws which regulate the hours and conditions of children's employment. The majority of byelaws follow departmental guidance of 1976 which is based on the proposed content of regulations under the 1973 Act.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Correspondence

Mr. Pawsey: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when the hon. Member for Rugby and Kenilworth will receive a reply to his letter dated 26 March referring to Mr. H. S. Richards of Harborough Magna near Rugby.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: My right hon. and noble Friend Lord Ferrers replied to this letter on 4 May.

Mr. Pawsey: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when the hon. Member for Rugby and Kenilworth will receive a reply to his letter dated 28 March referring to PC 241 C. R. Hall of Rugby police station.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: My right hon. and noble Friend Lord Ferrers replied to this letter on 10 May.

Mr. Kaufman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, pursuant to his answer of 30 April, Official Report, column 401, when he intends to write to the right hon. Member for Manchester, Gorton about Mrs. R. Sarwar, 209 Northmear road.

Mr. Waddington: I have written to the right hon. Member today.

Mounted Police Officers

Mr. Marlow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many mounted officers were involved in the charge during the recent community charge riots in London; and how many of these were female officers.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: I understand from the Commissioner of Police of the Metropolis that 49 mounted officers were deployed during the disturbances in central London on 31 March; nine of these officers were women.

Police (Capital Allocations)

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) if he will clarify the definition of equipment needed by police authorities and provided by their capital allocations;

(2) when he will publish a definition of the difference between revenue and capital in police authority spending on items costing less than £6,000.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Expenditure for capital purposes is defined by section 40(2) of the Local Government and Housing Act 1989. Neither the Act nor the regulations made under it contain any 'de minimis' provision under which items below a certain value can be excluded from the definition of expenditure for capital purposes.

Consideration is being given to the need for further guidance to police authorities on police capital expenditure.

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will provide police authorities with longer prior notice of their capital allocations than the period given to Gwent police authority in February in the current year.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Every effort will be made to provide this information as early as possible.

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) when funds for site acquisition for Monmouth police station will be received by the Gwent police authority;

(2) when the capital approval for fees for the Abertillery police station will be made.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: No application has been received from the Gwent police authority for approval to the acquisition of a site for Monmouth police station or for approval of the planning fees in respect of Abertiliery police station.

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will review the Home Office minor works cost limits for police authorities' budgets.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: My right hon. and learned Friend has no present plans to review these limits.

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he has any plans to assist police authorities in their planned purchase of capital items in the current year, based on 1989 capital spending.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: The provision made in the Government's expenditure plans for grant and credit approvals for police capital expenditure in the current financial year has been allocated to police authorities in proportion to their planned spending with full allowance made for expenditure which has been contractually committed.

Birmingham Pub Bombings

Mr. Mullin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department to whom the inquiry by the Devon and Cornwall police into aspects of the Birmingham pub bombings inquiry will report in the first instance.

Mr. Waddington: The Devon and Cornwall constabulary will report the outcome of its inquiries into this case to the chief constable of the West Midlands police, on whose behalf the inquiries are being undertaken. The chief constable of the West Midlands police will, in turn, report to me.

Football Licensing Authority

Mr. Ashton: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he expects the Football Licensing Authority to be functioning; and what is the reason for the delay in setting it up.

Mr. John Patten: My right hon. and learned Friend made a commencement order under the Football Spectators Act 1989 on 21 March providing for the Football Licensing Authority to be set up from 1 June 1990. Appointments to the authority in the light of its role following the final report by Lord Justice Taylor will be made as quickly as possible.

Mr. Ashton: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what powers he expects the proposed Football Licensing Authority to have with regard to the prevention of hooliganism.

Mr. John Patten: When considering the issue, renewal, suspension or revocation of a licence to admit spectators to a football ground the Football Licensing Authority will have regard to whether the equipment provided, procedures used and other arrangements in force on the premises are such as are reasonably required to prevent the commission or minimise the effects of offences at designated football matches held there.

Sugar

Miss Lestor: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will bring forward proposals to restrict the promotion of sugary substances through advertising on television aimed at children.

Mr. Mellor: Responsibility for what is advertised on independent television is a matter for the Independent Broadcasting Authority, principally through its code of advertising standards and practice. It was drawn up in consultation with the IBA's medical advisory panel, and contains guidance on the advertising of confectionery and snack foods.

Forensic Pathology

Mr. Gareth Wardell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he has now received the working party report on forensic pathology to which he referred on 16 February 1989, Official Report, column 310.

Mr. Waddington: I have received the report and expect to announce my response to it shortly.

Obscene and Threatening Phone Calls

Mr. Michael: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) if he will give immediate consideration to the value to crime prevention and nuisance prevention of the system operated in New Jersey which enables a customer to order the number of the last call to be recorded;

(2) whether he has been able to consider American evidence on the reduction of crime as a result of the operation of calling line identity systems particularly in relation to obscene and threatening phone calls; and if he will make a statement;

(3) if he will sponsor immediate research into the likely benefits to criminal investigation and crime prevention of calling line identity systems, particularly in respect to obscene and threatening phone calls in the United Kingdom.

Mr. John Patten: We are watching closely the latest technological advances aimed at curbing obscene or threatening telephone calls, and are aware of the recently published American research into caller-ID or call trace systems. The research has emphasised the importance of carefully monitoring the effects of the new technology on reducing obscene and threatening phone calls. The Home Office is planning appropriate action along precisely these lines, as part of the Hull safer cities project, where funding of over £19,000 has been approved for an assessment of the effects of a modest call-tracing system to be operated in Hull by Kingston Communications, the local telephone company. The work will start next year.

Demonstrations

Mr. Winnick: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what are the criteria that determine which organisations' marches and demonstrations are normally photographed by the police;

(2) what is the policy of police forces on photographs being taken of those involved in peaceful marches and demonstrations; and if he will ensure that such practices cease unless there is overwhelming need on grounds of public security for such photographs being taken.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Guidelines issued by the Home Office on the use of equipment in police surveillance operations which are available in the Library make it clear that photographs and video surveillance equipment should be used by the police only when it is necessary for the efficient conduct of police operations and with due regard for the invasion of privacy which may result in particular circumstances.

Subject to the advice given in the guidelines, the use of surveillance devices is an operational matter for the police.

Mr. Winnick: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, pursuant to his reply of 10 May, on how many occasions in each of the last five years his Department has requested a report from a police force about a public procession or assembly held in the force area.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: The Department has contracts at various levels within police forces which may be asked to provide information about public processions and assemblies where there is a risk of public disorder or where disorder has occurred. Reports may be obtained by phone or by correspondence depending on the circumstances. No central record is kept of the number of occasions when information about processions and assemblies has been requested from the police.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Hong Kong

Mr. Leighton: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what were the numbers of people immigrating into and emigrating out of Hong Kong in each of the last 10 years.

Mr. Maude: According to Hong Kong Government statistics, the figures for immigration into Hong Kong in each of the last 10 years were as follows:

	For Settlement	For other purposes[1]
1980	55,313	42,440
1981	54,267	31,035
1982	53,847	36,121
1983	26,701	23,361
1984	27,755	23,454
1985	27,285	28,475
1986	27,111	30,559
1987	27,268	34,394
1988	28,137	44,009
1989	27,263	54,055

[1] Employment, study, training, etc.

The estimated figures for emigration from Hong Kong were as follows:

	Numbers
1980	22,400
1981	18,300
1982	20,300
1983	19,800
1984	22,400
1985	22,300
1986	19,000
1987	30,000
1988	45,800
1989	42,000

Most of those who immigrated for settlement were family reunification cases from the mainland. Those who immigrated for employment were mainly unskilled and semi-skilled labour.

By contrast, 50 per cent. of those who emigrated in the last five years were managerial, professional, administrative and technical staff and their families. There is, therefore, a net outflow of key staff.

EC Voting

Mr. Leighton: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs which matters within the European Community Council of Ministers are decided by qualified majority vote and which by unanimity.

Mr. Maude: Certain articles of the treaty of Rome require unanimity—for example, article 99 on tax—others qualified majority—for example, article 100A on the single market or article 43 on agriculture. The Commission proposal should be based on whichever article is appropriate for the subject matter in question. The treaty base proposed by the Commission can be altered by the unanimous decision of member states.

Soviet Union

Dr. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, pursuant to the oral answer of the right hon. Member for Bristol, West (Mr. Waldegrave) of 4 April, Official Report, column 1187, which section of the Helsinki Accord recognises, de facto, the existing borders in the Soviet Union; and which section of the Accord states that any boundary changes should be conducted by negotiation.

Mr. Maude: The first of the principles guiding relations between participating states, the first substantive section of the Helsinki Final Act, states that the frontiers of participating states "can be changed, in accordance with international law, by peaceful means and by agreement".

Principle III covers the inviolability of frontiers.

Mark Kotlyar

Mr. John Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations have been made to the Russians about their repeated refusal to grant an exit visa to Mark Kotlyar of Kiev who first applied for an exit visa in 1978.

Mr. Maude: None. However, we shall in future include this case among those on which we press the Soviet authorities. We shall not let up until the case is resolved satisfactorily.

Antarctica

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many representations he has received from (a) hon. Members and (b) others with regard to conservation policies for Antarctica; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Sainsbury: Her Majesty's Government have received 485 letters from right hon. and hon. Members on behalf of constituents and a further 280 direct from members of the public. The Government share the widespread concern to ensure protection of the Antarctic environment and believe that the convention on the regulation of Antarctic mineral resource activities will make an important contribution to this objective.

Global and Technical Management Services

Mr. Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if there was any contact between Her Majesty's embassy, Baghdad and Global and Technical Management Services (International) Ltd., registered in Edinburgh, regarding possible contracts.

Mr. Sainsbury: In the light of the continuing investigations by Customs and Excise into certain exports to Iraq, it would be wrong for me to comment further.

HOUSE OF COMMONS

Television Experiment

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Lord President of the Council if he will make a statement on the progress of the television experiment.

Sir Geoffrey Howe: The televising experiment has now been under way for some five months and has so far proceeded with very few technical problems. The Select Committee on Televising of Proceedings of the House, which I chair, is currently reviewing the experiment and has sought the views of the broadcasters, the political parties represented in the House, Chairmen of Select and Standing Committees, and individual Members. The Committee will consider carefully all the evidence before coming to its conclusions. It is expected that the Committee's Report will be published in time to enable the House to reach a decision on the question of permanent televising before the start of the summer Adjournment.

Payroll Giving

Mr. Hanley: To ask the Lord President of the Council, how many hon. Members currently take advantage of the payroll giving scheme by deduction from their parliamentary salaries.

Sir Geoffrey Howe: There are currently 51 Members who have authorised deductions from their parliamentary salaries under the payroll giving scheme.

Stationery

Ms. Walley: To ask the Lord President of the Council what urgent measures are being introduced to increase the recycled component of stationery in the House.

Sir Geoffrey Howe: A number of steps have already been taken to increase the use of recycled paper in stationery used by the House. Further measures are at present being considered by the Accommodation and Administration Sub-Committee.

ENERGY

Electricity Prices

13. Mr. Murphy: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what representations he has received regarding price increases for electricity in England and Wales in 1990, 1991 and 1992.

Mr. Baldry: I have received a number of representations about prices.

22. Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what has been the average increase in electricity prices since 1979; what was the increase between 1974 and 1979; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Baldry: For domestic customers the average increase since 1979 has been 8 per cent. a year and for industrial customers it was 6 per cent. a year. Between 1974 and 1979 the increases were 20 per cent. a year for domestic customers and 17 per cent. a year for industrial customers.

The last five years of this Government have seen industrial prices decrease by some 7 per cent. in real terms. Under the last five years of Labour they increased by 1 per cent.

Under the last five years of Labour domestic prices increased by 22 per cent. in real terms. Under the last five years of this Government—even after the April increase—they will have fallen by approximately 4 per cent. in real terms.

Home Energy Conservation

14. Mr. Ray Powell: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what policies he has to encourage further progress in home energy conservation.

Mr. Peter Morrison: My Energy Efficiency Office is pursuing a number of initiatives to encourage the more efficient use of energy in the home.

40. Mr. Rathbone: To ask the Secretary of State forEnergy what representations he has received recently about Government plans to encourage energy conservation in existing housing in Britain.

Mr. Peter Morrison: I have received a number of representations, including responses to my Department's consultation paper on the proposals for the home energy efficiency scheme.

Offshore Oil and Gas

15. Mr. David Nicholson: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what is his estimate of the stock of fixed capital investment in offshore oil and gas fields.

33. Mr. Michael Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what is his estimate of the stock of fixed capital investment on offshore oil and gas fields.

Mr. Peter Morrison: Some £65,000 million, at today's prices, has been invested in offshore oil and gas fields.

Gas Prices

16. Mr. Jack: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy by how much gas prices for industrial customers have increased during the last five years.

Mr. Peter Morrison: My hon. Friend will be delighted to hear that in the last five years gas prices to industrial consumers are estimated to have fallen by 41 per cent. in real terms.

Energy Efficiency

17. Mr. Beith: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what contribution increases in energy efficency are expected to make to reducing the greenhouse effect and reducing the rate of depletion of fossil fuels.

Mr. Peter Morrison: Improvements in energy efficiency make a substantial contribution to the containment of the world's emissions of greenhouse gases and to limiting the rate of depletion of fossil fuels.

31. Mr. Wallace: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what steps have been taken to maximise energy efficiency measures within his Department.

Mr. Peter Morrison: My Department's new headquarters, to which it moved in September 1989, has an up-to-date electronic building energy management system designed to optimise the operation of all the electrical and mechanical services. Staff in my Department, PSA building maintenance and their contractors have been trained to enable them to get the best out of the system and optimise energy efficiency within the building. In other buildings in which the Department is an occupant, energy managers have been appointed to identify cost-effective measures for improving energy efficiency.

Colliery Employment

18. Mr. Hood: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what is his most up-to-date estimate of United Kingdom colliery employment in the year 2003; and if he will make a statement.

24. Mr. Meale: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what is his most up-to-date estimate of United Kingdom colliery employment in the year 1998; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Baldry: The Government do not make estimates of future manpower levels in the coal industry.

Energy Sources

19. Mr. Knox: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy when he next proposes to have discussions with the European Council of Ministers about alternative sources of energy.

Mr. Peter Morrison: My right hon. Friend expects to attend the Council of Energy Ministers on 21 May. That Council will consider the Commission's communication on energy and the environment and the proposed Thermie scheme for promoting energy technology which is substantially concerned with alternative energy sources.

Greenhouse Effect

20. Mrs. Gorman: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy if he will obtain for his Department's library copies of the books, "The Greenhouse Trap" by John L. Daly and "Scientific Perspectives on the Greenhouse Problem", produced by the George C. Marshall Institute in Washington DC.

Mr. Peter Morrison: Primary United Kingdom responsibility for assessing the scientific basis of the greenhouse effect rests with the Department of the Environment, the Meteorological Office, and the Department of Education and Science. The main world forum for considering the implications of the enhanced greenhouse effect is the UN-based Intergovernmental Panel on Climate Change (IPCC), whose science working group report is the most up-to-date assessment of the problem and is due to be finalised at the end of this month. The Department of the Environment and the Meteorological Office are aware of the Marshall Institute report, and have ensured that it was taken into account by the IPCC science working group. My right hon. Friend does not intend to obtain the books mentioned for his own Department's library.

British Gas

21. Mr. Riddick: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy if he will list the principal regular subjects of discussion at meetings between himself and the chairman of British Gas on which he answers to Parliament.

Mr. Peter Morrison: My right hon. Friend and I meet the chairman of British Gas regularly to discuss a range of issues in relation to the gas industry.

Pollutant Gases

23. Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what plans he has to limit emissions of pollutant gases.

Mr. Peter Morrison: Emissions of acid gases by the electricity generators are governed by the requirement to comply with the European Community large combustion plant directive.

Renewable Energy Sources

25. Mr. Livsey: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy if he will make a further statement on the projections contained within Energy Paper 55.

Mr. Peter Morrison: As I told the Hon. Member for Gordon (Mr. Bruce) on 19 February, Official Report, column 527, the projections for the long-term contributions to energy supply from different renewables contained in Energy Paper 55 are kept under review. As results from the Department's R and D programme become available and circumstances change estimates are revised.

41. Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what percentage of power generation he expects to come from renewable sources in 1995 and 1998.

Mr. Peter Morrison: Renewable energy technologies are at an early stage of development. No estimates are available for the 1990s. Estimates of the longer-term contribution that could be made by each renewable energy source in the year 2025 have been published in Energy Paper 55, copies of which are in the Library of the House.

Mr. Barry Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what resources are being provided by his Department for 1990-91 for research into developing alternative and renewable sources of energy.

Mr. Peter Morrison: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer I gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Wyre (Mr. Mans) earlier today.

Margam New Mine

26. Mr. Win Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy when he expects to see progress on developing the Margam new mine.

Mr. Baldry: The timing and priority of major coal industry projects such as the Margam new mine is a matter for British Coal in the light of the overall capital allocation available to it and the commercial objectives agreed with the Government.

Sizewell B

27. Dr. Kim Howells: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what is his most up-to-date estimate of the cost of completing Sizewell B nuclear power station and the cost of electricity from it per kilowatt hour.

Mr. Baldry: The most recent estimate for the capital cost of Sizewell B, derived from evidence given to the Hinkley Point C inquiry in September 1989 by the CEGB, is £1,870 million at 1987 prices. The cost of electricity from the station is a matter for Nuclear Electric plc, which operates the station.

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy how much public money to date has been spent on the Sizewell B project.

Mr. Baldry: A total of £841 million has been spent on the construction of Sizewell B to date and £1,496 million has been committed. Both figures are at April 1987 prices.

Cornwall Hot Rocks Project

28. Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what progress has been made with the Cornwall hot rocks project.

Mr. Peter Morrison: The research on geothermal hot dry rocks being carried out by the Camborne school of mines in Cornwall is progressing to schedule. The current programme is conducting experimental work on the existing reservoir at 2·5km depth and undertaking a conceptual design study for a 6km deep system which will be required to give the necessary temperatures for electricity generation.

A review of progress of the programme and future possibilities is currently in train.

National Power

29. Mr. Allen McKay: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy when he expects to announce the name of the new chairman of National Power; and what remuneration he will have.

Mr. Baldry: I hope to make an announcement shortly. Remuneration will need to be appropriate for the post.

34. Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy when he expects to announce the appointment of a chairman of National Power; and what are his criteria for making the appointment.

Mr. Baldry: I hope to make an announcement shortly. Appropriate experience, leadership qualities and management skills are the main criteria for appointment.

Homes Insulation

30. Mr. David Martin: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy how many houses have been insulated since 1982 as a result of Government grants.

Mr. Peter Morrison: Some 3·5 million homes have benefited from grants to loft, tank and pipe insulation under the homes insulation scheme since 1982. Over the same period, community insulation projects, which provide a low-cost insulation—mainly draughtproofing —service for low-income households, have insulated over three quarters of a million homes.

Nuclear Electric

32. Mr. Cunliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy when he expects to announce the conclusion of his review into the accounts of Nuclear Electric plc.

Mr. Baldry: This review is the responsibility of the company and its auditors, although the Department is, of course, involved in the discussions. The company's accounting policies will be explained in the annual report and accounts, which will be published in the summer.

Lead-free Petrol

35. Mr. Burns: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what figures he has for sales of lead-free petrol (a) in the United Kingdom and (b) in other European countries.

Mr. Peter Morrison: The latest figures available for the United Kingdom are for March 1990 and these show that about 31 per cent. of petrol sold was unleaded. The Department does not collect information on sales of unleaded petrol in other European countries. However, the July 1990 issue of Petroleum Review is expected to publish figures on the market share of unleaded petrol in member states of the European Communities in 1989.

Sulphur Emissions

36. Mr. Patchett: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what representations he has received on his proposals to meet the EEC regulations for the reduction of sulphur emissions from large combustion plants.

Mr. Baldry: I have received a number of representations on the manner in which the electricity industry should meet its share of the reductions required by the directive.

Oil Yard Platform Construction, Kishorn

37. Mr. Kennedy: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy if he will assess the potential for the oil yard platform construction site at Kishorn, Wester Ross; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Morrison: It is not possible for me to assess the potential for individual yards as contracts will be won by those who meet the technical and commercial criteria of the operators. However, the prospects for the United Kingdom supplies industry, including the fabrication yards, look very good for the foreseeable future with new investment for 1990 alone estimated at £3·7 billion.

Electricity Privatisation

38. Mr. Mullin: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what is his most up-to-date assessment of the gross Exchequer cost of privatising the electricity supply industry.

Mr. Baldry: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave to the hon. Member for Rutherglen (Mr. McAvoy) on 26 March 1990 at column 85.

British Coal

39. Mr. Buckley: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy when he last met the chairman of British Coal to discuss the coal industry.

Mr. Baldry: My right hon. Friend meets the chairman of British Coal regularly to discuss all aspects of the coal industry.

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy if he will list the members of the board of British Coal, giving in each case the date of their appointment and its duration.

Mr. Wakeham: The original dates of appointment of each of the members of the British Coal Corporation and the duration of their appointments are as follows:

Sir Robert Haslam Chairman, 1 November 1985 to 31 December 1990 (five years).

Mr. J. H. Northard CBE Deputy Chairman, 1 April 1986 to 31 March 1991 (five years).

Mr. D. Kendall Deputy Chairman, 1 April 1989 to 31 December 1990 (one year, nine months).

Mr. M. J. Edwards (full-time), 1 April 1986 to 31 March 1991 (five years).

Mr. M. H. Butler (full-time), 1 April 1986 to 31 March 1991 (five years).

Mr. K. Moses (full-time), 1 April 1986 to 31 March 1991 (five years).

Mr. C. Barker (part-time), 13 February 1984 to 12 February 1991 (seven years).

Sir Ronald Dearing (part-time), 1 June 1988 to 31 May 1991 (three years).

Dr. T. J. Parker (part-time), 1 September 1986 to 31 August 1992 (six years).
Dr. D. Atterton (part-time), 1 September 1986 to 31 August 1992 (six years).
Mr. D. Walker (part-time), 1 July 1988 to 30 June 1991 (three years).
Mr. J. P. Erbe (part-time), 1 June 1989 to 31 May 1992 (three years).

United Kingdom Continental Shelf

Mr. John Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy if he will make a statement on the forecast level of drilling activity on the United Kingdom continental shelf during the coming year.

Mr. Peter Morrison: I refer my hon. Friend to my reply to my hon. Friends the Members for Battersea (Mr. Bowis) and for Wanstead and Woodford (Mr. Arbuthnot) on 26 March 1990, at columns 89-90.

Mr. Boswell: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what is his estimate of how much gas has been produced on the United Kingdom continental shelf since the first significant discoveries.

Mr. Peter Morrison: The cumulative total production of gas from the United Kingdom continental shelf up to the end of 1989 was 735,724 million cu m, of which 170 million cu m have been produced onshore.

Electrical Appliances

Mr. McAvoy: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what assessment he has carried out of the progress being made towards more efficient home electrical appliances.

Mr. Peter Morrison: My Energy Efficiency Office recently received the report of the study of the electrical appliances which it commissioned last year. The report is now being considered.

Landfill Gas

Mr. Stern: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy how large a United Kingdom market he now envisages for the use of landfill gas.

Mr. Peter Morrison: At the present time, 35 landfill gas schemes are operational and a further 30 are at the planning stage. Of the existing schemes, 13 are generating electricity with a capacity of 16 MW. The additional schemes planned will increase such capacity to about 60 MW.

Leukaemia, Sellafield

Mr. McFall: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what consultations he has carried out on the Gardner report on the cause and effect of leukaemia at and around Sellafield and its implications for the electricity generation industry.

Mr. Baldry: I have discussed the results of the case control study by Professor Gardner with a number of representatives from the nuclear industry including British Nuclear Fuels plc and associated trade unions.

In view of the importance of this complex matter the Government referred Professor Gardner's study to the Committee on the Medical Aspects of Radiation in the Environment (COMARE). Its preliminary advice was given on 2 April and I refer the hon. Member to the answer given by my hon. Friend the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Health on that day to the question from the hon. Member for Copeland (Dr. Cunningham), at columns 430-34.

Further studies following on from the Black report and from recommendations made by COMARE and accepted by Government are, I understand, currently under way or are being planned. The Health and Safety Executive and the nuclear industries, British Nuclear Fuels in particular, have also commissioned a series of other complementary studies.

Mr. Frank Cook: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy if he intends to introduce measures to amend the Nuclear Installations Act 1965 to extend the 30-year statute of limitation on claims for compensation for injury and for death caused by breach of duty by any site licensee under that Act, in the light of the Gardner report's indication that there may be a causal relationship between radiation doses received by workers at Sellafield and the excess of leukaemias among their children.

Mr. Baldry: The Government have no plans to do so.

Power Stations

Mr. Teddy Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what progress has been made in reducing the level of those emissions from power stations which are regarded as being damaging to the environment; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Baldry: Latest available published information shows that for the period 1980 to 1988 SO_2 emissions from coal-fired power stations in the United Kingdom fell from 3,007,000 tonnes to 2,618,000 tonnes. Similarly, NO_2 emissions fell from 880,000 tonnes to 792,000 tonnes. In compliance with the European Community large combustion plants directive, further reductions in SO_2 and NO_2 levels can be expected.

[Source: Digest of Environmental Statistics.]

Electricity Supply Industry

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy whether he has yet appointed the advertising agency for the electricity supply industry flotation.

Mr. Wakeham: In conjunction with the regional electricity companies, I jointly appointed WCRS Mathews Marcantonio on 10 May 1990 to handle the advertising campaign to publicise the forthcoming flotations of the regional electricity companies, planned for November 1990.

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy if he will list those electricity supply industry companies which have current Treasury guarantees, giving the amount guaranteed and the dates the guarantee was given in each case.

Mr. Wakeham: Guarantees, given under section 79(1) of the Electricity Act 1989, are as follows:

Company	Amount £ million	Date
PowerGen	25	30 March 1990
	50	4 April 1990

Company	Amount £ million	Date
Southern Electric plc	5	30 March 1990
	10	30 March 1990
South Western Electricity plc	5	18 April 1990
	5	18 April 1990
Eastern Electricity plc	5	18 April 1990
South Wales Electricity plc	10	18 April 1990
	15	18 April 1990
	3	18 April 1990
Manweb plc	40	30 March 1990
	10	30 March 1990
Norweb plc	25	25 April 1990
	25	25 April 1990
Nuclear Electric plc	10	4 April 1990

Similar arrangements applied prior to vesting day and continue to apply to nationalised industries. The provision of a Government guarantee enables the borrower to negotiate finer terms and reduces the cost to the public sector as a whole. A list of public sector bodies whose borrowings are guaranteed by the Treasury is published each year in the supplementary statement to the Consolidated Fund and National Loan Fund accounts.

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy whether the appointment of the advertising agency for the electricity supply industry flotation is the subject of competitive tender.

Mr. Wakeham: Yes.

Cash Limits

Mr. Andy Stewart: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy whether any changes will be made to his Department's cash limit or running cost limit for 1990-91.

Mr. Peter Morrison: Subject to parliamentary approval of the necessary revised estimate, the cash limit for class V, vote 3 and the running costs limit for the Department of Energy will be reduced by £200,000 from £39,517,000 to £39,317,000 and from £42,170,000 to £41,970,000 respectively. The reduction follows recent agreement that the Department of Energy should no longer take financial provision for that part of the United Kingdom mission in Vienna which deals with the affairs of the International Atomic Energy Agency. Responsibility for these costs will in future rest with the FCO.

SCOTLAND

Supply Index

Mr. Devlin: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement about his Department's decision not to participate in the Government supply index.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The Scottish Office has monitored the development of this commercially produced information system, which is based on the exchange of information on prices paid by Government Departments and others for a range of specified products. Having regard to the range of items covered and the particular nature of Scottish Office purchasing, it concluded that subscription to the index was not a priority. The Scottish Office is however currently exploring the introduction of improved management information and operating systems for purchasing. As part of this, consideration will be given to the use of price indices, of which the Government supply index is one option.

Local Enterprise Companies

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement on the implications of the establishment of LECs for the opportunities for hon. and right hon. Members to refer matters relating to training provision to the Parliamentary Commissioner for Administration.

Mr. Lang: As private companies under the Companies Acts, local enterprise companies are outwith the jurisdiction of the Parliamentary Commissioner for Administration. Complaints about matters relating to training provision made by local enterprise companies should therefore be referred to the companies themselves, which will be obliged by the terms of their contracts to operate a complaints procedure, under which an individual with a complaint can be assured that his or her case will be duly considered by the chief executive of the local enterprise company, and if necessary by the chairman.

Social Work Departments

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what reports he has received about the adverse performance of any regional social work departments; and whether they are publicly available.

Mr. Lang: The only reports received on the performance of regional social work departments are those of investigations carried out by staff and requested by authorities themselves. They are confidential to the local authorities concerned.

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what resources he has to monitor performance levels and standards of care in regional social work departments.

Mr. Lang: I have the services of 21 professional staff in the Scottish Office's social work services group for such advice on aspects of regional social work departments' performance as is required.

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what powers he has to intervene in the operations of a regional social work department.

Mr. Lang: My right hon. and learned Friend has powers in the Social Work (Scotland) Act 1968 to make regulations governing the performance of local authorities' functions under that Act and for certain other purposes. In terms of section 5 of that Act local authorities are required to operate under his general guidance, and, finally, he has default powers under section 211 of the Local Government (Scotland) Act 1973 where a local authority fails to carry out its statutory functions.

Training

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland, pursuant to his answer of Tuesday 8 May, what considerations lead him to regard information about the number of placements with particular placement providers as commercially confidential.

Mr. Lang: Details of YTS and employment training placements are the subject of commercial contracts between the firms or organisations offering placements and managing agents or training managers. My right hon. and learned Friend is not a party to such contracts and he is therefore not at liberty to divulge the contents of these contracts without the consent of the contracting parties.

Social Work Services Group

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what is the Social Work Services Group's inspection role; how it fulfils that role; and what publicly available reports it has produced.

Mr. Lang: Regular inspections of social work services are confined to those services directly registered with the Secretary of State (adoption agencies and secure accommodation for children). Reports on these services are confidential to the Secretary of State.

Explosives (Clyde)

Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland, further to his statement on the dumping of explosives in the Clyde, Official Report, 8 May, columns 28-32, when and how the cleaning up of the dumped explosives will take place; whom he expects to pay for the clear-up; what consideration he has given to arrangements for compensation to fishermen for loss of income due to abandoned catches; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Lang: A DAFS research vessel has begun a survey of the Birch Point site, and its surrounding area. Any further action required will be determined in the light of the results of that survey.

Mr. Wilson: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement on the discovery of quantities of explosive devices and materials in areas of the Firth of Clyde not designated for dumping.

Mr. Lang [holding answer 10 May 1990]: I refer the hon. Gentleman to the statement I made on 8 May in response to a private notice question from the hon. Member for Carrick, Cumnock and Doon Valley (Mr. Foulkes).

A DAFS research vessel will begin a survey of the Birch Point dump site, and the surrounding area, on 14 May. Any further action required will be determined in the light of the results of that survey.

Dumping of explosive material at Birch Point, under licence issued by my right hon. and learned Friend, ceased in 1989. No further licences will be issued.

Mr. Wilson: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if the Lord Advocate will institute inquiries into the disposal of explosive devices and materials in areas of the Firth of Clyde not designated for dumping.

Mr. Lang: [holding answer 10 May 1990]: Evidence of dumping of explosive or other material in contravention of the Food and Environment Protection Act 1985 should be referred to the appropriate procurator fiscal, but I am not aware of any such evidence.

A DAFS research vessel will begin a survey of the Birch Point dump site and its surrounding area on 14 May. Any further action required will be determined once that survey and other investigations are completed.

Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what information he has about the location and containment of explosive material dumped by ICI in the Firth of Clyde; if he will institute an inquiry into the circumstances of the dumping; if he will ensure that action is taken to remove the danger and that those responsible bear the cost of the clearing up; if he will now reconsider the arrangements for dumping of explosive material in the Clyde estuary; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Lang [holding answer 10 May 1990]: I refer the hon. Gentleman to the statement I made in response to his private notice question on 8 May.

A DAFS research vessel will begin a survey of the Birch Point dump site, and the surrounding area, on 14 May. Any further action required will be determined in the light of the results of that survey.

Dumping of explosive material at Birch Point, under licence issued by my right hon. and learned Friend, ceased in 1989. No further licences will be issued.

Scottish Council of Crafts

Mr. Maclennan: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland whether he will consider the creation of a Scottish Council of Crafts; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Lang: My officials are currently reviewing the question of future support for the crafts industry in Scotland in consultation with the Scottish Development Agency and the Highlands and Islands Development Board. The possibility of creating a Scottish Council of Crafts is one of a number of options under consideration.

Departmental Savings

Mr. Devlin: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what value for money savings have been achieved by his Department in the last year; and how much of this was as a result of advice from the Central Unit on Purchasing.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton [holding answer 11 May 1990]: The Scottish Office pursues value for money in all its activities. So far as the costs of the Scottish Office itself are concerned, these were calculated on the basis that 1·5 per cent. efficiency gains would be delivered in 1989-90. These gains represent initiatives at every level to improve output and reduce costs.

The Central Unit on Purchasing provides general advice and guidance and monitors progress. It also co-ordinates the Government purchasing initiative. While, in general, it is not possible to attribute particular value for money savings to specific advice from the unit, value for money improvements in purchasing are published each year in a report from the Central Unit on Purchasing to the Prime Minister. In the 1989 report, the Scottish Office showed improvements in value for money in 1988-89 (the latest year for which figures are available) amounting to £12·96 million or 6·6 per cent. of its total expenditure on procurement of £196·3 million.

Local Government Finance

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what assessment he has made of the adequacy of the additional funding for poll tax staff made in Lothian region; and if he will make a statement.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton [holding answer 10 May 1990]: The Government have taken full account in successive revenue support grant settlements of the costs incurred by local authorities in administering the community charge. Thereafter, it is the responsibility of local authorities to determine how the overall resources available to them should be deployed to carry out their statutory functions.

Fish Farms (Disease)

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement on the incidence of infectious haematopoietic necrosis within the salmon fish farming industry.

Mr. Lang [holding answer 11 May 1990]: Infectious haematopoietic necrosis (IHN) has never been identified in the United Kingdom in either our farmed or wild salmonid fish stocks, despite extensive testing over many years. Moreover, IHN is a notifiable disease in the United Kingdom and its presence or any suspected outbreak would have to be reported to the appropriate fisheries department.

DEFENCE

Explosives (Dumping)

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will seek a meeting with the chairman of ICI Ltd. to discuss the dumping of surplus high explosives off the Isle of Arran in the Firth of Clyde and the migration of explosives and detonators from this site.

Mr. Neubert: No.

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will evaluate the current safety of surplus conventional explosives disposed of near Alderney in the Hurd deep channel.

Mr. Neubert: All military explosives material disposed of at sea is deposited in a manner which ensures that it sinks to the bottom and stays there. The depth of water and the fact that the dumping site is shown on published navigational charts ensure that the material constitutes no hazard to vessels.

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what evaluation he has made of the accident potential posed by the migration of surplus high explosives dumped off the Isle of Arran in the Firth of Clyde into sub-surface access channels for United Kingdom and United States nuclear submarines using the Coulport and Holy Loch facilities on the Clyde.

Mr. Neubert: The location of this and other commercial dumping grounds is well known, as is the possibility of occasional migration of small quantities of explosives. Instructions given to submarines which transit these areas are such that the risk of an accident is extremely low.

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make it his policy to investigate the disposal programme for surplus high explosives from his Department's stocks.

Mr. Neubert: The Ministry of Defence's policy on the disposal of high explosives is kept under constant review. The Department disposes of surplus high explosives by destruction in prescribed areas, dumping in carefully selected deep sea locations or through the use of contractors specialising in the non-explosive breakdown of these substances. There is no reason to believe that any of these methods poses a risk to the general public.

Defence Research

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he has any plans to set up a defence research organisation along the lines of the United States Defence Research Projects Agency.

Mr. Neubert: No.

Devonshire Dock, Barrow

Mr. Campbell-Savours: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) what screening arrangements exist for the security clearance of persons employed at the Devonshire dock, Barrow in Furness;

(2) how many persons subject to security clearance are employed at the Devonshire dock, Barrow in Furness.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: It is not the policy of this or previous Administrations to release information on security clearance procedures.

Mr. Campbell-Savours: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if work relating to the Trident project is carried out at the Devonshire dock, in Barrow in Furness.

Mr. Neubert: Yes.

Mr. Campbell-Savours: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether he will make a statement about security at the Devonshire dock, Barrow in Furness.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: Security at Devonshire dock is the responsibility of Vickers Shipbuilding and Engineering Limited and is maintained at a level appropriate to the nature of the work undertaken and the perceived threat.

Dumping (Firth of Clyde)

Mr. Wilson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will identify by category of materials the areas of the Firth of Clyde which are, or have been, used by his Department for dumping; and if he will identify the most recent dates in each instance on which dumping has occurred.

Mr. Neubert: There are no sites in the Firth of Clyde used by the Ministry of Defence for dumping.

Military Bands

Mr. Fisher: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether he will publish a table listing all military bands in Her Majesty's forces.

Mr. Archie Hamilton [holding answer 11 May 1990]: The information requested is as follows:

The Royal Marines School of Music Band

Mr. Colin Wallace

Mr. Bright: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether he will make a statement on the report of the internal inquiry which he set in hand into how papers were overlooked in the case of Mr. Colin Wallace.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The report, by a senior official in the Department, analyses how inaccurate statements came to be made, and action on its recommendations is in hand. A copy of the conclusions and recommendations has today been placed in the Library of the House and one has also been sent to the Select Committee on Defence.

TRANSPORT

EC Railways

Mr. Adley: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport whether subsidies to state railway companies in EEC countries contravene EEC competition policy.

Mr. Freeman: There are special rules under EC directives and regulations governing the payment of subsidies to railways. It is for the Governments of the countries concerned to comply with the relevant Community legislation and respect the competition rules of the EEC treaty and it is for the Commission to ensure that member states respect these obligations. I am satisfied that the grant paid to British Rail in respect of services carried out under the public service obligation fully complies with the relevant EC directive.

Mirror Windows

Mr. Michael: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) whether he has any information on incidents caused by pedestrians, cyclists or motorists being temporarily dazzled as a result of a bright reflection from mirror windows fitted to road vehicles;

(2) whether he intends to introduce any regulations to govern the fitment or specification of any mirror windows fitted to motor vehicles, particularly to reduce danger from reflections causing other road users to be dazzled.

Mr. Atkins: My Department has no evidence of incidents of this kind. Regulations already specify the type of glass to be used in vehicle windows and the minimum visual transmission for light allowed through it. Mirror windows have to comply with this. I have no plans for the introduction of specific regulations relating to mirror windows, which would in any case require agreement within the European Community.

Northampton Bypass

Mr. Marlow: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport whether he has any plans to bring the Northampton north-west bypass within the categories of road for which his Department has responsibility.

Mr. Atkins: No. Proposals for a north-west bypass of Northampton are the responsibility of Northamptonshire county council as highway authority.

Freight

Mr. Gerald Bowden: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what figures he has for the tonnage of freight carried by road and ferry to continental Europe from Edinburgh, Glasgow, Aberdeen, Liverpool and Newcastle.

Mr. Atkins: HM Customs and Excise figures for the tonnage of freight exported by sea in powered road goods vehicles or unaccompanied trailers from the ports of Forth, Clyde, Aberdeen, Liverpool and Tyne to continental Europe (excluding the Republic of Ireland) in 1989 are given in the table.

1989 (provisional)

	Net weight (tonnes)
Port	Powered road goods vehicles	Unaccompanied trailers	Total
Forth (including Kirkcaldy, Leith and Grangemouth)	1,362	94	1,456
Clyde (including Glasgow, Ardrossan and Greenock)	1,136	19	1,155
Aberdeen	516	7	523
Liverpool (including Garston)	1,549	3,289	4,838

EMPLOYMENT

Coal Mining (Accidents)

98. Mr. Lofthouse: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what is his most up-to-date assessment of the progress being made in reducing the number of accidents in the United Kingdom coal mining industry.

Mr. Nicholls: The British coal mining industry is the safest in the world. The total accident rate continues to decline each year. The latest published British Coal "all accident rate" of 32·25 per 100,000 manshifts is the lowest figure ever recorded. This is the clearest indication of the continuing progress in reducing accidents achieved by British Coal in co-operation with the work force, workers' representatives and Her Majesty's mines inspectorate.

There were two fatal and 25 major injuries at licensed mines in 1988-89. The annual figures have changed little in recent years. The Health and Safety Executive's mines inspectorate has met the owners and operators and given advice on ways of improving safety in this sector.

Youth Training

Ms. Short: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will publish details for Great Britain and for the west midlands region, for each year from April 1986 to the most recent date, of the number of YTS trainees within each of the 18 training and occupational classifications and their sub-categories (a) in total and (b) with disabilities.

Mr. Eggar: The figures for the number of YTS trainees within each of the 18 training and occupational classifications for Great Britain and the west midlands in total and with disabilities for each year from April 1986 are as follows:

Figures relating to the sub-categories of the 18 training and occupational categories can be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

New Businesses

Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many new businesses are estimated to have been established and how many people were employed in them in the last five years; what are the comparable figures for 1974 to 1979; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Eggar: Between the end of 1983 and the end of 1988, the number of businesses registered for VAT in the United Kingdom increased by 182,000. This was the net result of 994,000 registrations and 812,000 deregistrations. Between the end of 1974 and the end of 1979, the number of VAT-registered businesses rose by 85,000, the net result of 809,000 registrations and 724,000 deregistrations.

Direct estimates of employment in new firms are not available. However, a recent study indicates that between 1985 and 1987, new firms employing five or more people created 1·2 million additional jobs.

Coal Mining (Employed Persons)

Mr. Strang: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what was the number of persons employed in (a) British Coal deep coal mines, (b) licensed private deep coal mines, (c) British Coal opencast mines and (d) licensed private opencast coal mines in 1986-87, 1987-88, 1988-89 and 1989-90.

Mr. Nicholls: The average number of persons employed during these years in British Coal deep coal mines as detailed in the Health and Safety Commission's annual report 1988-89 was:

	Number
1986-87	125,400
1987-88	104,400
1988-89	86,900

Information on the numbers of persons employed in licensed private deep coal mines and opencast mines is not available to the Health and Safety Executive.

Training Voucher Scheme

Mrs. Gorman: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he has any plans to allow any participants in his training voucher scheme to operate their involvement in the scheme outside the auspices of the local TEC; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Eggar: In the prospectus "Training Credits for Young People" I invited training and enterprise councils (TECs) to submit proposals to implement pilot credit schemes on a local basis. Around 10 pilots will be selected, to run from April 1991.

It will be for the TEC to propose the arrangements for issue and encashment of the credit and to ensure that it is used in respect of approved training delivered by an approved training provider. I shall be looking for arrangements in general which offer young people wide scope for exercising choice. It will also be for the TEC to propose arrangements for young people who wish or need to train outside the TEC area.

European Year of Tourism

Mr. Simon Coombs: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will make a statement on United Kingdom participation in European year of tourism 1990.

Mr. Nicholls: The British Tourist Authority has taken the lead in co-ordinating the United Kingdom's participation in the European Year of Tourism. It has launched a number of campaigns to promote the interest and active involvement of the United Kingdom tourism industry and many events have been planned across the country throughout 1990. Thirty-nine United Kingdom projects have been accepted for co-funding by the European Commission.

Labour Statistics

Mr. McAllion: to ask the Secretary of State for Employment what was the percentage growth in (a) full-time employment and (b) part-time employment in the last year.

Mr. Nicholls: In the year to December 1989 full-time employment in Great Britain grew by 2·5 per cent. and part-time employment by 4 per cent.

Health and Safety Executive

Mr. Bill Michie: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment (1) how many non-specialist Health and Safety Executive inspectors, by grade and discipline, were employed by the Health and Safety Executive technology division in each of the last five years;

(2) how many trained specialist Health and Safety Executive inspectors, by grade and discipline, were employed by the Health and Safety Executive technology division in each of the last five years;

(3) how many Health and Safety Executive inspectors, by grade and discipline, were in training in the Health and Safety Executive technology division in each of the last five years.

Mr. Nicholls: HSE's technology division was set up in 1987. The table shows HSE inspectors within technology division by grade. Information on discipline is not readily available and records do not separately identify specialist inspectors in training before 1989.

Mr. Andrew F. Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what the current estimated capital costs of the computer system which will replace the Health and Safety Executive shield system will be; and what cost-benefit evaluation has been carried out by the Health and Safety Executive or by any other organisation of the need for this new system.

Mr. Nicholls: The system (called FOCUS) being planned for HSE's new field operations division will supersede a number of existing systems, including SHIELD. The current estimated capital cost directly attributable to FOCUS is £0·5 million.

A preliminary cost-benefit analysis of the new system was carried out at the feasibility stage. Since then the scope of the project has been widened to reflect the structure of the newly established field operations division. A further investment appraisal will therefore be produced later this year.

Advisory Committee on Toxic Substances

Mr. Bill Michie: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment on which dates since 1982 the Advisory Committee on Toxic Substances met; and which of the organisations with membership of ACTS was represented at each meeting.

Mr. Nicholls: The Advisory Committee on Toxic Substances met on the following dates:

Year	Dates
1982	22 January	*10 May	*30 November
1983	30 March	*29 June	29 September
1984	10 January	8 May	2 November
1985	*7 February	*2 May	22 August	7 November
1986	5 February	2 May	7 November
1987	5 February	*7 May	5 November
1988	3 February	19 May	*2 November
1989	9 February	11 May	*3 November
1990	*5 February

The CBI and TUC were represented at every meeting. Local authority representatives were not present at meetings marked with an asterisk.

Factories

Mr. Bill Michie: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many factory premises were newly registered with each of the Health and Safety Executive's area offices in 1989, 1988 and 1987, based on information contained in the Health and Safety Executive's shield database.

Mr. Nicholls: The information is not available in the form requested and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Mr. Bill Michie: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what evidence the Heath and Safety

Executive possesses as to the proportion of factory premises which are not registered with the factory inspectorate and the proportion of factory employees who work in unregistered premises.

Mr. Nicholls: It is not possible to state the proportion of premises which are not registered or the proportion of factory employees who work in unregistered premises. The Health and Safety Executive (HSE) is aware that some firms fail to register their manufacturing premises with it as required under section 137 of the Factories Act 1961. HSE's factory inspectorate aims to spend a proportion of its resources each year on the identification and inspection of unregistered workplaces as part of its programme of preventive inspection.

Skills Training Agency

Mr. Oppenheim: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment whether he will make a further statement about the sale of the Skills Training Agency.

Mr. Howard: The business at Chesterfield skill centre will not now transfer to Astra Training Services Ltd. as originally planned. The transfer relied upon the assignment of the lease at the skill centre to Astra, but the landlord, Chesterfield borough council, has refused to make the premises available to Astra.

As a consequence of the council's decision, there is no option but for the business to close. Ten jobs will be lost and a valuable training facility will disappear. Where possible staff at the skill centre will be redeployed; action will be taken to find alternative training provision for the trainees.

Union Subscriptions

Mr. Winnick: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he has any plans to introduce legislation to change the position of union subscriptions being deducted by employers; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Nicholls: There are no present plans to introduce legislation relating to the payment of union subscriptions. The Government, however, keep all aspects of trade union and industrial relations law under review. We have always made it clear that we shall bring forward proposals for further legislation if we believe it is necessary.

Job Clubs

Mr. McLeish: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment (1) if he will give the total number of (a) private, (b) voluntary sector and (c) employment service job clubs to be closed from Great Britain and each of the standard regions and the proposed timetable involved;

(2) what is the total number of (a) private job clubs, (b) employment service job clubs and (c) voluntary sector job clubs currently in operation in Great Britain and for each of the standard regions.

Mr. Eggar: The employment service, which is responsible for job clubs, became an executive agency on 2 April 1990. Mr. Mike Fogden, the Employment Service Agency's chief executive, will be replying in writing to the hon. Member.

International Labour Organisation

Mr. Archer: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment when he intends to publish the response of Her Majesty's Government to the conclusions of the committee of experts of the International Labour Organisation on the application by the United Kingdom of convention No. 87.

Mr. Eggar: As required by the International Labour Organisation, the Government will be responding to the conclusions of the committee of experts on the application by the United Kingdom of convention No. 87 in its next routine report on this convention. This report will cover the period 1 July 1988 to 30 June 1990 and will be considered by the committee of experts at their next meeting in March 1991.

Nicholas Labour Hire Ltd.

Mr. Campbell-Savours: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what representation she has received in relation to Messrs. Nicholas Labour Hire Ltd. of Winckley square, Preston.

Mr. Eggar: My right hon. and learned Friend has received no representations about Messrs. Nicholas Labour Hire Ltd. of Preston.

Mr. Campbell-Savours: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what contracts his Department has arranged with Nicholas Labour Hire Ltd. of Winckley square, Preston.

Mr. Eggar: There are no records of my Department arranging a contract to purchase services from Nicholas Labour Hire Ltd. of Winckley square, Preston.

Training Standards

Mr. McLeish: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment when the training standards advisory service's second annual report for 1988-89 is to be published.

Mr. Eggar: A review of the activity and findings of the training standards advisory service covering the period 1 April 1988 to 30 September 1989 has recently been completed and the report will be published soon.

Employment Training

Ms. Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what was the annual budget allocated to each inner London area office for employment training since its inception; and what are the criteria used in determining the level of each office's budget.

Mr. Nicholls: Budgets for ET at regional level have been introduced in the current financial year, taking account of past performance and numbers of long-term unemployed people. Budgets for each area have been set by the operational director in each region taking account of these criteria and local needs. Information on budgets is for internal management purposes.

Ms. Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what was the percentage element for child care provision in the annual budget allocated by the Department of Employment Training Agency for the inner London south office since the inception of employment training.

Mr. Nicholls: Area level budgets for ET have been set for the current financial year by operational directors taking account of past performance, long-term unemployment and local needs. Elements such as child care are not separately identified, although the requirement to make provision available for lone parents remains in place.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Oilseed Rape

Mr. Marlow: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what acreage of oilseed rape has been sown in the current year; and how much was sown in the previous five years.

Mr. Curry: The latest estimate for the area sown to oilseed rape in the United Kingdom for harvesting this summer is 400,000 hectares. Figures for the previous five years are as follows:

	Thousand hectares
1985	296
1986	299
1987	388
1988	347
1989	323

Contaminated Feed

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many pigs which have eaten contaminated feed have as a result (a) been slaughtered or (b) died of natural causes, over the most recent period for which figures are available.

Mr. Gummer: Precise figures are not available but we understand that up to 1,200 pigs which have consumed the contaminated feed since 1 January have been or are expected to be slaughtered for welfare reasons. This updates the figure given in my reply of 9 May. There have been no cases which I can confirm of pigs having died as a direct result of eating the contaminated feed.

Livestock Medicines

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what information he has on the number of veterinary surgeons dispensing medicines for livestock and the extent to which prescriptions are dispensed by pharmacists not associated with the prescribing veterinary practice.

Mr. Maclean: The Department does not have this information.

Spongiform Encephalopathy

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food when he first learnt that a domestic cat had contracted a sub-acute spongiform encephalopathy; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Maclean: The school of veterinary science at Bristol university first consulted the Ministry's central veterinary laboratory on 1 May. A Ministry pathologist visited the university on the same day and collected samples for further investigation at the central veterinary laboratory, where the disease was confirmed on 8 May. We were informed on 9 May.

Correspondence

Mr. Pawsey: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food when the hon. Member for Rugby and Kenilworth will receive a reply to his letter dated 26 March referring to Mr. James Critchley and Mr. Dennis Clarke of Wolston and Harborough Magna.

Mr. Curry: A reply to the hon. Member for Rugby and Kenilworth's letter was dispatched on 11 May.

Infected Sheep Offals

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will now ban the feeding of infected sheep offals to pigs and poultry.

Mr. Maclean: No: there is no evidence of a risk to these species from the feeding of sheep material.

OVERSEAS DEVELOPMENT

Third World Economic Development

59. Mr. John Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether his Department has sponsored any studies of the role of a social market economy in fostering economic development in the Third world.

Mrs. Chalker: My Department has sponsored a number of studies on the role of the market economy in fostering economic development in developing countries. We believe that it is only through sound market-oriented economic policies and encouragement of the private sector that these countries will achieve sustainable economic growth.

Asian Development Bank

60. Mr. Key: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether he will make a statement about relations with the Asian Development Bank.

Mrs. Chalker: I attended the annual meeting of the board of governors in New Delhi from 2 to 4 May. I was able to discuss a range of issues with fellow governors and with Mr. Tarumizu, president of the bank. We enjoy excellent relations with the bank.

73. Mr. Kirkhope: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when the right hon. Member for Wallasey (Mrs. Chalker) last met the director of the Asian Development Bank; and what was discussed.

Mrs. Chalker: I met Mr. Tarumizu, President of the Asian Development Bank, at the bank's annual meeting of the board of governors, held in New Delhi from 2 to 4 May. We exchanged views on a range of policy issues, including the importance of environmental and population factors in the bank's work, and the forthcoming replenishment of the Asian Development Fund.

I extended an invitation to President Tarumizu to visit London in his official capacity should the opportunity arise. I also met the executive director who represents the interests of Germany, Austria and the United Kingdom on the board of directors, and expressed appreciation for his work on our behalf.

Vietnam

61. Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when Government Ministers last discussed Vietnam with the United States Government.

Mrs. Chalker: The Government keep in regular touch, both at ministerial and official level, with the United States Government on the problem of the Vietnamese boat people. I last discussed matters in Washington on 23 April.

Mr. Mullin: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he has considered the proposals recently put to him by a consortium of non-governmental organisations for aid to Vietnam; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Chalker: I am still considering these proposals. I hope to make a statement shortly.

68. Sir David Steel: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent contact Her Majesty's Government have had with the Government of Vietnam about the funding of an aid programme in that country.

Mrs. Chalker: I refer the right hon. Gentleman to the reply I gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Taunton (Mr. Nicholson) on 16 January at column 178. We have made it clear to the Vietnamese authorities that we expect them to meet their responsibilities towards their own people, including the boat people in Hong Kong, as a precondition for starting a Government-to-Government aid programme. I have since received proposals for NGO programmes in Vietnam, which are being considered.

Eastern Europe

62. Mr. McWilliam: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when the development assistance committee of the OECD is expected to decide how to treat aid to eastern Europe in calculating official development assistance.

Mrs. Chalker: The development assistance committee has proposed that assistance to eastern Europe should not be included in its calculation of official development assistance as a proportion of GNP. The United Kingdom has supported this conclusion.

97. Mr. Lawrence: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether he plans to deploy aid and trade provision to eastern Europe.

Mrs. Chalker: No. The aid and trade provision is part of the overseas aid budget for developing countries. Economic assistance to eastern Europe is provided from a separate ODA PES sub-programme.

Debt Relief

63. Mr. Corbett: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the debt relief gained by developing countries since the Brady plan was announced.

Mrs. Chalker: The Government welcome progress under the strengthened debt strategy, most recently reaffirmed at the interim committee of the IMF on 7 May. The strategy, including the associated economic reforms, will have a significant impact on debt problems facing those countries which participate. But it is early days to reach any definite conclusion.

96. Mr. David Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what action the Government are taking to encourage the writing off of debt owed by developing countries to the European Investment Bank.

Mrs. Chalker: None. Like all the multilateral development banks, the European Investment Bank is a preferred creditor and we believe that it should be repaid on time.

88. Mr. Eastham: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the levels of debt relief provided under the Toronto plan for the poorer countries in Africa.

76. Mr. Dunnachie: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the levels of debt relief received by poorer African countries under the Toronto plan.

Mrs. Chalker: According to World Bank estimates, the first 12 concessional reschedulings of official debt obtained by the poorest countries under the Toronto plan reduced these countries' debt servicing obligations in 1989 by an additional $50 million relative to conventional Paris Club reschedulings. These benefits will increase over time as more eligible countries reschedule under the Toronto terms (16 have now done so), and as progressively more of the debt stock is covered in successive Toronto reschedulings.

79. Mr. Norman Hogg: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what he perceives as the actual benefits gained by developing countries from the Brady plan.

Mrs. Chalker: The Government welcome progress under the strengthened debt strategy, most recently reaffirmed at the interim committee of the IMF on 7 May. The strategy, including the associated economic reforms, will have a significant impact on debt problems facing those countries which participate.

Nicaragua

64. Mr. Allen McKay: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what plans he has to give bilateral aid to Nicaragua.

Mrs. Chalker: I refer the hon. Member to my reply to the hon. Member for Brent, South (Mr. Boateng) on 2 April 1990, Official Report, column 415.

Ethiopia

65. Mr. Illsley: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the latest information he has received concerning the famine in Ethiopia.

89. Ms. Abbott: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the latest information he has received on the famine in Ethiopia.

41. Mr. Harry Barnes: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the latest information he has received on the famine in Ethiopia.

Mrs. Chalker: Military activities continue to pose a serious obstacle to the relief effort and attempts to secure agreement on the reopening of the port of Massawa have so far proved unsuccessful. Nevertheless, the southern line operation from Assab to northern Wollo and Tigray is proceeding, with the co-operation of the Ethiopian Government and the rebel side; an airlift of emergency items for vulnerable groups in the Eritrean capital of Asmara is under way; and recent reports indicate that cross-border operations from Sudan are making a significant contribution to the supply of food. This provides grounds for limited optimism that it may prove possible to avoid the worst problems of mass starvation and mass migration, but the situation remains delicately balanced.

67. Mr. Moss: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether the Minister for Overseas Development discussed the situation in Ethiopia during her recent visit to the United States of America.

82. Mr. Robert G. Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether he will make a statement on Ethiopia following the discussions of the right hon. Member for Wallasey (Mrs. Chalker) in the United States of America.

Mrs. Chalker: During my visit to the United States I discussed the situation in Ethiopia with the Secretary-General of the United Nations, with senior members of the United States Administration, and with Ministers and senior officials of other major donor countries, as well as with the Ethiopian Minister for Planning and the Commissioner for Relief and Rehabilitation. Throughout I stressed the need for early peace negotiations, and for the full co-operation of all parties in ensuring that relief supplies reach people in need in all parts of Ethiopia.

I welcomed the progress of the southern line operation for transporting food across the lines of conflict into northern Wello and Tigray. I emphasised, however, that this alone could not meet the full needs of northern Ethiopia, and that every effort should be made to negotiate arrangements for re-opening the port of Massawa for relief supplies. During my visit, I joined other donor Ministers in issuing the following statement of principles:

Statement of principles for humanitarian relief efforts in Ethiopia

We, the representatives of Canada, the European Community and its Member States, Norway, Sweden, Switzerland and the United States of America, do hereby call upon all parties to the conflict to observe strictly the following principles to ensure speedy and effective humanitarian relief to the victims of drought and conflict in Ethiopia in order to prevent large-scale starvation.

We strongly urge all parties to the conflict:

1. To suspend hostilities immediately to facilitate relief operations, bearing in mind that the situation of internal conflict is a major obstacle to the humanitarian relief effort;

2. To guarantee the safe-passage and facilitate distribution of humanitarian relief supplies via land, sea and air through neutral channels such as international organisations, churches and other NGO's;

3. To recognise the co-ordinating role of the United Nations in relation to the international humanitarian relief effort;

4. To ensure the availability of the relevant ports and airfields and the associated road links for humanitarian relief activities; and

5. To refrain from military attack on aircraft, ships and road vehicles delivering humanitarian supplies, thus ensuring the safe passage of food deliveries through all possible channels.

All humanitarian relief efforts by the international community will be undertaken fully respecting the principles adopted by the United Nations to govern such operations.

We call upon all donors to respond generously to all elements of the humanitarian relief program, including measures necessary to re-establish normal functioning of port and airfield facilities and associated road links.

Recalling that this situation of conflict is a major factor in the serious humanitarian situation in Ethiopia, we solemnly appeal most strongly to all parties to resume their efforts for peace and national reconciliation and to this end, to resolve outstanding procedural difficulties on the basis of flexibility, and to proceed to substantive negotiations with a view to achieving a lasting political settlement.

66. Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions he has had with Catholic Fund for Overseas Development and Save the Children Fund on the internal purchase programmes of the Relief Society of Tigray.

Mrs. Chalker: I have regular and valuable discussions with the main agencies involved in famine relief in Ethiopia, including CAFOD and Save the Children Fund. These have included the issue of internal purchase of food in Tigray. The conclusion we have reached is that we should continue to concentrate our assistance upon alternative means of providing food for those in need.

Namibia

69. Mr. Mullin (Sunderland South): To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what further aid the United Kingdom Government are planning to give to Namibia.

Mrs. Chalker: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave on 21 March to my hon. Friend the Member for Corby (Mr. Powell) at column 612.

92. Mr. McCartney: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what actions he will take to help relieve the pre-independence debts incurred by Namibia.

Mr. Maude: The handling of pre-independence debt is among the issues currently being negotiated between the Governments of South Africa and Namibia.

Cambodia

70. Mr. Livingstone: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, if he will now publish a report on the visit of a British delegation to Cambodia.

Mrs. Chalker: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave to the hon. Member for Berwick-upon-Tweed (Mr. Beith) on 27 March at column 123.

74. Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what information he has received concerning the need for medical aid in Cambodia.

Mrs. Chalker: The needs for medical assistance in Cambodia are widespread, particularly in primary health care and also to combat malaria and tuberculosis. We are assisting through UNICEF's programmes, and through the joint funding scheme for NGOs.

Chlorofluorocarbons

71. Mr. Frank Cook: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what aid Her Majesty's Government are giving to developing countries to assist in implementing the Montreal protocol on chlorofluorocarbons.

81. Dr. Kim Howells: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what aid Her Majesty's Government are giving to assist developing countries to implement provisions of the Montreal protocol.

Mrs. Chalker: We are helping developing countries to assess the implications of their signing the Montreal protocol, and have committed more than £200,000 to a study of the options open to India for phasing out substances that deplete the ozone layer.

We are ready to give further help to developing countries and are taking an active part in international meetings at which those countries' needs are discussed, one of which will be the second meeting of parties to the Montreal protocol, to be held in London next month.

Mozambique

72. Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what percentage of aid to Mozambique is programme rather than project aid.

Mrs. Chalker: In 1988-89, the last financial year for which we have firm figures, gross British bilateral aid to Mozambique amounted to £34·7 million, of which nearly 52 per cent. was accounted for by programme aid and over 22 per cent. by project aid.

95. Mr. Rowlands: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the meeting of donors at the United Nations on the emergency situation in Mozambique.

Mrs. Chalker: I refer the hon. Member to my answer earlier today to the hon. Member for Midlothian (Mr. Eadie).

90. Ms. Short: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on United Kingdom aid to Mozambique.

Mrs. Chalker: We have for a number of years maintained a significant bilateral aid programme for Mozambique: in 1988-89 gross British bilateral aid to Mozambique amounted to over £34 million. This assistance has focused on three main areas: balance of payments finance in support of the Mozambian Government's IMF-backed economic reform programme; project aid, concentrating on rehabilitation of transport and energy infrastructure and associated technical assistance; and emergency relief and refugee assistance.

Angola

75. Ms. Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the drought situation in Angola.

Mrs. Chalker: There are reports that during late March and early April late season rains have fallen in southern Angola, which is the worst affected area. We continue to monitor the situation, although this is not easy given the difficulties of internal travel in Angola. The European Community has provided £11·9 million in food aid since 1988, the United Kingdom share of which is £2·3 million. We have allocated £1·25 million in all in emergency aid bilaterally over the same period, including most recently a grant to the world food programme to provide secure storage facilities for emergency food aid in the Angolan port of Namibe.

I am considering urgently our response to the 10 May appeal by the United Nations Secretary General.

Maldives

77. Sir Charles Morrison: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether he will make a statement about Britain's support for the republic of the Maldives.

86. Mr. Paice: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether he will make a statement about aid to the Maldives following the visit there by the Minister for Overseas Development.

Mrs. Chalker: I visited the Maldives from 4 to 6 May to mark the 25th anniversary of their independence. During the visit I reviewed our aid programme to the country. British aid to the Maldives is planned to increase to £700,000 in 1991-92. About half of the programme is allocated to financing training for Maldivian students in the United Kingdom and, during the visit, the Maldivian Government requested more training places.

The rest of our assistance goes to support the establishment of an English language teaching centre to provide in-service teacher training from primary level upwards; and, secondly, to support the Maldivian Government's programme of monitoring and improvement of the marine environment. We have been asked to help with the establishment of an environmental research unit and our high commissioner will be providing my officials with full details for consideration.

VSO is very active in the Maldives. We support a project run by Voluntary Service Overseas to manage an integrated development programme in an outer atoll called Shaviyani, two islands of which I visited. I was most impressed by the dedication and effectiveness of our volunteers there and elsewhere, and of our other aid officers in the Maldives.

Clean Technology

78. Mr. Bernie Grant: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what aid the United Kingdom is giving developing countries to assist in developing and adopting clean technology for industry, particularly for the energy sector.

83. Mr. Snape: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what aid the United Kingdom is giving for the development and transfer of environmentally clean technology for developing countries.

Mrs. Chalker: Projects funded through the bilateral aid programme are subject to scrutiny as set out in the ODA

"Manual of Environmental Appraisal" in order to ensure that they comply with national environmental standards and international protocols, conventions and codes of conduct, to which the United Kingdom is party, aimed at safeguarding the environment.

Examples of projects intended to foster the introduction of environmentally clean technology include support for a Government of India study on a CFC-alternative strategy for India and support for a workshop in Malaysia to promote public awareness of the ozone problem.

With reference to the energy sector we are, together with the World Bank and bilateral donor Governments, preparing an environmental manual for power development in order to assist the adoption of consistent international standards for aid-funded projects. We are assisting the Government of Bangladesh to identify energy conservation opportunities in a range of industries.

South Africa

80. Mr. Canavan: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent discussions he has had with representatives from South Africa about assistance for projects to help black people in South Africa; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Chalker: I had a number of such discussions when I was in South Africa earlier this year, and representatives from South Africa are regular visitors to the ODA. I also refer the hon. Member to my reply to my hon. Friend the Member for Harrow, West (Mr. Hughes) on 19 March, at column 431.

Elephant Conservation

84. Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he has received any requests from African Governments for additional support for elephant conservation schemes.

Mrs. Chalker: We are considering a recent request from the Government of Kenya to fund a new project, costing some £400,000, for the provision of equipment to improve the communication systems in Tsavo (east and west) and Meru national parks.

Kashmir and Punjab

85. Mr. Madden: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations he has made to the Government of India about the denial of human rights in Kashmir and the Punjab.

Mr. Sainsbury: We are in regular contact with the Indian Government who are well aware of our views on these issues.

Global Environment Fund

87. Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on discussions to set up a global environment fund at the World Bank-IMF meeting on 7 and 8 May.

91. Mr. Ted Garrett: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what is the Government's policy on setting up a global environment fund at the World Bank.

Mrs. Chalker: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave today to the hon. Member for Easington (Mr. Cummings).

Global Warming

93. Mr. Watson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what aid Her Majesty's Government intend to give developing countries to adapt to the possibility of global warming and a rise in the sea level.

Mrs. Chalker: We are aiming to help limit global warming and sea level rise by assisting developing countries through the aid programme in forestry, energy efficiency and CFC alternatives.

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what aid he is planning to give developing countries to adapt to the possibility of global warming and sea level rise.

Mrs. Chalker: We are aiming to help limit global warming and sea level rise by assisting developing countries through the aid programme in foresty, energy efficiency and CFC alternatives.

Renewable Energy Sources

94. Mr. Win Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what aid the United Kingdom is giving to developing countries to assist in developing renewable energy sources.

Mrs. Chalker: In 1988 expenditure from the bilateral aid programme on the development of renewable energy sources was some £15 million. In addition renewable energy components such as solar and wind-powered pumps, solar-powered refrigerators, solar water distillation and solar water heating have been incorporated in projects which are not primarily energy focused.

Israel

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what financial help the Government are providing to the Palestinians in Israeli-occupied territories; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Chalker: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Hornchurch (Mr. Squire) on 8 May 1990 at columns 17-18.

Health Education

Mr. Rathbone: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what plans he has to increase assistance for health education in the developing world.

Mrs. Chalker: Health education is, and will continue to be, an essential component of many of our aid activities. Our bilateral health and population assistance is aimed at providing primary health care for the poorest people. Health education activities are an important part of these programmes. They also feature in other bilateral social sector programmes such as education; clean water and sanitation; and improved housing. We stand ready to do more if Governments ask for assistance in this important field.

Rain Forests (Intellectual Property Rights)

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the response made to the proposals sent to the Overseas Development Administration by, and the administration's contacts with, Dr. Darrel Posey and Professor Fittkau, on the need to protect the intellectual property rights of native peoples in relation to the sale of rain forest pharmaceuticals and rain forest ice-cream.

Mrs. Chalker: The Overseas Development Administration has received no proposals from, or had contacts with, Dr. Darrel Posey and Professor Fittkau on this subject, though I understand Dr. Posey is in the United Kingdom this week and my officials may be able to contact him.

ENVIRONMENT

Local Government Finance

Mr. Atkinson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what estimates his Department has made of by how much the average community charge would be reduced if the cost of police and fire services were removed from local authorities.

Mr. Chope: The effect of the average community charge on removing services from local authorities would depend upon the amount of revenue support grant that was removed at the same time.

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make a statement on his proposals to revise the operation of the standard community charge.

Mr. Portillo: We are collecting information from charging authorities on the use they have made of their discretion to set a standard charge of between 0 and 2 times the personal community charge for their area and to specify classes of property for special treatment in addition to those already prescribed by the Secretary of State. I shall consider this information.

Mr. Harry Barnes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, pursuant to his answer of 9 May to the hon. Member for Derbyshire, North-East, if he will list all those grants which fall outside aggregate Exchequer finance.

Mr. Chope: The main current specific grants outside aggregate Exchequer finance are listed in "The Government's Expenditure Plans 1990-91 to 1992-93" chapter 21 table 21.4.4, published by HMSO in January 1990 (Cm. 1021). Other grants relating to the housing revenue account and all grants relating to capital expenditures are also outside aggregate Exchequer finance.

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will publish the amount the City of London is planning to spend above standard spending assessment in 1990-91 expressed both as a percentage and in pounds per head.

Mr. Portillo: The City of London is planning to spend £10,130 per adult or 63·1 per cent. above its 1990-91 standard spending assessment.

Mr. Marlow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list for (i) 1987-88, (ii) 1988-89, (iii) 1989-90 and (iv) 1990-91 his estimate of (a) total local government expenditure, (b) the moneys raised from domestic ratepayers-community charge payers, (c) the sum of Government grants, business rates and other grant income and (d) local authority income charged by local authorities, showing the percentage increase in nominal and real terms between years.

Mr. Chope [holding answer 5 April 1990]: I shall write to my hon. Friend.

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list (a) all those local authorities which were subject to rate capping in each of the years from 1985-86 to 1989-90, (b) the initial expenditure limitation proposed by the Secretary of State in each case, and (c) the actual expenditure limitation, where different from (b) in each case.

Mr. Portillo [holding answer 8 May 1990]: I am placing in the Library tables showing the authorities designated for selective rate limitation by successive Secretaries of State for the Environment, the expenditure levels determined by the Secretary of State in each case and where appropriate that redetermined, and the rate limit proposed in each case and that finally set, where different, for each of the years requested.

Mr. Nicholas Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what estimate he has made of the numbers and percentages of households which will move in any given year in each region of the United Kingdom; and if he will make a statement outlining his assessment of this movement on community charge collection systems and total local government revenue.

Mr. Portillo [holding answer 10 May 1990]: My Department makes projections of the total number of households in each area, but the movement element is not separately identifiable. We plan to collect information on register changes later in the year when the system has been running for a reasonable period of time. I do not anticipate that the mobility of charge payers will have any significant effect on local government revenue and I am confident that local authorities will be able to maintain reliable, up-to-date registers.

Mr. Nicholas Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what information he now has concerning the number of councils that are charging 0, 0·5, 1, 1·5, or 2 times the community charge on second homes.

Mr. Portillo [holding answer 10 May 1990]: I am presently collecting this information.

Tourism

Mr. Simon Coombs: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what has been the value to date of grants given by the European regional development fund to tourism projects in the United Kingdom.

Mr. Moynihan: The value of European regional development fund grants awarded to tourism projects in England and Northern Ireland to date is £194·5 million. Similar information for Scotland and Wales is the responsibility of the Secretaries of State for Scotland and for Wales.

Mr. O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he has issued any guidelines to local authorities on green belt policies when preparing local plans; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Moynihan [holding answer 4 May 1990]: Relevant guidance is on planning policy guidance notes No. 2 on green belts and No. 12 on local plans, both issued in 1988, and in DOE circulars 14/84 and 12/87.

Green Belt

Mr. Adley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make it his policy to ensure that planning applications from local authorities relating to the green belt are assessed by the same criteria as those emanating from individual or commercial sources.

Mr. Moynihan: Those who determine planning applications and appeals are statutorily required to consider each development proposal on its merits, regardless of the identity of the applicant.

Hull District Council

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when he will be replying to the various correspondence and telephone calls he has received from Hull district council requesting a reply to the city inner area programme submission 1990 to 1993.

Mr. Moynihan: No such inquiries have been received. I have today approved Hull's urban programme for 1990-91.

Travelling Show-people

Mrs. Roe: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he has any proposals to ease travelling show-people's planning problems.

Mr. Moynihan: My right hon. Friend has published today a consultation paper inviting views by 13 July on a proposed amendment to the Town and Country Planning General Development Order 1988. This would enable up to five residential caravans inhabited by travelling show-people and their families to be stationed without planning permission on land which is the subject of an annually renewable certificate granted by an organisation authorised by my right hon. Friend. It would also enable the land to be used for the purpose of maintaining and storing fairground equipment used for their business. The consultation paper also invites views on a proposed amendment to the Caravan Sites and Control of Development Act 1960, so that site licensing and planning requirements may be aligned. My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Wales will be consulting on the same basis.

Royal Navy Personnel (Poll Tax)

Mr. Winnick: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when he will reply to the letter of the hon. Member for Walsall, North of 12 March regarding Royal Navy service men being liable for payment of the poll tax.

Mr. Chope [holding answer 11 May 1990]: The Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State, my hon. Friend the Member for Wells (Mr. Heathcoat-Amory), replied on 9 May.

Mineral Plan Reviews

Ms. Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many mineral plan reviews have been completed by local authorities in each year since 1981.

Mr. Moynihan [holding answer 11 May 1990]: Section 3 of the Minerals Act 1981, which came into effect in May 1986, imposes a duty on mineral planning authorities to undertake reviews of mineral working sites in their areas and make such orders as they consider appropriate. There is no statutory requirement as to the timing, frequency and manner of conducting reviews, and no requirement to notify the Secretary of State when they commence or finish. However, I understand that some 35 mineral planning authorities had formally commenced their reviews by December 1989.

Ms. Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what guidance has been given to local authorities by his Department relating to the resources required to carry out mineral plan reviews.

Mr. Moynihan [holding answer 11 May 1990]: Guidance on the financial implications of the duty to review mineral workings was given in DOE circular 11/86. This said that the duty to review should not have significant manpower or expenditure implications for mineral planning authorities. Compensation arising from an authority's decision to make orders might give rise to additional expenditure, though provision is made for compensation to be abated in certain circumstances. Authorities are expected to accommodate any additional expenditure or manpower within the resources available. Further advice on reviews generally was given in minerals planning guidance note No. 4, published in September 1988.

Brundtland Report

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment why he has decided not to attend the ministerial follow-up to the Brundtland report in Bergen.

Mr. Trippier [holding answer, 11 May 1990]: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for the Environment regrets that he is unable to attend the Bergen conference. There is a limit to the number of international environmental conferences he can attend personally and on this occasion he decided it was necessary to remain at home to deal with domestic issues. The Government are strongly committed to the success of the Bergen conference. We have made a substantial contribution to the preparations for the conference and I shall be leading the British delegation next week.

Nature Conservancy Council

Ms. Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many agreements have been made by the Nature Conservancy Council under section 15 of the Countryside Act 1968, or section 16 of the National Parks and Access to the Countryside Act 1949 which have not been subject to the financial guidelines produced as a result of the Wildlife and Countryside Act 1981.

Mr. Trippier: The majority of NCC payments under management agreements are made under the terms of "Financial Guidelines for Management Agreements"—DOE Circular 4/83 published on 31 January 1983. Payments are also made in respect of national nature reserves to encourage the maintenance and enhancement of the scientific interest. Information on how many agreements have not been subject to the financial guidelines is not readily available and could be obtained only at a disproportionate cost.

Water Supplies

Mr. O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list the areas in England and Wales which have water use restrictions applying in the current year.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: The table lists the areas of England which have been affected this year by drought orders made by my right hon. Friend under section 131 of the Water Act 1989 to enable water companies to restrict the use of water:

Company	Area affected	Date of expiry of Order
East Surrey Water Plc	East Surrey	9 August 1990
Eastbourne Water Company	Eastbourne	22 February 1990
Folkstone and District Water Company	Folkestone	14 March 1990
Mid Kent Water Company	Mid Kent	25 January 1990
	Mid Kent	25 July 1990
Mid Sussex Water Company	Mid Sussex	16 July 1990
Severn Trent Water Ltd.	Buxton	21 March 1990
	Derbyshire, Nottinghamshire, Leicestershire	26 April 1990
Southern Water Services Ltd.	Kent and Sussex	20 January 1990
	West and East Sussex	21 May 1990
	West and East Sussex	19 July 1990
	North and East Kent	19 July 1990
South West Water Services Ltd.	Devon and Cornwall	2 February 1990
West Kent Water Company	West Kent	4 February 1990

The following water companies introduced hosepipe bans under section 16 of the Water Act 1945 on 4 May:

Company	Area affected
Mid Kent Water Company	Mid Kent
Southern Water Services Ltd.	North Kent

These are the first hosepipe bans to be introduced in 1990. I understand that none of those introduced in 1989 remains in force.

Water use restrictions in Wales are a matter for my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Wales.

Mr. O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he has any plans to increase the responsibilities of local authorities in their monitoring of domestic water supplies; what action he intends to take to record the number of samples taken that do not meet required standards centrally; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: Section 56 of the Water Act 1989 places a general duty on local authorities to keep themselves informed about the wholesomeness and sufficiency of both public and private water supplies in their areas.

For public supplies the primary monitoring is undertaken by the relevant water company, which is required by the Water Supply (Water Quality) Regulations 1989 to maintain a public record of the results of the analysis of samples and send information at least annually to each local authority in its area. This monitoring will provide the basis for the annual report on the quality of water supplied by each company which the drinking water inspectorate will prepare on behalf of the Secretary of State, although the inspectorate may also carry out some monitoring of its own. The results of any monitoring carried out by local authorities will also be taken into account, but we do not see any need for them to increase the effort they themselves devote to monitoring public supplies.

In the case of private supplies, my right hon. Friend has it in mind to use the power in section 56(5) of the Water Act 1989 to make regulations covering the performance of local authority functions, particularly in relation to sampling and analysis and the associated charging arrangements. An advisory group, which includes representatives of the local authority associations, was established earlier this year to consider the content of the regulations. When we receive its conclusions, a consultation document will be issued.

Sewerage

Mr. O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he has any plans to offer grants to properties that are not connected to a main sewer as a means of improving the environment in such areas; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: The water service companies have a duty to ensure that their areas are effectively drained and to provide mains sewerage for properties in response to a valid requisition. Grants are available under the Rural Water Supplies and Sewerage Acts 1944 to 1971 towards the cost of requisitioned schemes providing first-time connections to mains sewers in rural areas.

Drought Orders

Mr. O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many applications have been made to his Department in the current year by water supply companies for extension of drought orders, or drought orders; and if he will list the companies.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: My Department has received 12 such applications this year from the following companies:

Company	Number of applications
East Surrey Water Plc	2
Mid Kent Water Company	2
Southern Water Services Ltd	5
West Kent Water Company	[1]1
Yorkshire Water Services Ltd	[2]2

[1]Withdrawn.
[2]Of which one withdrawn.

Tropical Forestry

Mr. Andrew Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what is the policy of Her Majesty's Government towards the tropical forestry action plan 8; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Chalker: I have been asked to reply.

I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave the hon. Member for Stoke-on-Trent, North (Ms. Walley) on 5 April, at column 733.

River Diversions

Mr. O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what rivers have been involved in a diversion scheme during the past 10 years; what was the length of any diversion of individual rivers and the cause of the diversions.

Mr. Curry: I have been asked to reply.

Neither my Department nor the Department of the Environment holds information on rivers in the form requested. My Department produces statistics on lengths of designated main rivers and I have placed a copy of the latest summary in the Library of the House. I am aware, through grant-aided schemes, that there may be minor diversions of rivers in connection with flood alleviation works.

Pesticide Pollution

Ms. Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment whether he has received a copy of the Soil Survey and Land Research Centre's survey of pesticide pollution in Cornwall; what action he proposes to take to stop dieldrin passing up the food chain; and whether he will take steps to ensure that a copy of the above report is placed in the Library.

Mr. Maclean: I have been asked to reply.

I have received a copy of the Soil Survey and Land Research Centre's report dated June 1989 and will arrange for a copy to be placed in the Library. As a result of high levels of dieldrin found in the River Newlyn, approval for aldrin, which breaks down into dieldrin, was withdrawn in May 1989. The National Rivers Authority continues to monitor Newlyn fish for residues of dieldrin; the results are encouraging.

TRANSPORT

Speed Limits (Western Avenue)

Mr. Hanley: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when the speed limits on the Western avenue between the White City and the Hoover building were last assessed; and whether he intends any changes in the near future.

Mr. Atkins: The current speed limits along this stretch of the A40 have applied for a number of years. There are no immediate plans to make any changes to the existing limits on this stretch of the A40, but the situation will be reviewed as and when circumstances change.

Weight Restriction Signs

Mr. Hanley: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport whether the weight restriction signs which were removed during the gales earlier this year on the one-way flyover at the Hogarth roundabout, at the junction of the A4 and A316, will be replaced.

Mr. Atkins: Yes. The damaged sign gantry will be replaced during night time hours in the week commencing 21 May.

Bus Passengers

Mr. Ernie Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list in the Official Report the requirements and regulations covering folding crew seats and jump seats used by bus passengers.

Mr. Atkins: The requirements for crew seats in buses are contained in the Public Service Vehicles (Conditions of Fitness, Equipment, Use and Certification) Regulations 1981, (SI 1981/257) as amended by SI 1982/1058. The relevant regulations are Nos. 3, 6, 25, 26, 28, 28A and 45A.

The requirements for seat belts for bus crew seats are contained in the Road Vehicles (Construction and Use) Regulations 1986, SI 1986/1078, as amended by SI 1987/1133. The relevant regulations are Nos. 46 and 47.

The Conditions of Fitness Regulations do not permit the use of crew seats by bus passengers. Neither do they refer to "jump seats". However, any seat used by a passenger must comply with regulation 28.

Channel Tunnel

Mr. Fearn: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he has any plans to increase the amount of funds available for the construction of the channel tunnel rail link.

Mr. Freeman: We are currently considering proposals submitted by BR and its private sector partner, Eurorail, for a high-speed link between London and the channel tunnel.

Mr. Tony Lloyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what progress the health and safety at work working group has made in the establishment of compatible accident reporting systems and procedures for the exchange of information on accidents during work on the channel tunnel.

Mr. Freeman: Accidents are reported to the national authorities in the United Kingdom and France under existing regulations and procedures. I understand that information about accidents is exchanged through the Channel Tunnel Safety Authority and its health and safety working group, and a standard reporting form has been developed to ensure the compatibility of information about individual accidents.

Mr. Tony Lloyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) on what dates the health and safety at work working group of the Channel Tunnel Safety Authority met; and what was discussed;

(2) if he will give details of the discussions that have taken place within the health and safety at work working group of the Channel Tunnel Safety Authority on particular health and safety problems associated with the construction of the channel tunnel.

Mr. Freeman: I understand that the health and safety at work working group of the Channel Tunnel Safety Authority meets on average once a month to discuss various topics to do with health and safety in the channel tunnel. The group has principally been concerned over the last year with issues relating to the safety of workers on both the British and French sides during the construction phase.

Mr. Tony Lloyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what discussions have taken place within the health and safety working group of the Channel Tunnel Safety Authority over the need to harmonise working standards and practices when the tunnels meet; and whether there will be a harmonisation of relevant national legislation.

Mr. Freeman: I understand that a series of discussions has been held in the health and safety working group of the Channel Tunnel Safety Authority on the health and safety arrangements which will need to be put in a place to ensure an optimum safety regime when the tunnels meet. When the safety authority reaches conclusions, the intergovernmental commission will consider how best to make arrangements within the provisions of the treaty.

Mr. Tony Lloyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) on what date the safety report referred to on page 4 of the Channel Tunnel Safety Authority annual report 1988-89 was received; and what actions stemmed therefrom;

(2) on what date the Channel Tunnel Safety Authority received an adequate preliminary risk analysis of risks and hazards from Eurotunnel.

Mr. Freeman: I understand that at an early stage in the design of the project Eurotunnel submitted a preliminary risk analysis for the terminals and tunnels. Since then, certain Eurotunnel submissions on individual aspects of the design and operation of the system have been accompanied by safety reports which provide elements of a safety analysis. However, as the chairman of the safety authority said in his letter of November 1989 submitting the annual report, the authority sees a need for a full hazard analysis to be commissioned by the concessionaires and audited by the maitre d'oeuvre. The safety authority will be closely involved in designing and monitoring the study and assessing the significance of the results.

Mr. Tony Lloyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when the Channel Tunnel Safety Authority's annual report 1989-90 will be published.

Mr. Freeman: I understand that the report is under preparation by the safety authority and should be published in the autumn.

Traffic Lights

Mr. Higgins: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport pursuant to his reply to the right hon. Member for Worthing of 21 February, Official Report, column 818, if, he will intervene to ensure that the traffic lights at the junction of St. George's road and Garden way, London, are not operated in future.

Mr. Atkins: The London borough of Southwark is the responsible highway authority for St. George's road and Garden Row. Representations about the future of the traffic lights at the junction of these two roads should be directed to that council. I understand, however, that the early indications are that the pedestrian accident rate has in fact improved since the lights were installed.

Mr. Spearing: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what timetable was set for the installation of additional traffic signals at the junction of Newham way, A13 and Tollgate road, Beckton; when he now expects them to be operational; and if he will state the reasons for any delay.

Mr. Atkins: I regret the delay in installing the new traffic signals which was originally planned for last summer. This was due to several factors including difficulties over design and contract procedures. Tendering is in hand with a view to work starting in July for completion in October.

Road Taxes

Mr. Devlin: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what he estimates would be the approximate annual yield of a road tax of £50 per car, and £100 per coach or lorry, with 100 per cent. supplements for foreign-registered vehicles entering an exclusion zone drawn on a radius of eight miles from the Aldwych in London.

Mr. Atkins: I do not have annual figures for vehicles entering such an exclusion zone.

M40

Mr. Tim Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport in what year he expects the proposed widening of the M40 between junctions 1 and 3 to be completed; and what traffic flows, by volume, density and mix, he anticipates at Gerrards Cross and Beaconsfield at this time and in the following 10 years.

Mr. Atkins: Consultants are to be appointed later this year to investigate options for carrying out the work—the preferred scheme is expected to be announced in 1990.

Subsequent progress would depend upon the nature of the scheme selected and the statutory procedures involved. Completion could be achieved by the late 1990s.

Actual traffic flows and forecasts between M25 (junction 1A) and Beaconsfield (junction 2) are shown in the table.

Year	Vehicles per day (000s)	Weekday HGV's
1990	80	9
2000	120-140	12
2010	140-175	12

Bradford-Leeds Rail Electrification

Mr. Madden: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport whether, following the meeting he had with the West Yorkshire passenger transport executive and others on 26 April, the authority has been asked to supply further information regarding electrification schemes between Bradford and Leeds; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Freeman: The West Yorkshire passenger transport executive was asked to supply further information on 1 May. We will consider its application for credit approvals for the scheme in the light of that information and the resources available.

Mudflaps

Mr. Michael: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what steps he intends to take to ensure that mudflaps and other equipment on heavy goods vehicles are so designed as to reduce the lateral spray which can obscure the vision of other drivers, particularly when overtaking or being overtaken.

Mr. Atkins: Regulations requiring heavy goods vehicles and trailers to be fitted with spray reducing devices have been in existence since November 1984. The European Commission has put forward proposals for a directive on spray broadly in line with our regulations. The fitment of spray suppression devices is also a requirement of the heavy goods vehicle test.

Difficulties can still, however, arise with spray from vehicles in adverse conditions. Research into this problem is now taking place. Any additional requirements resulting from this research would need agreement withinthe European Community.

ENVIRONMENT

Sites of Special Scientific Interest

Ms. Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list for each of the last three years those sites of special scientific interest in Staffordshire which have been damaged by operations which were granted planning permission.

Mr. Trippier: I am advised by the Nature Conservancy Council that between 1 April 1987 and 31 March 1990 there was no reported case of damage by activities given planning permission in Staffordshire.

Radiation

Dr. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many successful prosecutions have been completed under the Radioactive Substances Act 1960; which organisations were found guilty; and on what dates.

Mr. Trippier: Since the Radioactive Substances Act 1960 came into force in 1963 there have been some 13 successful prosecutions in England for breaches of the Act. Because of the Rehabilitation of Offenders Act 1974 it is inappropriate to give details of individual convictions.

Toxic Waste

Mr. Devlin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, pursuant to his answer to the hon. Member for Devizes (Sir C. Morrison) of 23 April, Official Report, column 2, if he will give further details of the research being carried out into toxic and problem waste management and chemical, thermal and biological detoxification.

Mr. Trippier: The following two broad headings which were used in my previous answer include the listed detailed objectives:

Toxic and Problem Waste Management

To determine a variety of ways in which asbestos waste of various types may be reliably and economically destroyed.

To determine operational quality control procedures for the assessment of cement-based solidified wastes under field conditions.

To determine the extent of any potential hazard arising from disposing of mercury containing batteries with household waste.

Waste Management

To determine the general operating conditions under which PCBs can be destroyed by high temperature hydrogen reduction.

To determine whether waste acids or other suitable chemicals may be utilised to degrade persistent pesticide wastes.

Environmental Protection Bill

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, how many representations he has received from (a) local authorities and (b) members of the public concerning the extra funding necessary to implement provisions in the Environmental Protection Bill; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: My Department has received a number of comments from both local authorities and members of the public about the Environmental Protection Bill. The vast majority have been supportive of the new provisions. Some representations have been made about funding to implement relevant parts of the Bill, but I have been able to give the assurance that the new charging systems provided for in parts I and II of the Bill will provide local authorities with an entirely new source of finance from which to fund their new duties. Savings as a result of streamlined procedures for dealing with statutory nuisance under part III will also release resources. We are currently seeking local authorities' views on the cost of implementing the draft code of practice on litter and refuse in part IV of the Bill, and additionally we have commissioned consultants to undertake a survey of 20 local authorities to determine whether extra resources will be required.

Nature Conservancy

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what was the latest currently available cost to him of his proposals to split nature conservancy representatives between England, Scotland and Wales.

Mr. Trippier: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Daventry (Mr. Boswell) on 17 January, Official Report, column 252.

Building Research Establishment

Mr. Tim Smith (Beaconsfield): To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, what specific financial, efficiency and quality of service targets he has approved for the Building Research Establishment for the current year and for the longer term.

Mr. Chope: My right hon. Friend's statement on 28 March, Official Report, column 238 indicated the heads under which performance targets had been set for the Building Research Establishment for 1990-91. I can give the following figures:

	Targets
net vote cost	£1,764,000
untilisation rate for chargeable staff	1 per cent. improvement on previous financial year
non-Exchequer income as a percentage of total income	8·4 per cent.

Figures for other targets are commercially sensitive for the agency and will be treated in confidence. Performance targets for the longer term are currently being developed as part of the agency's corporate planning process.

Common Land

Sir Michael McNair-Wilson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment whether he intends to introduce legislation about the administering of common land and the rights of ordinary people on land designated as common.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply I gave to the hon. Member for Stoke-on-Trent, North (Ms. Walley) on 11 May 1990, Official Report, column 244.

Radioactive Substances

Ms. Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will seek to amend the Environmental Protection Bill to take account of the concerns expressed by Dudley council concerning radioactive substances.

Mr. Trippier: No. The regulation of radioactive substances is a Government responsibility. The Radioactive Substances Act 1960 already requires local authorities to be consulted in respect of proposals to dispose of radioactive waste from nuclear licensed sites or where a local authority would be required to take special precautions. The Environmental Protection Bill further provides that local authorities will receive copies of every application for authorisation to dispose of radioactive waste from organisations in their area.

Recycling, Palace of Westminster

Ms. Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what arrangements are made for the recycling of waste paper removed from the Palace of Westminster in bins now labelled "For Recycling Only"; how that paper is sorted; and what is the percentage efficiency and the cost over the past year of recycling waste paper from the Palace of Westminster.

Mr. Chope [holding answer 14 May 1990]: Waste paper set aside for recycling is roughly sorted on site before being removed, free of charge, by the contractor.

Local Government Finance

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when he expects to lay the relevant parliamentary orders specifying the budget reductions required of those authorities designated for charge capping in 1990-91.

Mr. Portillo [holding answer 14 May 1990]: While there are related matters before the courts it would not be appropriate for me to comment.

Mr. Hardy: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what amount of deprivation Oxford, Cambridge, Kent, Dorset, Hampshire, Bedfordshire, the Isle of Wight and Rotherham were assumed to suffer under the determination of the standard spending assessment for 1990-91.

Mr. Chope [holding answer 14 May 1990]: Standard spending assessment make no explicit assumptions about levels of deprivation. A number of the individual service elements of standard spending assessments take account of social factors. A full description of the methodology used for calculating standard spending assessments is given in the Revenue Support Grant Distribution Report (England) which was approved by the House of Commons on 18 January.

Local Government Revenue

Mr. Harry Barnes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, pursuant to his answer in the Official Report, 3 May, columns 617-18, to the hon. Member for Derbyshire, North-East, if he will list the local government areas in England for which equivalent figures are available.

Mr. Chope [holding answer 14 May 1990]: Equivalent figures are available for the following areas:

Avon
Buckinghamshire
Derbyshire
Dorset
Durham
Isle of Wight
Kent
Lincolnshire
Northumberland
Surrey
Warwickshire
West Midlands
West Sussex
Wiltshire

Toxic Chemicals

Ms. Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what information he has received from the National Rivers Authority as to what investigations are taking place into the leakage of highly toxic chemicals into the River Bourne from a timber and building supplies site; what action the Government are taking to ensure that dangerous chemicals are contained in vandal-proof structures; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory [holding answer 14 May 1990]: My officials were kept informed on this incident by the National Rivers Authority when it occurred. Since then the authority has been carrying out a full investigation but its report is not yet complete.

No decision has yet been made on whether regulations or guidelines on the storage of dangerous substances need to be strengthened.

Housing Transfer (Rochester and Medway)

Mr. Soley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment whether he will give details of the new funding arrangements for the housing transfer in Rochester and Medway; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Michael Spicer [holding answer 11 May 1990]: Details of the funding arrangements are a matter for the financiers and the proposed purchaser of the housing. Any requests for such details should be made to them.

Pollution Inspectorate (Vacancies)

Ms. Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many professional vacancies remain unfilled at Her Majesty's inspectorate of pollution; what he proposes to do to remedy the situation; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory [holding answer 11 May 1990]: There are currently 25 professional vacancies in Her Majesty's inspectorate of pollution, seven of which are reserved for successful candidates to date from the current recruitment competition. We are continuing to recruit actively to fill the remaining posts.

Her Majesty's inspectorate of pollution has also introduced an additional assistant pollution inspector recruitment grade, for candidates with full professional qualifications and at least two years industry experience, who will qualify as pollution inspectors through further training and experience in the inspectorate. This will widen the recruitment for future pollution inspectors, while fully maintaining the present professional standards. The first recruitment competition for APIs is now in progress.

Peat Extraction

Ms. Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make environmental impact assessment mandatory on all planning applications for the extraction of peat.

Mr. Moynihan [holding answer 11 May 1990]: Environmental assessments cannot be made mandatory on all planning applications for peat extraction, as each case has to be considered on its merits. EAs will be required, however, where the proposed development is likely to have a significant environmental impact.

ATTORNEY-GENERAL

Supply Index

Mr. Devlin: To ask the Attorney General if he will make a statement about the decision of the Lord Chancellor's department not to participate in the Government supply index.

The Attorney-General: The Lord Chancellor's Department has made no decision about participation in the Government supply index. It is being considered as a part of the overall strategy for the computerisation of purchasing information systems within the Department.

Bereavement Damages

Mr. Cunliffe: To ask the Attorney-General how many replies he has received to his consultation paper on bereavement damages in favour of (i) increasing the limit to (a) £5,000 and (b) £10,000 or (ii) leaving the limit unchanged.

The Attorney-General: A total of 265 replies to the consultation paper on bereavement damages issued by the Lord Chancellor have been received and these are currently being studied and evaluated.

EDUCATION AND SCIENCE

Race Awareness

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what information he has on the extent to which race awareness training is part of the present syllabus in degree and other law courses in universities and polytechnics.

Mr. Jackson: None. The curriculum of universities' and polytechnics' law courses is a matter for them and for the relevant professional bodies.

Further and Higher Education

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what percentage of 16-year-olds stay on in full-time education either at (a) school or (b) further/higher education institutions in (i) Cornwall and (ii) England.

Mr. Jackson: A total of 27 per cent. of 16-year-olds participated in full-time education in school in Cornwall in 1987-88 and 24 per cent. of them did so in further or higher education institutions. The corresponding figures for England were 27 and 20 per cent. respectively.

Notes: These figures are based on the definitive census counts: the form 7 exercise in schools and the further education statistical record. They differ from the figures used to answer a slightly different question on 8 May which necessitated using a sample survey: the school leavers survey. Age is taken as at 31 August 1987.

Private Colleges of Higher Education

Mr. Win Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what circumstances Her Majesty's inspectors inspect private colleges of higher education.

Mr. Jackson: My right hon. Friend has a duty to cause inspections to be made of all further and higher education institutions within the PCFC funding sector and those which are maintained or assisted by local education authorities. He has no such duty in respect of independent institutions. However, he may at the request of the management of such institutions, cause an inspection to take place. In those circumstances Her Majesty's inspectorate may participate in a supporting assessorial role.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

British Exporters

Mr. McFall: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he has any new proposals to help British exporters.

Mr. Redwood: The volume of United Kingdom exports has continued to grow, reflecting the strong position of United Kingdom industry. Excluding oil and erratic items, the volume of exports in the first quarter of 1990 was 8 per cent. higher than a year earlier. There is a wide range of advice and support available from my Department to assist United Kingdom exporters and of which many firms make use.

Exports (North-West)

Mr. Butler: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what information he has on the export performance of firms in the north-west.

Mr. Redwood: Export data are collated on a national not regional basis and it is not possible to separately identify the export performance of firms in the north-west from official trade statistics.

However, north-west chambers of commerce survey local industry and commerce quarterly. Their findings for the first quarter of 1990 indicate that generally, compared with the fourth quarter of 1989, exports continue to grow and that the north-west region is sharing in the growth of exports nationally.

Indonesia

Mr. Hayward: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what status is held currently by Indonesia in relation to export credit guarantees; and whether this status is under review.

Mr. Redwood: The ECGD is currently open for short, medium and long-term cover on Indonesia. It is reviewing its policy towards those markets on which, in portfolio terms, its exposure is heavily concentrated. Indonesia is one such market. The importance of Indonesia to United Kingdom exporters is well recognised and this will be taken fully into account in the review.

Iraq

Mr. Cabom: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many trade delegations from Iraq have visited the United Kingdom in each of the last five years.

Mr. Redwood: We have readily available information only on officially supported inward missions of which there were one in each of the years 1988-89 and 1989-90. There was Iraqi participation in two multi-country inward missions in 1985-86 and 1987-88.

Mr. Caborn: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry (1) how many British trade delegations have visited Iraq in each of the last five years with the support of the Department of Trade and Industry;

2) how many trade delegations have visited Iraq in each of the last five years with the knowledge of his Department.

Mr. Redwood: The number of trade delegations, including trade fair groups, missions and seminar participants, that have visited Iraq with Government support in each of the last five years is as follows:

	Number
1985-86	Three
1986-87	Four
1987-88	Four
1988-89	Three
1989-90	Six

Unsupported missions are a matter for the companies concerned.

Mr. Caborn: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will supply the names of companies who have been on trade delegations to Iraq in each of the last five years.

Mr. Redwood: It would not be appropriate to provide this information which is a matter between my Department and the companies concerned.

Consultants

Mr. Tim Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry whether he has now set the allocation of his Department's expenditure on consultants for 1990-91.

Mr. Forth: An allocation of £3,080,000 has been made for consultants out of Department of Trade and Industry running costs for 1990-91.

Accounting Requirements

Mr. Irvine: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what plans he has to make regulations under section 245(4) of the Companies Act 1985 as amended by section 12 of the Companies Act 1989.

Mr. Redwood: My Department issued a consultative document yesterday on the issues to be covered by regulations under S245(4).

A copy has been placed in the Library of the House. Further copies are available from my Department by telephoning 071-215 3093, or writing to DTI, Room G707, 10-18 Victoria street, London SW1H 0NN.

The deadline for comments is 20 July 1990.

Financial Services

Mr. Colin Shepherd: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what representations he has received concerning the definition of capital in respect of the requirements for capital adequacy on the part of firms in the financial services sector; what is his definition of capital for this purpose; and if it is his intention to apply this definition to any representations he may be making to the European Commission in respect of the harmonisation of requirements for 1992.

Mr. Redwood [holding answer 14 May 1990]: The Government will continue to take account of the views of United Kingdom financial institutions during the negotiations on the proposed EC capital adequacy directive, including views on the definition of capital. We will be pressing for a definition which takes account of the structure of the United Kingdom financial services industry. In our negotiations on the CAD the United Kingdom is pressing for capital to be related to risk, and for levels of initial capital which do not act as barriers to entry.

Hairdressers

Mr. Bernie Grant: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry, pursuant to his answer of 5 April, Official Report, columns 805-6, (1) whether a person currently practising in the United Kingdom as either a qualified or unqualified Afro-Caribbean hairdresser will be allowed to practise as such in the other European Community countries after 1 January 1993; and whether he will make a statement;

(2) whether a person qualified and practising as an Afro-Caribbean hairdresser will be allowed to continue as such after 1 January 1993;

(3) whether a person not qualified in Afro-Caribbean hairdressing but practising as an Afro-Caribbean hairdresser will be allowed to continue as such after 1 January 1993.

Mr. Redwood: [holding answer 8 May 1990]: The profession of hairdresser is not regulated by law in the United Kingdom and the completion of the single European market will not alter this.

The treaty of Rome already guarantees freedom for every EC citizen to work, to seek work or to set up business in any EC member state. However, member states are not at present obliged to recognise professional qualifications or professional experience gained in other member states, and often do not.

Two main initiatives have been taken to remedy this. First, Council directive 82/489/EEC on hairdressing already makes it easier in certain circumstances for hairdressers who have practised in one member state to meet vocational training requirements in another.

My Department is responsible for issuing the certificates specified in that directive. Second, the Commission has put forward a draft directive on a second general system for the recognition of professional education and training (COM(89) 372 of 8 August 1989) which is aimed at ensuring that all professional qualifications gained in one member state are recognised in another. The directive is currently under discussion in a Council working group.

SOCIAL SECURITY

Students (Benefits)

Mr. Andrew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security when he received the report of the Social Security Advisory Committee on the Government's proposals to end the entitlement of students to housing benefit, unemployment benefit and other social security benefits; and if he will publish the report immediately.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: The report of the Social Security Advisory Committee on the draft Social Security Benefits

(Student Loan and Miscellaneous Amendments) Regulations 1990 was received on 27 April. We are, at present, giving careful consideration to the report which will be published with our formal response in the normal way when the regulations are laid before Parliament.

Social Security Benefits Agency

Mr. Brandon-Bravo: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what progress his Department has made in establishing the social security Benefits Agency.

Mr. Newton: I announced earlier today the appointment of Michael Bichard as chief executive of the Benefits Agency following selection by open competition. This is a major step in setting up the agency which will come into being next April and which will be the largest executive agency in Government. Mr. Bichard is currently chief executive of Gloucestershire county council. He has wide experience of management and will, I am sure, make a first-rate leader of the new agency. He is being appointed for a five-year period.

Staff Qualifications

Mr. John Garrett: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will publish in the Official Report the numbers and percentages of his staff in grades 1 to 7 who have (a) arts, (b) science and (c) technical degrees, (d) who are qualified accountants, (e) have postgraduate qualifications in management and (f) who were educated in (i) local authority and (ii) private schools.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard [holding answer 2 May 1990]: The table relates to staff recorded on the Department's headquarters personnel computer system, including professional staff. Information about the remainder of the Department's staff is not readily available and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

	Number	Per cent.
Total number of staff in grades 1 to 7	[3]422	100
Number with arts degrees	72	17
Number with science degrees[1]	198	47
Number with law degrees[2]	41	10
Number with post-graduate qualifications in management	—	—
Number with no degree	111	26

[1] One hundred and sixty-four of whom have medical degrees.
[2] There are no members of staff with other "technical" degrees.
[3] Only one of the 422 staff in grades 1 to 7 is a qualified accountant, 0·2 per cent. of the total.
Note: No details of types of school attended are held and a separate clerical exercise to ascertain the information would involve disproportionate cost.

HEALTH

NHS Reform

Mr. Spearing: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what proposals he has for restricting the role of community health councils in representing the public in future National Health Service contracts and fund-holding general practices.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: The role of community health councils (CHCs) will remain fundamentally unchanged. District health authorities will be expected to take careful account of the views of their resident population on the overall pattern of service which they plan to secure through their contracts. CHCs will play an important role in this. Fund-holding general practititioners, being in direct touch with the patients they serve, will have less need of an intermediary in this respect.

Alternative Therapies

Mr. Fearn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many general practitioners offer alternative and complementary therapies to National Health Service patients.

Mr. Dorrell: This information is not held centrally.

Abortion

Mr. Alton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to the answer to the hon. Member for Peckham (Ms. Harman), 8 May, Official Report, column 84, in how many of the 22 abortions performed after 24 weeks gestation attempts were made to save the life of the child; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: This information is not collected centrally. Matters relating to the care of patients are confidential and are for the clinical judgment of the doctor concerned.

Pesticides

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what research has been conducted to establish the incidence of chronic exposure to low levels of pesticides; what training doctors within the National Health Service are given to enable them to recognise this; and if he will make a statement on the health implications for the general public of chronic exposure to low levels of pesticides.

Mr. Dorrell [holding answer 23 April 1990]: We are not aware of any United Kingdom research into the incidence of chronic exposure to pesticides. Surveys of human milk and human fat carried out as part of the regular monitoring by the working party on pesticides residues in food have indicated very low residues of fat soluble pesticides and related chemicals. Residues of pesticides found in food are generally within recommended maximum residue levels and within the safety limits.

Pesticides are approved for use by Ministers after receiving the advice of the Advisory Committee on Pesticides which considers all relevant toxicity data including that on consumer exposures. If significant adverse health effects are a possibility, approval is not recommended.

All doctors receive training in the diagnosis of acute poisoning, including that from exposure to pesticides. In addition, all general practitioners and hospital accident and emergency departments have been issued with a copy of the book "Pesticide Poisoning", a copy of which is in the Library. This gives guidance on the diagnosis and treatment where acute poisoning from pesticides is suspected. Chronic exposure to the levels of pesticides found in the diet are not known to have any health effects, but, if a doctor was unable to attribute symptoms in a patient to other well-recognised causes, it would be open to the doctor to consider chronic exposure to pesticides as a possible cause of the illness. Working towards the diagnosis of obscure illness by eliminating more obvious causes is a normal part of medical training.

ENERGY

Council of Ministers

Mr. Ieuan Wyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what proposals he will introduce at the meeting of the European Council of Energy Ministers in Brussels on 21 May.

Mr. Peter Morrison: Only the European Commission has the right to initiate formal legislative proposals to the Council. My right hon. Friend will suggest whatever changes he considers necessary during discussions with the other Energy Ministers.

Nuclear Fuel (Reprocessing)

Mr. Ieuan Wyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy if details of the origins, sizes and dates of spent fuel imports for reprocessing are notified to his Department for the purposes of international nuclear safeguards.

Mr. Baldry: My Department receives reports on all spent nuclear fuel imports, for the purposes of international nuclear safeguards.

OVERSEAS DEVELOPMENT

Tropical Forests

Mr. Devlin: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the claims made in the circular letter sent to all hon. Members by Friends of the Earth on 9 March concerning the tropical forest action plan.

Mrs. Chalker: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave the hon. Member for Stoke-on-Trent, North (Ms. Walley) on 5 April, at column 733.

El Salvador and Nicaragua

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what is the current level of bilateral aid and EC provisions for El Salvador and Nicaragua; what are the plans for the rest of the current financial year; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Chalker: We have a bilateral technical co-operation programme for El Salvador which will continue —£154,000 in 1988 including disaster relief. I recently announced that we were starting a modest technical cooperation programme for Nicaragua, which should get under way during the year. As regards EC provisions, EC commitments are made in respect of individual projects from within the total allocated annually for the Asia and Latin America programme. Figures for EC commitments in recent years are:

	1987	1988	[1]1989
El Salvador	19·73 mecu	2·87 mecu	3·91 mecu
Nicaragua	21·42 mecu	43·23 mecu	16·49 mecu

WALES

Government Supply Index

Mr. Devlin: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make a statement about his Department's decision not to participate in the Government supply index.

Mr. Wyn Roberts: No such decision has been taken. The Welsh Office is actively considering participation in the Government supply index.

Local Government Finance

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what is his latest estimate of (a) the total number of personal poll tax payers in Wales and (b) the number in receipt of community charge benefit.

Mr. David Hunt: The information is as follows:
(a) 2,175,000 (including students).
(b) 550,000.

Birth Control

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales in how many of the district health authorities of Wales there are currently proposals being considered for a cut back in the service of family planning clinics within their area; and if he will identify those authorities considering such cutbacks.

Mr. David Hunt: This information is not held centrally.

Hospital Closures

Mr. Geraint Howells: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list the number of hospitals closed in Wales during each of the last 10 years; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Grist: The number of hospitals which have closed, and are still closed, is given in the table. During the same period, seven hospitals, including four district general hospitals, have opened, and the NHS in Wales is treating a record number of patients.

Number of hospitals closed since 1 January 1980

Year	Number
1980	3
1981	1
1982	–
1983	1
1984	3

Consultants

Mr. Tim Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales whether budgets for 1990-91 for expenditure on management and computer consultancies have yet been finalised.

Mr. David Hunt: Yes. Most of the resources are found from within the central administration vote and in 1990-91 £230,000 has been earmarked for this purpose.

Ophthalmic Clinics

Mr. Michael: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales (1) how many new out-patient attendances at ophthalmic clinics were recorded in each quarter of 1989 in each health authority area in Wales;

(2) how many new out-patient attendances at ophthalmic clinics were recorded in each quarter of 1988 in each health authority area in Wales;

(3) how many new out-patient attendances at ophthalmic clinics were recorded in each quarter of 1987 in each health authority area in Wales;

(4) how many new out-patient attendances at ophthalmic clinics were recorded in each quarter of 1986 in each health authority area in Wales;

(5) how many new out-patient attendances at ophthalmic clinics were recorded in each quarter of 1989 in each county in Wales;

(6) how many new out-patient attendances at ophthalmic clinics were recorded in each quarter of 1988 in each county in Wales;

(7) how many new out-patient attendances at ophthalmic clinics were recorded in each quarter of 1987 in each county in Wales;

(8) how many new out-patient attendances at ophthalmic clinics were recorded in each quarter of 1986 in each county in Wales.

Mr. David Hunt: The table shows the number of new ophthalmology out-patients recorded in NHS hospitals in Wales, by county and district health authority:

Mr. Michael: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many new out-patient attendances at ophthalmic clinics were recorded (a) in South Glamorgan and (b) in Wales in the first quarter of 1990.

Mr. David Hunt: The information is not yet available.

Glaucoma

Mr. Michael: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales, further to his answers of Tuesday 8 May on glaucoma, whether he will ask each health authority and family practitioner committee in Wales to notify him of the numbers of cases of glaucoma diagnosis that were recorded in (a) 1986, (b) 1987, (c) 1988, (d) 1989 and (e) the first quarter of 1990.

Mr. David Hunt: I shall write to the hon. Gentleman and place a copy of my letter in the Library of the House.

Flooding

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will meet Bishop Alwyn Rice Jones to discuss the north Wales sea floods.

Mr. David Hunt: I have received no request for a meeting from Bishop Rice Jones. If such a request is made it will be considered.

St. David's Airfield, Pembrokeshire

Mr. Nicholas Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if any of the proposed site of the over-the-horizon radar installation on the site of the former St. David's airfield, Pembrokeshire, is designated a site of special scientific interest.

Mr. Wyn Roberts: I understand that the proposed sites will be located entirely within the boundaries of the Ministry of Defence land at St. David's airfield and that no part of that land has been designated a site of special scientific interest.

District Health Authorities (Loans)

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will publish a table in the Official Report showing for each of the district health authorities in Wales, the financial sums borrowed by them on an interest-free basis from other authorities in Wales for each year from 1984-85 to 1989-90, and where appropriate, if he will indicate whether these loans were used for revenue or capital purposes.

Mr. David Hunt: The information requested is shown in the table:

Health Care, Gwynedd

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales, pursuant to his reply of 9 May to questions concerning health care in Gwynedd, if he will publish a copy of his letter in answer in the Official Report.

Mr. David Hunt: No, a copy of the letters will be made available in the Library.

NATIONAL FINANCE

Central Office of Information

Mr. Tim Smith: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what specific financial, efficiency and quality of service targets he has approved for the Central Office of Information for the current year and for the longer term.

Mr. Ryder: The targets that have been approved for the Central Office of Information are set out in annex A of its framework document as follows:

Financial

1. To break even in current cost terms after covering all costs, including interest on borrowings.
2. To achieve a 1 per cent. reduction in unit cost of output in real terms, which maintaining suitable levels of quality. Appropriate internal targets will be set for every budget holder to ensure achievement of the departmental target.

Financial

3. To achieve savings for clients on a base year of 1984-85, for incorporation in their annual returns to the CUP.
4. To deliver all work in accordance with client specification.
5. To deliver all work on time.

These targets have been agreed for the long term with the exception of target 2 which is subject to annual review in the light of market forces. Copies of the framework document are in the House of Commons Library.

THE ARTS

Energy Consumption

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Minister for the Arts, pursuant to his answer of 1 May, Official Report, column 475, why details of energy consumption are not available for the buildings occupied by the offices for which he is responsible.

Mr. Luce [holding answer 10 May 1990]: My office is located in two buildings, both shared with other Government Departments. They are not sub-metered to measure individual Departments' actual energy consumption. Charges are therefore made on the basis of the respective areas of floor space. I shall write to the hon. Member with further details.

PRIME MINISTER

Mr. Charles Powell

Q99. Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Prime Minister if she will list those aspects of the supplementary question of 26 April from the hon. Member for Linlithgow concerning contacts between Mr. Charles Powell and Mr. Conrad Black which she does not accept as having a basis in fact; and if she will make a statement on the aspects of the hon. Member's interpretation which she does not accept.

The Prime Minister: I have nothing further to add to my reply of 26 April.

Engagements

Mr. McAvoy: To ask the Prime Minister if she will list her official engagements for Tuesday 15 May.

Mr. Watson: To ask the Prime Minister if she will list her official engagements for Tuesday 15 May.

Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Prime Minister if she will list her official engagements for Tuesday 15 May.

Mr. Dunnachie: To ask the Prime Minister if she will list her official engagements for Tuesday 15 May.

Mr. Tony Lloyd: To ask the Prime Minister if she will list her official engagements for Tuesday 15 May.

Mr. Stern: To ask the Prime Minister if she will list her official engagements for Tuesday 15 May.

The Prime Minister: This morning I had meetings with ministerial colleagues and others. In addition to my duties in the House, I shall be having further meetings later today. This evening I shall attend a memorial service for the late Lord Rothschild.

Executive Agencies

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Prime Minister whether she will list in the Official Report the subjects on which, as a result of the transfer of functions to executive agencies, Ministers will no longer answer questions.

The Prime Minister: Ministers remain fully accountable to Parliament for all the work of their Departments, including executive agencies. However, hon. Members may often wish in the first instance to deal directly with agency chief executives on those matters for which they have delegated authority under the agency's framework document and I would encourage them to do so. In such cases the chief executive will be best placed to give them a response promptly and effectively.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Sex Offenders

Mr. Maclennan: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what consideration he is giving to the recommendations contained in the report published by the Suzy Lamplugh Trust entitled "Working with the Sex Offender: Issues for Policy and Training, Prevention and Treatment" a copy of which has been sent to him; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. John Patten: I welcome the initiatives taken by the Suzy Lamplugh Trust in focusing attention on the treatment and sentencing of sex offenders. We are considering the report's recommendations and its points for action and we shall take them into account in developing our own strategy for the treatment of sex offenders.

Ex-offenders (Training)

Mr. Hattersley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on recent reductions in training facilities available for ex-offenders following the renegotiation of contract for voluntary sector providers.

Mr. Waddington: Funding for employment training is a matter for the Department of Employment. I understand that recent reductions in funding are related to falling unemployment and a significant reduction in the numbers of young people entering the labour market. The Training Agency and the new training and enterprise councils seek to ensure that suitable training is provided for people with special needs, including ex-offenders. Officials of the Home Office and Training Agency are jointly examining the implications of the Government's recently published White Paper on dealing with offenders in the community in relation to training and enterprise programmes.

Prisoners

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what criteria are used to determine whether a prisoner should be held on rule 43; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Mellor: Prison rule 43 provides that, where it appears desirable, for the maintenance of good order or discipline or in his own interests, that a prisoner should not associate with other prisoners, either generally or for particular purposes, the governor may arrange for the prisoner's removal from association accordingly. Segregation for more than three days requires authorisation by the board of visitors. Where a prisoner's segregation is requested or recommended for his own protection, the governor must satisfy himself that the prisoner is seriously at risk of assault by other prisoners and that his safety cannot be assured by other means. Where segregation for maintenance of good order or discipline is considered, the governor must be satisfied, in the light of information available, that the prisoner's continued association with other prisoners poses a threat to the efficient running and control of the prison. The governor may arrange at his discretion for a prisoner to resume association with other prisoners, and must do so if in any case the medical officer so advises on medical grounds.

Women Prisoners

Miss Emma Nicholson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what proportion of births to women prisoners have been stillborn in each of the last 10 years.

Mr. Mellor: There were eight deliveries within prison service establishments between 1 January 1979 and 31 March 1989 none of which were still births. Figures for still births in outside hospitals are not collected centrally, and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Miss Emma Nicholson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what proportion of pregnancies of women prisoners have resulted in a miscarriage in each of the last 10 years.

Mr. Mellor: This information is not collected centrally, and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Somali Refugees

Sir David Steel: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what Her Majesty's Government's policy is towards Somali refugees.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: As with other nationalities, our policy is to grant asylum to Somali refugees for whom the United Kingdom is the most appropriate country of refuge.

Foreigners (Language Schools)

Mr. Simon Coombs: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is his estimate of the number of foreign nationals who came to the United Kingdom to study English through language schools in (a) 1979, (b) 1984 and (c) 1989.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: The information is not available in the form requested. However, the international passenger survey results for 1984 showed that there were an estimated 477,000 visits to the United Kingdom by foreign residents who attended an English language course. It is not known what proportion of these studied at language schools. Respondents holding passports from the main English-speaking countries were not asked about their attendance on English language courses.

Data Protection Act

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list the prosecutions made under the Data Protection Act; and if he will give the outcome of the prosecutions.

Mr. Mellor: We understand that 27 prosecutions by the Data Protection Registrar have been completed. Twenty-six of these resulted in fines, averaging £466·67; and one in a conditional discharge. Details are obtainable from the registrar. Some prosecutions have also been initiated by the Director of Public Prosecutions, but they are not separately listed.

SCOTLAND

Nursery Education

Mr. Dewar: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many and what percentage of children aged three and four years were in receipt of nursery education in each local education authority area for Scotland in each of the years 1978-79 to the latest date for which information is available.

Mr. Rifkind: The figures for local education authority nursery schools and departments at each September for which information is available are set out in the tables. Information for 1985 and 1986 is not available.

Royal Ordnance Factory, Bishopton

Mr. Graham: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) what will be the future role of the Strathclyde police in the protection of Royal Ordnance, Bishopton;

(2) what would be the responsibility of the Strathclyde police for any serious incident taking place at Royal Ordnance, Bishopton.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The police are responsible for the containment and investigation of any serious incident wherever it may take place. The chief constable of Strathclyde has discussed the future security arrangements at ROF Bishopton with the Ministry of Defence; and the role he proposes for Strathclyde police is an operational matter for him.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Visa Processing

Mrs. Mahon: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations he has received concerning delays in the processing of visas at United Kingdom embassies and high commissions abroad.

Mr. Sainsbury: We receive a number of representations, both from hon. Members and from the public, about entry clearance procedures and delays at our embassies and high commissions.

European Community

Mr. Teddy Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will set out the evidence on which he based the statements on the second page of his Department's pamphlet entitled, "Britain in the Community: Europe in the 1990s" (a) that goods and services will become more freely available and (b) it will become easier to move bank accounts from the United Kingdom to other European countries.

Mr. Maude: The single market programme includes a large number of measures to improve the availability of goods and services in the EC: for example, the removal of internal customs barriers; liberalisation of transport; and setting of common standards. The capital liberalisation directive agreed in 1988 requires most member states to lift restrictions on capital movements by 1 July 1990, thus facilitating capital flows in the EC.

Mr. Teddy Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list the (a) legislative and (b) other measures which have secured the policy objectives set out on the ninth page of his Department's pamphlet entitled, "Britain in the Community: Europe in the 1990s".

Mr. Maude: Twelve White Paper measures have so far been agreed to open up the banking, insurance and stock market sectors; nine more are being discussed; and one is still to be brought forward. Closer co-ordination of member states' economic policies was agreed by the Council decision of 12 March 1990. And state subsidies to industry have been reduced by stringent application of articles 92 and 93 on state aids.

Mr. Teddy Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what was (a) the total actual expenditure of the EEC and (b) the net United Kingdom contribution in 1986, 1987, 1988 and 1989; what is the estimate for 1990; and how these figures relate to the statements made in the first, second and third paragraphs on the eighth page of his Department's pamphlet entitled, "Britain in the Community: Europe in the 1990s".

Mr. Maude: The table provides the relevant figures. Budgets since the 1988 Brussels European Council have stayed well within the GNP own resources ceiling established then. Community GNP has grown significantly.

	Total EC expenditure £ million	United Kingdom net contribution £ million
1986	22,953	572
1987	24,894	1,721
1988	27,426	1,362
1989	30,123	2,315
[1]1990	33,355	2,175

[1] Estimate.

Mr. Teddy Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will give the figures on which he bases the statement on the eighth page of his Department's pamphlet entitled, "Britain in the Community: Europe in the 1990s", that beef stocks are down by 80 per cent. and cereals by 55 per cent.; and if he will list the specific measures of budgetary control which have brought about these reductions.

Mr. Maude: In February 1990, beef stocks were 125,000 tonnes (a reduction of 82·4 per cent. from their highest level, in September 1985, of 711,000 tonnes); and cereals stocks 8,121,000 tonnes (a reduction of 55·4 per cent. from their highest level, in October 1985, of 18,193,000 tonnes). Specific budgetary control measures include: reducing the number of months when intervention is available; cutting intervention prices; imposing ceilings on production for which support is available; producer taxes ("co-responsibility levies").

Mr. Teddy Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will set out the evidence on which he based the statement on the fourth page of his Department's pamphlet, "Britain in the Community: Europe in the 1990s", that minimisation of immigration checks is a major objective of the Community; and if he will list the checks which it is proposed to remove.

Mr. Maude: The statement in the pamphlet "Britain in the Community" about ease of travel in the Community directly reflects articles 3(c) and 8(a) of the treaty of Rome, which specifically call for the abolition of obstacles to freedom of movement for persons, and provide that the internal market shall include such free movement of persons in accordance with the provisions of the treaty. My right hon. Friend the then Secretary of State for the Home Department explained our position in full during the debate on intra-Community frontiers on 4 May 1989.

Falkland Islands

Dr. Woodcock: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what progress is being made in introducing direct flights from the mainland of South America to the Falkland Islands.

Mr. Sainsbury: Several charter flights have recently been made between the Falkland Islands and Punta Arenas in Chile; more are planned, by a variety of commercial operators.

Dr. Woodcock: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will introduce a fishery conservation area around South Georgia.

Mr. Sainsbury: We have no present plans to do so; fishing in the waters around South Georgia is already controlled by the Commission for the Conservation of Antarctic Marine Living Resources (CCAMLR), of which the United Kingdom is an active member. We fully support the Commission for the Conservation of Antarctic Marine Living Resources' efforts, and are working to make them more effective.

Dr. Woodcock: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list the voluntary restraint agreements which have been negotiated by the Foreign and Commonwealth Office with respect to waters surrounding the Falkland Islands and South Georgia outside of the Falklands Islands conservation zone.

Mr. Sainsbury: No formal agreements have been negotiated by the FCO. After direct negotiations with the Falkland Islands Government, fishing associations from Korea, Japan and Taiwan undertook to limit their fishing activity this year in the south Atlantic as a whole. In return their members were allocated licences to fish within the Falkland Islands interim conservation and management zone. These arrangements are intended to promote the effective conservation of migratory fish stocks.

Dr. Woodcock: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will take steps to equate the Argentinian and British military notification zones.

Mr. Sainsbury: The notification zones specified in the interim reciprocal information and consultation system (IRICS) agreed with Argentina in Madrid in February are part of a comprehensive and balanced package of reciprocal measures.

As I said in reply to my hon. Friend the Member for Gravesham (Mr. Arnold) on 16 February, this series of measures is intended to increase confidence in the region.

Dr. Woodcock: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs (1) if he will extend the Falkland Islands fisheries conservation zone;

(2) if he will extend the Falklands Islands territorial fishery zone to 200 miles on the same basis as that applied to the coastal waters of Argentina.

Mr. Sainsbury: We have no present plans to extend the Falkland Islands interim conservation and management zone (FICZ).

Dr. Woodcock: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will discuss with representatives of the residents of the Falkland Islands their view on the possibility of incorporating the Falkland Islands into the United Kingdom.

Mr. Sainsbury: The elected councillors have not expressed any wish that incorporation of the islands into the United Kingdom be considered.

Dr. Woodcock: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list the measures being undertaken to preserve fish stocks in the waters surrounding South Georgia.

Mr. Sainsbury: Fishing in the waters surrounding South Georgia is controlled by the Commission for the Conservation of Antarctic Marine Living Resources (CCAMLR), of which the United Kingdom is a member. The current conservation measures imposed by CCAMLR are:

(a) Chaenocephalus aceratus—no direct fishing allowed
Pseudochaenichthys georgianus—no direct fishing allowed
Notothenia squamifrons—no direct fishing allowed

(b) Notothenia gibberifrons—no direct fishing allowed, total allowed by-catch 300 tonnes

(c) Dissostichus eleginoides—no specific measures, but agreement that there will be no increase in fishing in 1990 over 1989.

(d) Champsocephalus gunnari—Total Allowable Catch (TAC) of 8,000 tonnes

(e) Patagonotothen brevicauda guntheri—TAC of 12,000 tonnes

In addition, commercial fishing is not allowed within the 12-mile territorial sea.

Israel

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what financial help the Government is giving to Israel; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Maude: We do not give any aid to the Government of Israel.

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many representations the Government have made to the Israeli Government concerning its involvement in Palestine.

Mr. Maude: We frequently remind the Israeli Government of our view that there is an urgent need for negotiation with the Palestinians towards a peace settlement and that, pending this, it is the responsibility of the Israelis to administer the occupied territories in accordance with their obligations and with international law.

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when he next plans to visit Israel to discuss its involvement in Palestine; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Maude: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs has at present no plans to visit Israel.

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many representations he has received from hon. and right hon. Members and members of the public concerning Israeli involvement in Palestine.

Mr. Maude: We receive numerous representations about the Palestinian question and Israel's administration of the occupied territories.

Hong Kong

Mr. Stanbrook: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement about the current position of present and retired expatriate members of Her Majesty's overseas civil service in Hong Kong and their eligibility for pensions based on the pound sterling equivalent at the time of retirement, in view of the recent fluctuations in the pound sterling equivalent of the Hong Kong dollar.

Mr. Maude: All pensionable civil servants employed by the Hong Kong Government receive their pensions in Hong Kong dollars. There are no plans to change this arrangement. The Hong Kong dollar is linked to the United States dollar.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Hostages

Mr. John M. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many British hostages are presently believed to be held in the Lebanon; what are their names; on what dates each of them was taken hostage; and what information he has about the organisations involved in these kidnappings.

Mr. Maude: There are currently three British hostages held in Lebanon. They are Mr. John McCarthy (abducted on 17 April 1986), Mr. Jack Mann (abducted on 12 May 1989) and Mr. Terry Waite (abducted on 20 January 1987). There have been no substantiated claims for them. However, the American hostage, Mr. Frank Reed, who was released on 30 April by a previously unheard-of group, the Organisation of the Islamic Dawn, has confirmed that he was held together with Mr. McCarthy.

Mr. Cryer: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the efforts made by his Department to obtain the release of the hostages held captive in the middle east.

Mr. Maude: I refer to the answer of 18 April given by my right hon. Friend the Minister of State, Foreign and Commonwealth Office to the hon. Member for St. Helens, North (Mr. Evans) and to the answer given by my right hon. Friend, the Foreign Secretary on 9 May to the hon. Member for Derbyshire, North-East (Mr. Barnes).

Antarctica

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations he has received from the Federal Republic of Germany with regard to the forthcoming meeting of Antarctic treaty parties in November to discuss the protection of the Antarctic environment.

Mr. Sainsbury: None. Bilateral consultations have taken place at official level.

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what consideration has been given to the proposals for the protection of the Antarctic environment put forward by the Australian and French Governments.

Mr. Sainsbury: The Franco-Australian proposals were presented to us on 3 May. We are giving them careful consideration and look forward to discussing them with our Antarctic treaty partners at the special Antarctic treaty consultative meeting in November in Santiago.

Anthony Blunt

Mr. Allason: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether he granted permission to Professor Peyton Lyons to reproduce extracts from the transcript of Anthony Blunt's interrogation in his report to the Canadian Department of External Affairs entitled "The Loyalty of E. Herbert Norman"; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Sainsbury [holding answer 5 April 1990]: The Lyons report was a Canadian Government matter. No consultation took place with the United Kingdom authorities before it was published.

DEFENCE

Nuclear Power Stations

12. Mr. McCartney: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether his Department will give consideration to contributing to the decommissioning cost of Calder Hall and Chapelcross.

25. Mr. Graham: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether his Department will give consideration to contributing to the decommissioning cost of Calder Hall and Chapelcross.

65. Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether his Department will give consideration to contributing to the decommissioning cost of Calder Hall and Chapelcross.

Mr. Alan Clark: The Ministry of Defence intends to meet its share of the future costs of decommissioning the reactors at Calder Hall and Chapelcross.

Brawdy Radar Station

13. Dr. Kim Howells: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if his Department will undertake further studies into (a) the health effects and (b) the environmental implications of the Brawdy radar.

46. Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if his Department will undertake further studies into (a) the health effects and (b) the environmental implications of the Brawdy radar.

51. Mr. Murphy: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if his Department will undertake further studies into (a) the health effects and (b) the environmenal implications of the Brawdy radar.

54. Mr. John P. Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if his Department will undertake further studies into (a) the health effects and (b) the environmental implications of the Brawdy radar.

Mr. Alan Clark: The health and environmental implications of the over-the-horizon radar transmitter which we propose to locate at St. Davids airfield will be fully addressed in the environmental impact assessment which will be undertaken over the next few months.

NATO Eastern Boundary

14. Mr. Grocott: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether he has made any reassessment of the location of the eastern boundary in Europe which NATO is committed to defending.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: We support the wish of both German Governments that a unified Germany should be a member of the North Atlantic alliance, as this would contribute to stability and security in Europe. The implications for NATO are under consideration.

Conventional Forces in Europe

15. Mr. Martlew: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what United Kingdom forces have been offered for inclusion in the proposed CFE agreement; and if he will make a statement on the defence implications.

28. Mr. Mullin: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what United Kingdom forces have been offered for inclusion in the proposed CFE agreement; and if he will make a statement on the defence implications.

59. Mr. David Young: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what United Kingdom forces have been offered for inclusion in the proposed CFE agreement; and if he will make a statement on the defence implications.

Mr. Pike: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what United Kingdom forces have been offered for inclusion in the proposed CFE agreement; and if he will make a statement on the defence implications.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: In accordance with the agreed mandate for the CFE negotiations, all the United Kingdom's conventional armaments and equipment of the types currently under discussion in Vienna that are within the area from the Atlantic to the Urals are included in the proposed CFE agreement.

Radiation

16. Dr. Moonie: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a further statement upon the exposure to radiation of (a) submariners and (b) dockyard workers.

30. Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a further statement upon the exposure to radiation of (a) submariners and (b) dockyard workers.

39. Mr. Doran: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a further statement upon the exposure to radiation of (a) submariners and (b) dockyard workers.

Mr. Neubert: Exposure of Service personnel or MOD civilians to ionising radiation is authorised only on the basis that it is justified, complies with MOD and statutory limits and is as low as reasonably practicable. The same principles are followed by the civilian contractors at the royal dockyards.

Training (Canada)

17. Mr. Key: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when he last visited Canada to review training facilities for British service men.

Mr. Neubert: My right hon. Friend the Member for Ayr (Mr. Younger) visited the British Army training unit at Suffield, Alberta, in July last year.

Arms Exports

18. Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether his Department monitors the end use of United Kingdom-produced weapons exported to less developed countries.

114. Mr. Dunnachie: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether his Department monitors the end use of United Kingdom-produced weapons exported to less developed countries.

22. Mr. Ronnie Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether his Department monitors the end use of United Kingdom-produced weapons exported to less-developed countries.

58. Mr. Ray Powell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether his Department monitors the end use of United Kingdom-produced weapons exported to less-developed countries.

Mr. Alan Clark: It is not usually necessary to monitor the stated end use of defence exports. Where, however, there is reason to do so, we do so.

Atomic Weapons Establishment

Mr. Tony Lloyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether he has received any tenders for the initial management contract at the atomic weapons establishment.

19. Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether he has received any tenders for the initial management contract at the atomic weapons establishment.

34. Mr. Bradley: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether he has received any tenders for the initial management contract at the atomic weapons establishment.

Mr. Neubert: An invitation to tender for the initial management contract at the atomic weapons establishment was issued on 6 April. Tenders should be received in June.

Nuclear Submarine Bases

20. Mr. Gareth Wardell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what liaison his Department has with local authorities on special safety plans for areas adjoining Z-berths.

31. Mr. Norman Hogg: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what liaison his Department has with local authorities on special safety plans for areas adjoining Z-berths.

33. Ms. Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what liaison his Department has with local authorities on special safety plans for areas adjoining Z-berths.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: It is MOD policy to undertake maximum consultation with all the relevant county, city and local councils and local emergency services in drawing up all Royal Navy public safety schemes.

Training Instructors

21. Mr. Ashley: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what steps are taken to monitor the health and fitness of training instructors before and during exercises.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: Training instructors are subject to the same medical examinations as the service personnel whom they are expected to train, which is the PULHHEEMS system of medical classification.

Pipeline (Iraq)

23. Mr. McKelvey: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what action his Department took when it was first made aware of the pipeline equipment built in the United Kingdom for Iraq having possible military implications.

52. Mr. Caborn: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what action his Department took when it was first made aware of the pipeline equipment built in the United Kingdom for Iraq having possible military implications.

66. Ms. Armstrong: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what action his Department took when it was first made aware of the pipeline equipment built in the United Kingdom for Iraq having possible military implications.

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what action his Department took when it was first made aware of the pipeline equipment built in the United Kingdom for Iraq having possible military implications.

Mr. Alan Clark: In the light of the charges raised against certain individuals recently and in the light of continuing investigations by Customs and Excise, it would be inappropriate to give any further information.

Low Flying

24. Mr. Kennedy: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he has yet had an opportunity to consider the National Audit Office report on military low flying; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Neubert: I have nothing to add to the answer that I gave to the hon. Member on 6 March 1990 at column 616.

44. Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what recent representations he has received concerning the disturbance caused by low flying; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Neubert: Between 1 March 1990 and 30 April 1990 the Ministry of Defence received 955 inquiries or complaints about military low-flying training in the United Kingdom.

Army Manpower

26. Mr. Stern: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what were the overall manpower needs of the British Army in 1980, 1985 and 1990.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The requirement of the British Army for trained, regular, United Kingdom personnel in 1980, 1985 and 1990 was 146,890, 143,888 and 142,742 respectively.

Forces (Europe)

27. Mr. Terry Fields: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what consideration he has given to the defence implications of current force levels in Europe.

29. Mr. Bill Michie: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what consideration he has given to the defence implications of current force levels in Europe.

63. Mr. Roy Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what consideration he has given to the defence implications of current force levels in Europe.

Mrs. Mahon: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what consideration he has given to the defence implications of current force levels in Europe.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: We are examining options for change in the structure and deployment of our armed forces which will enable us to support and preserve the key elements of our defence provision in the light of changing international circumstances.

NATO Nuclear Planning Group

32. Mr. James Lamond: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what decisions were made at the recent NATO nuclear planning group meeting in Alberta, Canada.

35. Mr. Lewis: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what decisions were made at the recent NATO nuclear planning group meeting in Alberta, Canada.

38. Mr. Andrew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the outcome of the NATO nuclear planning group meeting held at Kananaskis village, Alberta, Canada.

50. Ms. Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the outcome of the NATO nuclear planning group meeting held at Kananaskis village, Alberta, Canada.

53. Mr. Wareing: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what decisions were made at the recent NATO nuclear planning group meeting in Alberta, Canada.

55. Mr. Buchan: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the outcome of the NATO nuclear planning group meeting held at Kananaskis village, Alberta, Canada.

64. Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the outcome of the NATO nuclear planning group meeting held at Kananaskis village, Alberta, Canada.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: I refer the hon. Members to the answer that I gave earlier today to the hon. Member for Sheffield, Hillsborough (Mr. Flannery).

Lance Missile

36. Mr. Frank Cook: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether Her Majesty's Government will abandon their support for a replacement to the Lance short-range nuclear missile.

45. Mr. Steinberg: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether Her Majesty's Government will abandon their support for a replacement to the Lance short-range nuclear missile.

Ms. Short: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether Her Majesty's Government will abandon their support for a replacement to the Lance short-range nuclear missile.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: I refer the hon. Members to the reply that I gave earlier today to the hon. Member for Barnsley, East (Mr. Patchett).

Defence Procurement

37. Mr. Fatchett: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the five largest British defence companies providing defence equipment to the United Kingdom armed forces.

43. Mr. Eastham: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the five largest British defence companies providing defence equipment to the United Kingdom armed forces.

Mr. Battle: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the five largest British defence companies providing defence equipment to the United Kingdom armed forces.

Mr. Alan Clark: I refer the hon. Member to the answer that I gave earlier today to the hon. Member for Edinburgh, South (Mr. Griffiths).

Merchant Ships

40. Mr. Parry: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make it his policy to use only British merchant ships for Ministry of Defence charters; and if he will make a statement.

42. Mr. Clay: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make it his policy to use only British merchant ships for Ministry of Defence charters; and if he will make a statement.

60. Mr. Loyden: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make it his policy to use only British merchant ships for Ministry of Defence charters; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Neubert: I refer the hon. Members to the answer that I gave earlier today to the hon. Member for Hemsworth (Mr. Buckley).

Over-the-Horizon Radar

41. Mr. Michael: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a further statement on his proposal for the siting of proposed over-the-horizon radar transmitters on the former St. David's airfield in Pembrokeshire; and what progress has been made in his plans to inform and consult public opinion on the proposal.

Mr. Alan Clark: I recently visited St. David's, at the invitation of my hon. Friend the Member for Pembroke (Mr. Bennett), to inspect the site of the proposed installation, explain the background to our proposals to my hon. Friend's constituents, and hear their initial representations at first hand.

The next step will be for the Ministry of Defence to commission a full environmental impact assessment in respect of this proposed installation. This will support a formal notice of proposed development which we plan to submit to the Pembrokeshire Coast National Park Authority later this year. Once we have submitted the notice of proposed development, we intend to give full public presentations of our proposals. I also understand that the national park authority will undertake wide consultation and invite representations on the notice of proposed development from all interested parties.

Type 23 Frigates

47. Mr. Jack Thompson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the present status of the command system for the type 23 frigate.

49. Mr. Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the present status of the command system for the type 23 frigate.

Mr. Allen McKay: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the present status of the command system for the type 23 frigate.

Mr. Neubert: I have nothing to add to the statement that I made on 18 April at column 938.

Trident

48. Mr. Fisher: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what amount of money could be saved by a decision to cancel the fourth Trident submarine in the near future.

56. Mr. Wray: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what amount of money could be saved by a decision to cancel the fourth Trident submarine in the near future.

Mr. Madden: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what amount of money could be saved by a decision to cancel the fourth Trident submarine in the near future.

Mr. McAllion: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what amount of money could be saved by a decision to cancel the fourth Trident submarine in the near future.

Mr. Neubert: No contract has yet been placed. It is our estimate that savings in the order of £500 million would result if it were decided in the near future not to proceed with the planned order for the fourth Vanguard class submarines.

European Fighter Aircraft

57. Mr. Strang: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether the European fighter aircraft nose radar development contract has been allocated; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Alan Clark: I refer the hon. Gentleman to the statement made by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State on 8 May at columns 33-34.

Armed Forces (South Dorset)

61. Mr. Ian Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he has any plans to increase the stationing of armed forces personnel in south Dorset.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The exact number of service personnel stationed in south Dorset will fluctuate with the normal redeployment of units. There are, however, no current plans that would alter this number to any significant degree.

Unreliable Equipment

62. Mr. John Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what assessment he has made of the annual cost of maintaining unreliable defence equipment.

Mr. Skinner: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what assessment he has made of the annual cost of maintaining unreliable defence equipment.

Mr. David Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what assessment he has made of the annual cost of maintaining unreliable defence equipment.

Mr. Neubert: At a very broad estimate, unreliability adds £1 billion a year to the cost of maintaining the services' equipment.

START Agreement

Mr. Watson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what United Kingdom forces have been offered for inclusion in the proposed START agreement; and if he will make a statement on the defence implications.

Mr. McAvoy: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what United Kingdom forces have been offered for inclusion in the proposed START agreement; and if he will make a statement on the defence implications.

Mr. Harry Barnes: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what United Kingdom forces have been offered for inclusion in the proposed START agreement; and if he will make a statement on the defence implications.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: I refer the hon. Members to the reply that I gave earlier today to the hon. Member for Bristol, South (Ms. Primarolo).

Queen's Birthday Parade

Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many horses and riders were on the Queen's birthday parade in each of the past three years; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Neubert: The number of military riders taking part in the Queen's birthday parade in 1987 and 1988 was 251; the number of military horses taking part in each of these years was 276. In 1989, the corresponding numbers were 247 personnel and 272 horses. This includes those riders and horses forming part of the royal procession which numbered 24 in 1987 and 1988 and 20 in 1989.

Horseshoe Barracks

Mr. Teddy Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what progress has been made in determining the future use of the Horseshoe barracks in Shoeburyness.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: Discussions with the local planning authority and others on our plans to dispose of Horseshoe barracks, Shoeburyness, are continuing.

Consultancies

Mr. Tim Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how much the Ministry of Defence expects to spend in the financial year 1990-91 on management and computer consultancy contracts.

Mr. Alan Clark: The Ministry of Defence expects to spend £22 million in the financial year 1990-91 on management and computer consultancy contracts.

Royal Ordnance Factories

Mr. Graham: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what representations he has received from members of the public about the withdrawal of Ministry of Defence police from royal ordnance, Bishopton.

Mr. Neubert: Forty three letters have been received registering protest at the plan to withdraw MDP from Bishopton.

Mr. Graham: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what decision has been taken about the future deployment of the Ministry of Defence police at the royal ordnance factories at Glascoed, Bridgewater, Chorley, Nottingham and Radway Green; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Neubert: Discussions with Royal Ordnance plc continue. No final decision has been taken.

Mr. Graham: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many royal ordnance company guards will replace Ministry of Defence police on 1 June at royal ordnance, Bishopton; and what powers of arrest and detention employees of the company guard force will have.

Mr. Neubert: Fifty-one Royal Ordnance Company guards will replace Ministry of Defence police. The guards will have only citizen's powers of arrest and detention. The Strathclyde police, with whom our arrangements have been agreed, will provide a police response quickly when required.

Mr. Nicholas Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will provide details of the compensation arrangements made on previous occasions where the circumstances are similar to those which would pertain near the proposed over-the-horizon radar installation on the site of the former St. David's airfield, Pembrokeshire.

Mr. Alan Clark: On no previous occasion have the circumstances been similar to those which would pertain near to the proposed over-the-horizon radar installation at St. David's airfield, Dyfed. I refer the hon. Gentleman to my earlier answer on 23 April at column 74 on the subject of compensation.

Mr. Nicholas Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will give details of the compensation arrangements which he will make if the proposed over-the-horizon radar installation on the site of the former St. David's airfield, Pembrokeshire, is approved.

Mr. Alan Clark: Where the provisions of the Land Compensation Act 1973 apply, my Department will pay compensation if the district valuer is satisfied that there is evidence of a reduction in the value of a residential property (or certain small businesses) as a consequence of bringing into use new works. The Act makes no provision for compensation where the consequence is solely the visual impact of the completed works, so there can be no assurance that its terms will apply in all or any cases that may arise under this proposal. Nonetheless, where the provisions of the Act do not apply, my Department is always prepared to consider reasonable claims for compensation if it can be demonstrated that actual loss has been sustained as a result of military activity.

Mr. Nicholas Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence who is to carry out the independent environmental impact assessment study on the proposed over-the-horizon radar installation on the site of the former St. David's airfield, Pembrokeshire; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Alan Clark: I will announce details of the firm which is to carry out the independent environmental impact assessment on the proposed over-the-horizon radar installation at St. David's airfield, Pembrokeshire, once the contract is let.

Devonport Dockyard

Mr. O'Neill: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what assessment has been made of future redundancies at Devonport dockyard.

Mr. Neubert: The size of the workforce at Devonport dockyard is a matter for Devonport Management Limited.

HMS Illustrious

Mr. O'Neill: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when HMS Illustrious will start its refitting programme; and where it will be refitted.

Mr. Neubert: HMS Illustrious's next refit is scheduled to start as part of the core programme at Devonport dockyard in 1991 and to finish in 1993. The plans for refitting Royal Naval vessels are, however, subject to continuous review.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Bovine Spongiform Encephalopathy

Mr. Hague: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food whether he has any plans to add to his previous statement on bovine spongiform encephalopathy in the light of recent events.

Mr. Gummer: The wide-ranging measures adopted by the Government have been based on the best scientific expertise available. These experts concluded that the risk to humans is remote but action has been taken:

1. To slaughter and destroy all affected cattle so that no part can enter the human food chain;
2. Specified offals, including the brain and spinal chord, must be removed from healthy cattle slaughtered for human consumption.
3. Banning of the use of these offals as food or in food products.

The removal and banning for food of these offals is a precautionary measure which goes beyond the scientific advice. These actions fully protect the public from what is a remote and theoretical risk.

The situation is, however, being kept under constant review and hence the committee under Dr. Tyrrell has been constituted as a permanent committee to examine new information and concerns and to ensure that the advice on which the Government act is kept fully up to date.

A major research programme has been in progress since the disease was first identified in 1986. More than £2 million has already been spent. A further £12 million has been allocated to projects, devised on the basis of advice from the Tyrrell committee, for the next three years. All the results of this research will be made publicly available.

The source of the disease has been cut off with the ban, from July 1988, on the feeding of ruminant material to ruminants. Because of the long incubation period, cases will continue to occur for some years. We intend to eradicate this disease in cows but this will obviously take time. In the meantime the action taken demonstrates the Government's absolute commitment to protecting and reassuring the public.

Local education authorities can therefore continue to provide beef in school meals with complete confidence. As the Minister responsible for food safety for the whole nation, I reiterate that British beef is perfectly safe to eat. This is the view not only of our top scientists but also of European Community experts.

The Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food is committed to making public all the information that we have about these matters. That is why we gave out the information about the one cat (out of Britain's 7 million) diagnosed as having an encephalopathy. There is nothing to link that encephalopathy with BSE or scrapie, or to suggest that it is transmissible. However, we were determined that all this should be in the public domain and we shall continue our investigations, the results of which will also be announced.

Sausages

Mr. Burt: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what steps his Department is taking to preserve the British sausage; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Maclean: The Commission's proposals would require minced meat and sausages to be prepared from fresh, chilled meat within six days of slaughter. This would prevent the use of meat from carcases which have been matured to enhance flavour and tenderness. The use of some fit meat, including shin and skirt, would be prohibited. Chilled minced meat and sausages could not be made from frozen meat and would be required to be chilled to 2°C within an hour of preparation, leading to freeze damage. Only butchers producing minced meat and sausages on their premises for direct sale to customers would be exempt from these requirements.

There are no sound hygiene reasons for these restrictions, which would increase costs and reduce consumer choice.

We are negotiating hard in Brussels to secure the removal of these restrictions from the Commission's proposals. The industry are also making representation on their own behalf. Further, in co-operation with the industry, we shall be arranging to publicise the proposals in the hope that this will stimulate United Kingdom consumers to write to Members of the European Parliament, and to the Commission, protesting about the restrictions which would be put on their freedom of choice.

Contaminated Feed

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food, further to his answer to the hon. Member for South Shields on 9 May. Official Report, column 132, whether the contamination of pig feed still affects the county of Hampshire.

Mr. Gummer: The contamination of pig feed no longer affects any farms in Hampshire.

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food whether any farms on Tyneside have received contaminated pig feed.

Mr. Gummer: No farms on Tyneside are reported to have received contaminated pig feed.

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food whether animals other than pigs have been fed contaminated feed; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Gummer: The contaminated feed ingredient was also included in feed for sheep and dairy and beef cattle, but at lower levels from those included in pig feed. There have been no reported incidence of ill effects in animals other than pigs. Pigmeat and cows' milk samples from farms which have received contaminated feed have been tested and no evidence of any conceivable hazard to human health ensuing out of this incident has been found.

Central Veterinary Laboratory

Mr. Tim Smith: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what specific financial, efficiency and quality of service targets he has approved for the central veterinary laboratory for the current year and for the longer term.

Mr. Maclean: I announced the laboratory's financial and efficiency targets for 1990-91 in my written answer to my hon. Friend the Member for Ludlow (Mr. Gill) on 30 March 1990 at column 364. It is, of course, for the laboratory's customers to specify appropriate quality standards for individual contracts, but I attach great importance to all contracts being completed on time and to a high standard. The laboratory's current peer review arrangements will also continue.

I am still considering the question of appropriate longer-term targets as I am determined that improvements in efficiency should not be made at the expense of quality or of the laboratory's ability to respond effectively in an emergency.

EMPLOYMENT

Training

Mr. Hind: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he has any plans to review the dates for finalising training agent contracts with the Training Agency; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Nicholls: Recontracting with employment training (ET) training agents, and with training managers and with YTS managing agents, should be substantially complete by 28 May 1990. I have no plans to review this date.

Health and Safety Executive

Mr. Andrew Welsh: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment (1) how many monitoring visits have been undertaken in (a) Scotland and (b) Angus in each of the last 10 years by the Health and Safety Executive;

(2) how many inspections have been undertaken by the Health and Safety Executive in (a) Scotland and (b) Angus in each of the last 10 years.

Mr. Nicholls: I will write to the hon. Member.

Mr. Andrew Welsh: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will make a statement on current staffing levels in the Health and Safety Executive in Scotland.

Mr. Nicholls: On 1 April 1990, 177·5 staff were employed in Scotland by the Health and Safety Executive.

Mr. Andrew F. Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what is the current amount of fees outstanding to the medical division (EMAS) of the Health and Safety Executive for medical examinations.

Mr. Nicholls: On 10 May 1990 £8,175 had been outstanding for more than three months in respect of fees for medical examinations carried out by the employment medical advisory service.

Mr. Andrew F. Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment (1) how many former employees of the Health and Safety Executive have been re-employed as consultants by the Health and Safety Executive; what the total costs of such consultants was in fiscal year 1989-90; what is the projection for 1990-91; and what is the average hourly rate of these consultants;

(2) what consultancy fees were paid to non-ex-Health and Safety Executive staff in 1989-90 by the Health and Safety Executive; and what is the projection for 1990-91.

Mr. Nicholls: Total consultancy fees paid to individuals in 1989-90 by the Health and Safety Executive were £19,787; of which £6,202 (an hourly rate of £22·55p) was to a former HSE employee. Under HSE's devolved budgeting system, recruitment of consultants is decided by divisions according to need, within the limits of their running cost budgets.

Mr. Andrew F. Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what is the profit margin on the recently published Health and Safety Executive annual report; and how many shop floor sales are anticipated at the cover price.

Mr. Nicholls: In line with Her Majesty's Treasury rules HSE operates a policy which sets prices for its publications which will recover the full cost of production. A total of 1,300 copies of the 1988-89 report have been sold since its publication in February. It is too early to assess the eventual sales revenue and no information is available about the background of customers, both past and potential, of the publication.

Mr. Andrew F. Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what proportion of the administrative staff of the Health and Safety Executive have any formal qualifications in management.

Mr. Nicholls: The great majority of officials in these grades are not employed in a managerial capacity. The percentage of administrative staff who are recorded as having formal academic qualifications relevant to management is 3·3.

Training Credits

Mr. Jack: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will make a statement on the progress of the training credits initiative.

Mr. Eggar: Thirty-three training and enterprise councils (TECs) have submitted proposals to operate pilot credit schemes in their area. This is clear evidence of the widespread interest in and enthusiasm for training credits for young people.

I expect to make an announcement in early June about those TECSs which will be invited to develop a more detailed proposal.

Training Vouchers

Mrs. Gorman: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will make a further statement on the progress in introducing his training voucher scheme.

Mr. Eggar: Thirty-three training and enterprise councils (TECs) have submitted proposals to operate pilot credit schemes in their area.

I expect to make an announcement in early June about those TECs which will be invited to develop a more detailed proposal.

Skill Centres

Mr. Cryer: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment when he expects to conclude negotiations to sell skill centres to Astra Training Services Ltd.; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Eggar: Pursuant to my reply of 2 May 1990, Official Report, column 544, I expect to complete the sales of the training business at Barking, Southampton and Wolverhampton skill centres (including Telford Outreach) shortly.

The sale of the training business at Chesterfield skill centre will not take place because of the Labour council's refusal to make the premises available to Astra.

Mr. Cryer: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will list the skill centre sites sold other than to Astra Training Services Ltd., giving each purchaser and the sites acquired.

Mr. Eggar: The following list includes details of training businesses sold to purchasers other than Astra.

To METEL (Merseyside Education Training Enterprise Ltd.): Liverpool skill centre. The purchaser acquired the freehold of the site.

To the consortium headed by Mr. C. Lakin: Cumbria, East Lancs, St. Helens and Ipswich. The consortium purchased the freehold of Cumbria skill centre, and was granted leases on the other sites.

To the Training Business: Lambeth skill centre. The purchaser acquired the leasehold interest of the site.

Mr. Cryer: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment whether any technical instructor grades have been offered alternative employment in the civil service before or following the sale of skill centres to private organisations; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Eggar: Fifty-one staff in instructional grades in the Skills Training Agency (STA) have transferred to alternative posts in the civil service since the Secretary of State for Employment announced his intention to transfer STA to the private sector.

Mr. Cryer: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what is the total value of the freehold land sold to various companies involved in the purchase of skill centres; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Eggar: The Government appointed King and Company, surveyors, to value the Skills Training Agency (STA) estate, prior to the sale of STA to the private sector. The sale of the Government's residual property interests is not yet complete. The valuations are therefore confidential.

Inspection Visits

Mr. Andrew F. Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment when the current chief inspector of factories last conducted a basic inspection visit alone.

Mr. Nicholls: The chief inspector of factories does not, as a matter of policy, undertake preventive inspections alone. This is the primary work of regional staff.

Mr. Andrew F. Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many basic inspection visits are paid in a year by area directors of the Health and Safety Executive; and if he has any plans to increase the figure.

Mr. Nicholls: As a matter of policy area directors do not normally carry out preventive inspections alone but may, on occasions, accompany other inspectors on inspection visits.

Mr. Andrew F. Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many basic inspection visits per average working week are made by area office-based deputy superintending inspectors of factories alone; and what steps he intends to take to increase their inspection rate in 1990-91 over past years.

Mr. Nicholls: Deputy superintending inspectors of factories are in general employed not in an inspection role but in connection with standards formation and headquarters and management work. In total last year inspectors of this grade carried out 162 unaccompanied visits generally in connection with their other duties. There are no plans to increase this aspect of their work.

Mr. Andrew F. Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment when the director-general of the Health and Safety Executive last visited a factory.

Mr. Nicholls: Mr. Rimington's latest official visits to various categories of industrial installation regulated under the Health and Safety at Work, &c. Act are as follows:

Installation	Date
a factory	October 1987
an oil rig	August 1982
an approved laboratory	January 1990
a nuclear power station	June 1986
a nuclear chemical installation	August 1985
a construction site	November 1988
a coal mine	June 1986

Mr. Andrew F. Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many basic inspection visits per average working week are made by area office-based principal inspectors of factories alone; and what steps he intends to take to increase their inspection rate in 1990-91 over past years.

Mr. Nicholls: A high proportion of inspection visits concerned with the more complex issues and demanding situations is made by principal inspectors acting either alone or in some cases accompanied. These visits are not differentiated in the records and to obtain the information requested would involve disproportionate cost.

Mr. Andrew F. Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many factory visits in an average working week made in 1989-90 by the doctors and nurses employed in the field force of the employment medical advisory service (medical division) of the Health and Safety Executive.

Mr. Nicholls: The information is not available in the form requested. Between 1 April 1988 and 31 March 1989 medical staff in the employment medical advisory service based in the Health and Safety Executive's area offices made a total of 7,002 visits.

Action Credit

Ms. Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will give (a) the full cost of the research being carried out into the viability of extending action credit to the five employment service areas, including employment service staff hours, (b) the full amount that has, and is to be paid for administering and monitoring the existing three action credit pilots including the three month extension, and (c) on what grounds he took the decision to fund new research before the initial research into the pilots was finished.

Mr. Eggar: The cost of the research carried out into the viability of extending action credit to employment service areas was £35,466. The involvement of employment service staff was minimal.

The contracted cost of administering and monitoring the existing three action credit pilots, including the three month extension is £100,025. Currently there are no plans which would increase the total cost of the three pilots.

The existing pilots are targeted only at those leaving employment training. The new research was therefore commissioned to give an insight into the reactions of all long-term unemployed people to the concept of action credit.

Training Agency (Contracts)

Mr. Tim Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment whether the total budget of the Training Agency for 1990-91 for management and computer consultancy contracts has now been agreed.

Mr. Eggar: The total budget of the Training Agency for 1990-91 for management and computer consultancy contracts has now been agreed as follows:

Management	11,000
Computer	4,881,000
Total	4,892,000

Channel Tunnel

Mr. Tony Lloyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if the Health and Safety Executive have any plans to compile comparative figures for accident and serious injury rate figures for both sides of the channel tunnel construction project.

Mr. Nicholls: The Health and Safety Executive does not have any plans to compile comparative figures for accident and serious injury rates for both sides of the channel tunnel construction project. Information about accidents is already exchanged in the Channel Tunnel Safety Authority health and safety working group for accident prevention purposes. It is difficult to compare directly figures from the French and United Kingdom sides due to the different national procedures and criteria for accident reporting.

Mr. Tony Lloyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what assessment the Health and Safety Executive has made of the adequacy of medical facilities on the construction site of the channel tunnel and within the tunnel itself; and what were its conclusions.

Mr. Nicholls: The Health and Safety Executive monitors the medical facilities at the channel tunnel site and is keen to ensure that the current level of service is maintained.

Mr. Tony Lloyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what information he has on the numbers of people employed on the channel tunnel construction project on (a) the British side and (b) the French side at the end of 1987, 1988, 1989 and the latest date for which information is available.

Mr. Nicholls: Available information about the total numbers of people employed on the channel tunnel construction project is as follows:

Total employed on the project

Year	Number
February 1988	2,218
January 1989	5,014
December 1989	6,950

Figures for the French side are not available.

Mr. Tony Lloyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what comparative research exists within the Health and Safety Executive into accident or incident rates on (a) civil engineering and (b) construction projects within Europe.

Mr. Nicholls: The Health and Safety Executive has not carried out any comparative research into these matters.

Mr. Tony Lloyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment on what dates meetings took place between representatives of the Health and Safety Executive and their counterparts in France to discuss health and safety issues arising out of the construction of the channel tunnel.

Mr. Nicholls: Officials of the Health and Safety Executive regularly meet representatives of the French Government through the bi-national Channel Tunnel Safety Authority and its working groups, including the health and safety working group which considers safety matters arising out of the construction of the channel tunnel. The health and safety working group meets on average once a month. This year the group met on 25 January, 22 February, 13 March, 26 March and 26 April.

Mr. Tony Lloyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what discussions have been held over the need to harmonise working standards and practices when the Channel tunnels meet; and whether there will be a harmonisation of relevant national legislation.

Mr. Nicholls: A series of discussions have been held in the Channel Tunnel Safety Authority's bi-national health and safety working group on the health and safety arrangements which will need to be put in place when the tunnels meet. No final decisions have yet been taken about these arrangements.

Mr. Tony Lloyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will undertake an inquiry into the safety of working practices to report as a matter of urgency on construction of the channel tunnel.

Mr. Nicholls: No. The prime responsibility for health and safety rests with employers. Transmanche Link has told my right hon. and learned Friend the Secretary of State that it is to re-examine all working practices and procedures in the light of recent incidents. It has agreed to share with the Health and Safety Executive the results of an internal audit of safety arrangements and work practices. The accident prevention advisory unit of the Health and Safety Executive is already undertaking an audit of safety practice in relation to the maintenance of the tunnel boring machines.

Mr. Tony Lloyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will make a statement on the death of Mr. William Cartman on Monday 7 May during work on the channel tunnel.

Mr. Nicholls: The accident which led to the death of Mr. William Cartman on Monday 7 May is currently under investigation by the Health and Safety Executive. My right hon. and learned Friend the Secretary of State met senior management of the channel tunnel contractors, Transmanche Link, on 10 May to discuss the safety arrangements on site. Transmanche Link has undertaken to re-examine all working practices and procedures in the light of recent incidents.

Mr. Tony Lloyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what information and statistics exist about (a) accident rates, (b) death rates and (c) serious injury on the French and British sides of construction of the channel tunnel.

Mr. Nicholls: The Health and Safety Executive holds information and statistics on accidents on the channel tunnel construction site reported to it under the Reporting of Injuries, Diseases and Dangerous Occurrences Regulations 1985 (RIDDOR). The collection of information and statistics for the French side of the project is a matter for the French authorities. Information about accidents is exchanged in the Channel Tunnel Safety Authority's health and safety working group for accident prevention purposes.

Mr. Tony Lloyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what is the relationship between the Health and Safety Executive and the Channel Tunnel Safety Authority.

Mr. Nicholls: The Health and Safety Executive is responsible for enforcing the Health and Safety at Work, &c. Act and the relevant statutory provisions which apply to the United Kingdom channel tunnel construction sites. The Channel Tunnel Safety Authority is a bi-national body established under the treaty of Canterbury and its duties are set out in that treaty. An HSE official is a member of the safety authority.

European Social Fund

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment on what date he submitted the United Kingdom operational programme to fulfil objectives 3 and 4 of ESF to the European Commission for the 1990 programme.

Mr. Eggar: The initial Great Britain operational programme applications for ESF support concerning objectives 3 and 4 were submitted to the European Commission on 31 August 1989. The Northern Ireland operational programme applications were submitted on 29 August 1989. The European Commission has subsequently adopted the community support framework for these objectives, which determines the amounts and priorities for ESF support and now requires us to revise the programmes in accordance with these.

Mr. Tony Lloyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what representations he has received from voluntary organisations about the delays in the processing of applications for the European Community social fund.

Mr. Eggar: I have received written representations from five voluntary organisations about the delays in processing applications for the European social fund.

Race Discrimination

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many alleged cases since 1976, of race discrimination under the 1976 Act, have been lodged with the central office of industrial tribunals for England and Wales where the respondent was either a regional health authority, district health authority or formally an area health authority; and if he will give a breakdown by year naming each health authority, and the number of cases lodged; how many of these alleged cases came before a tribunal, giving a breakdown by year, naming each health authority and the number of cases heard; and how many of the cases heard by the industrial tribunal were successful, giving a breakdown by year, naming each health authority and the number of successful cases.

Mr. Nicholls: The information requested could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Schools-Industry Compacts

Mr. David Martin: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how much his Department plans to spend over the next four years to support schools-industry compacts.

Mr. Eggar: Over the next four years my Department plans to spend in the region of £27 million to support schools-industry Compacts in inner city areas.

In addition, my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry announced on 24 April 1990 that the Government intend to support local business education partnerships across the country. My Department will lead this initiative from April 1991. Details of the financial provision for this initiative are yet to be finalised.

Health and Safety Regulations

Mr. David Young: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will make representations to the Health and Safety Executive about the case for putting prosecutions of those breaching health and safety regulations through the Crown court and not initially through the magistrates court.

Mr. Nicholls: All cases must by law go initially to the magistrates court. Under section 19 of the Magistrates Court Act (1980), responsibility for referral of cases to Crown court rests with the justices.

Mr. Nellist: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what was the outcome of his meeting with Transmanche Link following the death of William Cartman on 7 May; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Nicholls [holding answer 14 May 1990]: My right hon. and learned Friend the Secretary of State met Mr. Jack Lemley, chief executive of Transmanche Link (TML), who assured him that the highest priority would be given to safeguarding the health and safety of workers employed on the construction of the channel tunnel.

My right hon. and learned Friend reminded TML that although the Health and Safety Commission and Executive have extensive powers which they have used and will continue to use to enforce United Kingdom safety legislation, the prime responsibility for safety at the site rested with the management, as with any contract.

HSE inspectors will continue to monitor safety standards at the site and will not hesitate to enforce action that they consider necessary.

Ms. Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will make it his policy to encourage people on employment training courses to train in skill shortage areas.

Mr. Nicholls [holding answer 14 May 1990]: It is my right hon. and learned Friend's policy to encourage eligible unemployed people to join employment training with the aim of securing employment on completing training, including training in skill shortage occupations where appropriate, within the resources available.

Written Answers to Questions

NORTHERN IRELAND

Stevens Inquiry

Mr. A. Cecil Walker: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what is the total cost of the Stevens inquiry; how many persons have been taken in for questioning as a result of this inquiry and subsequently released without charge; and how many persons are now in custody as a result of this inquiry.

Mr. Brooke: Ninety-four persons, have been arrested as a result of the inquiry led by DCC Stevens. Fifty-nine have been charged, and 24 persons are now in custody. The final cost of the inquiry is not yet available. Up to 24 April, however, £307,000 had been spent. It is estimated that final costs for the period ending 31 March 1990 will be around £500,000.

Fair Employment

Rev. William McCrea: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will list all firms in Mid-Ulster which are registered with the Northern Ireland Fair Employment Commission in Strabane district council, Omagh district council and Cookstown district council areas.

Mr. Needham: Information in the form requested is not yet available. The Fair Employment Commission expects, however, to be in a position to provide information in that form later this year.

Rev. William McCrea: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will list the numbers of employees in each public organisation by the Fair Employment Commission's definition of Protestant and Roman Catholics in Omagh council area for those companies or organisations on the fair employment register.

Mr. Needham: The Fair Employment Commission holds monitoring information on the numbers of people employed by public authorities which are specified under the Fair Employment (Specification of Public Authorities) Order (NI) 1989. This is not however disaggregated by district council area.

Mineral Extraction, Cavanacaw

Rev. William McCrea: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what conditions are being imposed upon the mineral operation being carried on at Cavanacaw, Omagh so as to ensure the future welfare and safety of the environment; and whether final approval has been granted for the mineral extraction in this area.

Mr. Needham: The conditions of the prospecting licence include provision for restoration of lands affected by prospecting operations. No approval has been given for a mining lease in the Cavanacaw area near Omagh, but planning permission has been granted for a temporary exploration trench for mineral exploration subject to conditions imposed in the interest of amenity and road safety. In addition, a consent has been granted for the making of a discharge into a waterway under the terms of the Water Act (NI) 1972 subject to conditions to ensure that the waterway will not be polluted. I have sent copies of the planning decision notice and the Water Act consent to the hon. Gentleman and the Library.

Cash Limits

Mr. Michael Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement about the cash limit for Northern Ireland departmental services for 1990-91.

Mr. Brooke: Subject to parliamentary approval of the main estimates for Northern Ireland departmental services through the Draft Appropriation (No. 2) (Northern Ireland) Order 1990 which was laid before Parliament today, the following changes will be made to the cash limit for Northern Ireland departmental services (NIDI) for 1990-91 (only the first of these affects the level of public expenditure resources available to Northern Ireland). The changes are:

(a) an addition of £6·7 million in respect of the 1990 Health Service review body awards. This provides additional public expenditure provision for the health and personal social services boards in Northern Ireland: the addition will be charged to the reserve and will not therefore add to the planned total of United Kingdom public expenditure;
(b) a reduction of £15 million, reflecting an increase in the estimates of the employers' and employees' contribution to the Health Service. As a transfer within central Government this does not affect public expenditure;
(c) a reduction of £10 million, reflecting higher forecast repayments of borrowings by Northern Ireland Electricity;
(d) a reduction of £4·6 million, reflecting reduced expenditure on the rundown of the gas industry in Northern Ireland.

The last two items reflect reallocation of resources within existing plans from cash-limited services to non-cash-limited services.

The net effect of these changes is a reduction of £22·9 million in the cash limit NIDI, from £2,972·194 million to £2,949·294 million.

Mr. Brian Nelson

Mr. A. Cecil Walker: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement on the security role of Brian Nelson in north Belfast.

Mr. Brooke [holding answer 30 April 1990]: Mr. Nelson is currently in custody charged with possession of information likely to be of use to terrorists. His case is therefore sub judice and I can make no comment about it.

Beef Industry

Mr. McGrady: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what financial or other arrangements he proposes to make to alleviate the financial problems now affecting the beef industry in Northern Ireland.

Mr. Peter Bottomley [holding answer 14 May 1990]: The Northern Ireland beef sector will benefit considerably from the changes agreed at the recent EC price-fixing negotiations. It is estimated that returns to beef producers will increase by about £8 million in a full year as a result of the changes in beef support and agrimonetary arrangements which were secured. The Northern Ireland beef sector should benefit, in particular, from the reduction in monetary compensation amounts on trade in cattle and beef across the land border with the Republic of Ireland and with other regions of the EC.

OVERSEAS DEVELOPMENT

Third World Economic Development

Mr. John Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, pursuant to the reply on 14 May from the Minister for Overseas Development to the hon. Member for Hendon, South, if he will list in the Official Report details of studies of the development role of a social market economy sponsored by his Department.

Mrs. Chalker: The information is as follows:

ODA sponsored research on the role of markets and economic liberalisation

ATTORNEY-GENERAL

Courts (Access)

Mr. Harry Barnes: To ask the Attorney-General if he has any plans to improve access for disabled people to courts and other law buildings.

The Attorney-General: New and adapted or reconditioned court buildings provide, to the maximum possible extent, all the facilities required for the disabled, including lifts and ramps as necessary. Other buildings have had improvements incorporated where this has been feasible. New court rooms are designed to high acoustic standards which benefit the hard of hearing. Internal signs are made as clear as possible. Court staff are always available to assist disabled court users.

PRIME MINISTER

Community Charge

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Prime Minister what representations she has received from Criccieth town council concerning the community charge; and if she will make a statement.

The Prime Minister: A letter has been received from Criccieth town council and a reply has now been sent by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Wales.

Correspondence

Mr. Lewis: To ask the Prime Minister when she expects to reply to the letter dated 17 April from the Reverend Andy Lindop of the Parish of St. John's, Mosley Common, Worsley, regarding the charge capping of Wigan metropolitan borough council.

The Prime Minister: There is no record of the letter to which the hon. Member refers having been received. May I suggest that a copy is sent to my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for the Environment, who will arrange for an early reply.

Parliamentary Questions

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Prime Minister if she will take steps to ensure that Ministers do not avoid the answering of priority written questions within the established time scale by stating in answer to such a question that a Minister will write to the hon. Member who asked the question; and if she will make a statement.

The Prime Minister: It is for individual Ministers to decide how to answer questions.

Disarmament

Mr. Kaufman: To ask the Prime Minister whether it continues to be her policy that nuclear disarmament in Europe has gone far enough.

The Prime Minister: The Government support arms control agreements, whether nuclear or conventional, which enhance stability and allow security to be maintained at lower levels of forces.

EDUCATION AND SCIENCE

Agricultural and Food Research

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what assessment has been made of the success or otherwise of the system of three-year contracts at the AFRC institutes, as to whether personnel starting on a three-year contract fulfil that contract.

Mr. Jackson: The Agricultural and Food Research Council has recently reviewed all short-term appointments at its institutes. The majority of these appointments are three-year contracts. The results of the review indicate that AFRC's policy of recruiting staff on short-term appointments is successful and that the majority of personnel appointed in this way completed their contract.

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what assessment he has made of the selective scientific effectiveness of (a) those on three-year contracts attached to AFRC institutes and (b) those on core programmes.

Mr. Jackson: Responsibility for such assessments falls essentially to the Agricultural and Food Research Council itself. I understand that the council maintains a rigorous assessment of programmes and their effectiveness at its institutes by means of four-yearly visiting groups and annual reviews. This includes core programmes and three-year contracts, whether funded by the council itself or by industry.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Western Sahara

Sir David Steel: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what support Her Majesty's Government are giving to the Secretary-General of the United Nations following his recent visit to Morocco and Algeria in making progress towards holding the referendum in the western Sahara.

Mr. Waldegrave: We have consistently supported the United Nations Secretary-General in his efforts to find a solution to the dispute over the western Sahara. We have also joined our Community partners in welcoming the acceptance by both parties of the United Nations Secretary-General's referendum proposals.

Children's Rights

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when the Government expect to ratify the United Nations convention on the rights of the child.

Mr. Sainsbury: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave to the hon. Member for Clydesdale (Mr. Hood) on 9 May 1990, column 176.

Falkland Islands

Dr. Woodcock: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will estimate the depletion of the illex fishery around the Falkland Islands as a direct result of not applying a 200-mile fishery zone.

Mr. Sainsbury: Recent scientific advice indicates that if the Falkland Islands interim conservation and management zone (FICZ) were extended to 200 miles, escapement for illex squid could be expected to increase by less than 5 per cent. and that effective conservation of the stock requires multilateral efforts to control fishing well beyond 200 miles.

Human Rights

Mr. Maclennan: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether Her Majesty's Government will publish information about their periodic reports to the human rights committee under the international covenant on civil and political rights.

Mr. Sainsbury: Copies of our reports under the international covenant on civil and political rights are freely available from the Foreign and Commonwealth Office. Copies have also been placed in the Library of the House.

Palestine

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many reports of breaches of human rights in Palestine Her Majesty's Government have received in the past 12 months; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Waldegrave: We receive frequent reports of human rights abuses in the occupied territories. We regularly take up individual cases with the Israeli authorities on both a national and Community basis. The Israelis are well aware of our view that they should administer the occupied territories in accordance with their obligations under international law.

HOME DEPARTMENT

West Midlands Police

Ms. Short: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) if he will call for a report from the chief constable of West Midlands on which years the following officers served in the West Midlands serious crimes squad: DS James Milligan 6269, DI Terence Mills 4512, DS Paul Owen 5056, DC John Perkins 4145, DC Alan Pickering 3273, DC James Price 9307, DC Michael Quin 2274, DS John Rawlings 1353, DC John Rawlings 3540, DS Peter Reynolds 3772, DS Timothy Russell 7099, DC Laurence Shaw 5498, DS Michael Swinneton 8296 and DI Henry Thomas;

(2) if he will call for a report from the chief constable of West Midlands on which years the following officers served in the West Midlands serious crimes squad: DS David Ford 9210, DCI Robert Goodchild 9416, DS William Guilt 4587, DC Alfred Hayward 6764, DI Peter Higgins 3435, Det. Supt. Mick Holder, DC Michael Houkins 2344, DS Colin James 6924, DS Roy Jennings 5062, DC Conrad Joseph, DS Richard Leary 2487, DS Danny Lloyd 7448, DS Leslie Leek 1691, DC Robert Maison 9110, DC Hugh McLelland 6540, DCI Paul Matthews, DS James McManus 2303 and DC Charles 4175;

(3) if he will call for a report from the chief constable of West Midlands on which years the following officers served in the West Midlands serious crimes squad: DS Martin Thomas 9362, DC David Woodley 2853, DC Clifford Wesley 3455, DCI Banks 1317, Det. Supt. Bob Morris, DCI Roy Taylor 'A'61, Det. Supt. Stan Beechey, DC Paul Bucknall 5269, DS Brian Morton, DC Brookes 7099, DI Geoffrey Edwards 6861, DS Michael Doyle 7302, DC Alan Campbell 6444 and DS Bryant 45;

(4) if he will call for a report from the chief constable of West Midlands on which years the following officers served in the West Midlands serious crimes squad: DC Colin Abbotts 9078, DC Ronald Adams 6220, DS Anthony Ball 6843, DS Peter Bowen 2224, DS Norman Burns 6513, DC David Bowen Evans 5202, DCI John Brown 5436, DI Kenneth Cook 1337, DS Albert Cawley 9085, DS Michael Cooper 9448, Det. Supt. Roger Corbett 9412, DI Eddie Curry 6579, Det. Supt. Brian Davies, DS Joseph Dayle 3457, DS John Davies 7090 and DC Ronald Evans 9292.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: No. My right hon. and learned Friend has no plans to call for a report on such matters.

Disabled Offenders

Mr. Harry Barnes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many disabled people are in prisons; and what special arrangements are made for them.

Mr. Mellor: No records are kept centrally of the numbers of prisoners with disabilities, but such information as is available suggests that the numbers are relatively small. Prison establishments seek to meet the needs of those inmates on an individual basis—for example by providing books for the visually handicapped or by modifying cellular accommodation for those with mobility problems. Six establishments have toilets in the hospital area which are suitable for people with disabilities, and the standard brief for the design of future prisons provides for these and other facilities for the disabled.

Mr. Harry Barnes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what guidance he has given concerning the sentencing of offenders who are disabled.

Mr. John Patten: Sentencing in individual cases is a matter for the courts within their overall powers as laid down by legislation and in accordance with guidance given by the Court of Appeal. The Court of Appeal has made it clear that, for all offenders, custody should be given only when necessary and that it should be no longer than necessary. The national standards for community service orders, which came into effect on 1 April 1989, asked probation areas to ensure that community service placements are available for disabled offenders.

Criminal Injuries Compensation Board

Mr. Darling: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to reduce the backlog of cases pending before the Criminal Injuries Compensation Board.

Mr. John Patten: In February we approved the recruitment of 60 extra staff for the board. Ten of these are already in post and the rest are expected to be in post by the end of June.

The reply to a question from my hon. Friend the Member for Westminster, North (Sir J. Wheeler) on 8 December at columns 409-17, set out the terms of the revised criminal injuries compensation scheme and described other steps taken to improve the board's performance. The revised scheme, which came into effect on 1 February, allows the board to resolve certain cases more quickly by delegating decisions to staff and expediting appeal procedures. The first phase of the major computer project at the board began in March. We shall monitor the effectiveness of these measures in reducing arrears of work at the board.

Mr. Darling: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many cases awaited determination by the Criminal Injuries Compensation Board as at 31 March; and what is the average time between submission of a claim and its determination.

Mr. John Patten: The number of applications awaiting initial determination by a single member of the board at 31 March was 65,100. In a further 2,842 applications interim awards had been made and the final determination deferred. There were also 9,096 cases awaiting appeal hearings and 10,748 where an award had been offered but not yet accepted by the applicant, making a total of 87,786 applications outstanding. Of these, about 50,000 represent the board's working balance, that is, cases which would be under consideration even if there were no arrears.

Information about the average time taken to resolve applications is not available in the form requested, but the percentage of cases submitted to a single member of the board within certain periods from registration is shown in paragraph 6.1 of the board's 25th annual report (Cm. 900), a copy of which is in the Library.

Demonstration (Arrests)

Mr. Terry Fields: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many people the police have arrested for incidents arising out of the anti-poll tax demonstration in London on 31 March (a) on the day of the demonstration itself and (b) as a result of operation Carnaby; and how many of those arrested have been charged.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: I am informed by the Commissioner of Police of the Metropolis that 427 people were arrested on 31 March in connection with the disorder which occurred during and following the demonstration in London against the community charge. Of these, 409 have been charged with criminal offences.

Fifty-two people have subsequently been arrested as a result of the continuing police investigation into the disorder. Of these, 39 have been charged with criminal offences.

Bogus Welfare Workers

Mr. Alfred Morris: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what action he proposes to co-ordinate inter-departmental action in regard to recently reported cases of people posing as health visitors or social workers when visiting families with young children; of how many such cases he is aware; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: I understand from the chief constable of South Yorkshire that the recent inter-force conference about the subject of bogus social workers and health visitors revealed 60 unexplained visits throughout England and Wales. In 24 of these access was gained to the house and in 14 young children were touched.

Police forces across England and Wales are taking co-ordinated action to bring the offenders to justice, consulting local authority social services departments where necessary. They have warned parents throughout the country to take great care about allowing callers access to their children and to contact the police at once if their suspicions are roused. They have advised all those seeking legitimate access to identify themselves. Their advice has been wholly endorsed by a statement issued on 15 May by the Association of Directors of Social Services and the NSPCC.

Strangeways Prison

Mr. Alfred Morris: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how much of the total costs of police involvement in the siege of Strangeways prison he expects to fall on Greater Manchester police authority and how much will be met by his Department; what study he has made of the effect of the costs to be borne by the Greater Manchester police authority on the performance of the police service in the conurbation; if he is prepared now to meet the costs of police involvement in the siege as a whole; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: I refer the right hon. Member to the reply given to a question from the hon. Member for Manchester, Central (Mr. Litherland) on 8 May at column 28. We have not yet received from the police authority a full assessment of the additional costs which it incurred as a result of the disturbances.

Police Accommodation Allowance

Mr. Shersby: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make an estimate of the cost to public funds of the provided accommodation allowance payable to police officers in provided accommodation for the year commencing 1 April.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: About 18,000 officers live in provided accommodation. Provided accommodation allowance has been set at £300·00 per officer per year and is payable for three years. Estimates accordingly provide for direct public expenditure of £5·4 million per year on this allowance for each year that it is payable.

Wildlife and Countryside Act

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what information he has in respect of prosecutions, convictions, and penalties levied in connection with deaths of protected species and listed in the Wildlife and Countryside Act 1981 and the Food and Environment Protection Act 1985; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Lloyd [holding answer 11 May 1990]: It is not possible from the information held centrally to distinguish between offences where species protected under the Wildlife and Countryside Act 1981 have been intentionally killed and those where they have been intentionally injured or taken. In 1988 there were a total of 133 prosecutions and 114 convictions under the Act.

In 1988 there were no prosecutions for offences under the Food and Environment Protection Act 1985 which involved the death of a protected species.

Juvenile Offenders

Mr. Thurnham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is the latest number of juvenile offenders in youth custody; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Mellor [pursuant to his reply, 19 March 1990, c. 455-56]: The number of juvenile offenders in prison service establishments on 31 December 1989 was 327, not 358 as stated in the earlier reply.

Illegal Broadcasting

Sir John Wheeler: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what information he has about the extent of the problem caused to listeners of authorised commercial radio broadcasts by their inability to tune to authorised stations because of interference by illegal broadcasts; how many complaints he has received from the public; and what discussions he has held with listeners' representative bodies and commercial radio operators.

Mr. Forth: I have been asked to reply.

The radio investigation service (RIS) of my Department's radiocommunications agency receives frequent complaints of radio interference caused by unlicensed broadcasting stations. Officials of the agency regularly correspond with, and on occasions meet, listeners' representative bodies and broadcasting organisations.

HEALTH

Cot Deaths

124. Mr. Andrew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on the progress made to date by the expert working group set up to assess the work of Mr. Barry Richardson's research into cot deaths.

125. Mr. Rowlands: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on the progress made to date by the expert working group set up to assess the work of Mr. Barry Richardson's research into cot deaths.

126. Ms. Short: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on the progress made to date by the expert working group set up to assess the work of Mr. Barry Richardson's research into cot deaths.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: The expert working group set up by the chief medical officer on 9 March was asked to consider and report on the work done by Mr. Mitchell and Mr. Richardson, together with the findings of the laboratory of the Government chemist and any other data; and make any necessary recommendations. He has asked the group to report as soon as possible and will make public its findings.

The experts are working towards a report with commendable speed. The group first met on 3 April and studied Mr. Richardson's then latest paper and other evidence; it met again on 3 May to hear from individuals and associations, with important information, one of whom was Mr. Barry Richardson. It will next meet on 20 June.

Postgraduate Allowance Training (Fees)

97. Mr. Butler: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what information he has on the disparity of fees charged by regional advisers for authorising postgraduate education allowance training; and if he has any proposals to standardise such fees.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: The Department has had discussions with the committee of regional advisers in general practice in England (CRAGPIE) on a suitable level of fees to be charged for the accreditation of courses for the postgraduate education allowance and we have asked CRAGPIE to agree as a matter of urgency a national scale of fees.

Miscarriages

Miss Emma Nicholson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what proportion of pregnancies notified to doctors resulted in a miscarriage in each of the last 10 years.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: This information is not collected centrally. Information is available centrally only on miscarriages which occur in NHS hospitals or result in a stay in an NHS hospital. Information for the years 1979 to 1985 is given in the table.

Estimated number of hospital stays in NHS hospitals in England with a diagnosis of "spontaneous abortion"

Year	Estimated numbers
1979	24,690
1980	26,800
1981	26,310
1982	27,530
1983	28,270
1984	29,790
1985	31,620

Hearing Aids

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether deaf children are required to take out insurance on commercial hearing aids supplied free of charge on the National Health Service; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Dorrell: I refer the hon. and learned Member to the reply my hon. Friend the then Under-Secretary of State for Health, gave the hon. Member for Gordon (Mr. Bruce) on 1 May at column 538.

Thalassaemia

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many deaths there have been from thalassaemia for each year over the last 10 years.

Mr. Dorrell: The information is shown in the table.

Number of deaths from thalassaemia[1] of persons in England and Wales, 1980-89[2]

Specialist Hospitals

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what provision he is making in the reorganisation of the National Health Service for the maintenance of specialist hospitals; and whether he will make special funding available.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: The special health authorities for the London postgraduate teaching hospitals will retain their current status and their specialist teaching, research and service roles. They will, of course, be able to apply for NHS trust status if they wish. The Government intend that the funding of these institutions will continue to enable them to carry out their valuable teaching and research activities.

Mental Illness

Mr. Ashley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps he is taking to ensure that people with mental handicap and mental illness are enabled to give their views about their community care needs during the assessment procedure.

Mr. Dorrell: It is important that proper opportunities are provided for patients to take part in discussions relating to different treatment possibilities; and to agree the programme to be implemented. Our White Paper "Caring for People" stressed that the views of the person requiring care, and those of his or her carers, should be taken into account during the assessment procedure. This includes people with a mental handicap or mental illness. In our guidance to authorities we intend to underline the requirement for assessment procedures to take account of the views of all types of users and their carers.

Abortion

Mr. Alton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many abortions were performed on unborn children under statutory ground 2 at 25, 26, 27 and 28 weeks of gestation, respectively, during 1989.

Mr. Dorrell: The provisional figure for 1 January to 30 September 1989 shows no such abortions.

Wakefield District Health Authority

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) in view of the costs incurred by Wakefield district health authority arising from the court action taken against it by Mr. Ray Corner, the authority's former director of finance, what action has been taken by his Department in conjunction with Yorkshire regional health authority and Wakefield district health authority to ensure that staff of any rank will not be suspended or dismissed in a similar manner;

(2) what discussions have taken place between his Department, Yorkshire regional health authority and Wakefield district health authority on the suspension and subsequent dismissal by the district general manager of Mr. Ray Corner, the authority's former director of finance;

(3) if he will take steps to ensure that the £24,000 compensation to be paid by Wakefield district health authority to its former director of finance, Mr. Ray Corner, in respect of his suspension and subsequent dismissal from his post and the costs of all legal expenses arising from his action against the authority, will be met from his Department's budget for the preparation for self-governing trusts.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: This is a matter for the local health authority. The NHS management executive has been kept informed of developments.

Registered Child Minders

Ms. Armstrong: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many child minders are registered in (a) England, (b) Scotland, (c) Wales and (d) Northern Ireland.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: At 31 March 1988 there were 74,588 registered child minders in England. Information about Scotland is a matter for my right hon. and learned Friend the Secretary of State for Scotland. Information about Northern Ireland and Wales are matters for my right hon. Friends the Secretaries of State for Northern Ireland and for Wales.

Ms. Armstrong: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list those local authorities which have waiting periods of (a) six to 12 months, (b) 12 to 18 months, (c) 18 to 24 months and (d) over 24 months for registration of child minders.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: This information is not collected centrally. It is for local authorities to decide on the appropriate level of resources necessary for carrying out their registration duty under the Nurses and Childminders Registration Act 1948. Where individual cases are brought to the Department's attention, inquiries are made of the local authority concerned to establish the facts and what action, if any, is being taken to remedy the position. Advice will be given on the registration process including the length of time to handle applications in the new guidance to be issued under the Children Act 1989.

Ms. Armstrong: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list those local authorities which have licensed other bodies to register child minders on their behalf.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: Under the provisions of the Nurseries and Childminders Regulation Act 1948, as amended, local social services departments have a statutory duty to register child minders. This duty must not be delegated.

So far as is known no such delegation has occurred.

Ms. Armstrong: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many registered child minders are currently claiming free milk benefit.

Mr. Dorrell: The figures are not kept in the form requested. However, some 90,000 registered child minders, playgroups and day nurseries are registered (under the Welfare Food Regulations 1988) to receive the free milk, or dried baby milk, available for children under five years old in day care. The majority of these are child minders.

Speech Therapists

Mr. Watson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is the number of speech therapists per 100,000 population recommended by the Government-commissioned Enderby report; and how many health authorities meet that recommended level.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: The article "Communication Disorders, Planning a Service to meet the Needs" published in the December 1989 issue of the British Journal of Disorders of Communication by Dr. Enderby and Dr. Davies, and based on research by Dr. Davies funded by the Department, did not make any recommendations about numbers of speech therapists.

Paramedic Training

Mr. Evennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) whether any extended paramedic training scheme for ambulance crews in England provides a qualification validated by the National Council for Vocational Qualifications; and if he will make a statement;

(2) whether he has any plans to introduce a standard paramedic training syllabus for ambulance crews in England; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Dorrell: There is already an extended (paramedic) training programme provided by the National Health Service training authority which has been endorsed by the NHS for use by the ambulance service.

The NHSTA is in the process of converting the training syllabus into degrees of competence in accordance with NCVQ requirements in consultation with representatives of the various employment sectors and interested bodies.

"Stockport Health Authority News"

Mr. Andrew F. Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what was the cost of publishing "Stockport Health Authority News, Special Edition."

Mr. Dorrell: I am advised that each edition of the Stockport health authority's publication "Stockport Health Authority News" costs about £360 to print and is circulated to health staff within the authority.

NHS Reform

Mr. Winnick: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what more recent representations he has received regarding hospitals opting out of the existing National Health Service management structure.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave him on 12 February at columns 22-25. Since then a further four units have expressed interest in NHS trust status and two others have amalgamated. This brings the total number of units which have expressed interest in trust status to 193.

Benzodiazepines

Mr. Fearn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what reports he has received of foetal damage caused by benzodiazepines.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: On available information, the Committee on Safety of Medicines has received 103 reports of foetal damage which may be associated with benzodiazepines. A report of a suspected adverse drug reaction does not necessarily mean a causal relationship. Product data sheets for benzodiazepines state that these should not be used in pregnancy.

Mr. Fearn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will provide a breakdown of the number of prescriptions issued by community pharmacists for each individual benzodiazepine.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: I refer the hon. Member to the reply that I gave him on 27 February at column 121. Figures for 1989 are not yet available.

Mr. Fearn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will initiate an inquiry into the reasons for the disparity in the number of prescriptions for benzodiazepines given to men and women.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: We have taken all reasonable steps to provide doctors with information about the use of benzodiazepines and make them aware of the need to prescribe these drugs carefully. It is for doctors using their professional clinical judgment to decide how best to prescribe for individual patients. An inquiry of the kind suggested would not add new information to aid doctors in their individual prescribing decisions and we therefore have no plans to initiate one.

Mr. Fearn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what information he has on the number of people who have attempted suicide after withdrawing from benzodiazepines.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: This information is not collected centrally.

Bogus Welfare Workers

Mr. Alfred Morris: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what information his Department has on the number of visits made to families with young children by people posing, in the Manchester area and elsewhere, as health visitors or social workers; if there is any action he will be taking; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: Maintaining a record of the number of such visits is properly a task for the police. We will keep under review the need for action beyond endorsing advice already given that families should check carefully the credentials of any visitors before allowing them to see young children. No bona fide social worker would personally purport to conduct a medical examination of a child.

Intensive Care

Mr. Alfred Morris: To ask the Secretary of State for Health to what extent the points system for deciding whether patients are to receive life or death intensive care treatment, known as the Apache II scoring system, is used in (a) Manchester's and (b) other British hospitals in making priority decisions about the use of current resources for such treatment; if his Department has given or will be giving any instructions about use of the system in National Health Service hospitals; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Dorrell: The decision on whether a patient requires intensive care is a matter for the clinician responsible for that case. We have no plans to issue instructions on the clinical criteria which should be used.

Midwives

Mr. Ashley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the regional health authorities in rank order according to the number of trained midwives per 100,000 women of child-bearing age.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley [holding answer 8 May 1990]: The requested information is shown in the table.

Health authorities will have regard to a number of different factors in setting staffing levels for their maternity services. The number of women of child-bearing age is not in itself particularly meaningful for this purpose, given that age distributions and fertility rates within that group will vary in different places.

Conductive Education

Dr. Twinn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what action has been taken to promote the development in the United Kingdom of conductive education as practised at the Peto institute.

Mr. Scott: I have been asked to reply.

I announced in the House in December 1989 details of our proposal to create a formal link with the Peto institute. We have agreed to provide a total of £5 million from Government funds over four financial years towards the capital costs of the new international institute projected by the Hungarian Government, subject to satisfactory progress with construction and conclusion of an agreement covering access for United Kingdom children and trainee conductors. Discussions to conclude this agreement will take place shortly.

Access for British trainee conductors will be particularly important for the long-term future of conductive education in this country. The Foundation for Conductive Education in Birmingham was formed to establish conductive education in the United Kingdom and has signed a long-term agreement to bring conductive education to this country, under Hungarian direction. To ensure that trainee conductors receive the maximum support for and benefit from their training, the Government are providing more than £92,000 over three years for the foundation to employ a tutor in Budapest.

To help parents who are considering taking a disabled child to the Peto institute in Budapest, we are funding the production by the foundation of a guide offering information about conductive education itself and the financial and other implications of visiting Hungary.

SOCIAL SECURITY

Child Maintenance

Mr. Morley: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security whether he has any plans to provide an incentive to absent parents to provide maintenance for their children who are living on benefits.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: Absent parents, like all parents, have a clear legal responsibility to maintain their families wherever they can afford to, but in far too many cases that responsibility has not been fulfilled. No maintenance is paid for over three quarters of lone-parent families receiving income support. Income support for lone-parent families cost £1·9 billion in 1989-90.

As already announced, the Government are reviewing the maintenance system to see what changes need to be made to the way maintenance is awarded, and collected. A survey is under way to provide full and up-to-date information as a basis for deciding the best way forward. We are also examining systems in use in other countries to see what lessons can be learnt. We aim to bring forward proposals later this year.

In the shorter term we have taken action to improve the payment of maintenance under the current system. This includes a new clause introduced to the current Social Security Bill, under which DSS will be able to enforce a lone parent's maintenance order for her when payments are not being made in full, if she is claiming income support. This will ensure that prompt action is taken in all cases and will reduce the chance of the absent parent getting into the habit of non-payment.

Hostels

Mr. Andrew Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security whether he is now in a position to announce help for those hostels which currently do not receive direct payments of income support for service charges.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: I am pleased to announce that from 21 May all hostels and nightshelters may receive direct payments of income support for service charges, including meals, from the outset of a claimant's residence.

This will safeguard the interests of those hostels which have experienced difficulty collecting service charges from residents. This will still allow those hostels which do not wish to take advantage of the direct payment arrangements to encourage their residents to take responsibility for managing their own finances.

TRANSPORT

Stockport Bypass

Mr. Tom Arnold: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what is his detailed timetable for the construction of the A6 (M) Stockport north-south bypass.

Mr. Atkins: We expect to publish supplementary orders and a compulsory purchase order in autumn next year. Progress after that depends upon how much objection there is to them. A public inquiry will be necessary if there are unresolved objections. I am writing to my hon. Friend.

Traffic Lights

Mr. Higgins: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many new sets of traffic lights have been installed in the Greater London area in the past two years.

Mr. Atkins: Traffic lights have been installed at approximately 300 new sites in the past two years, of which about half were new pelican crossings.

Disabled Drivers

Mr. Harry Barnes: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what is his policy concerning the access of disabled people and their cars to pedestrian-only areas; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Atkins: The Department's policy towards the access of orange badge holders' vehicles to pedestrian zones is set out in local transport note 1/87 "Getting the Right Balance".

Orange badge holders' vehicles should not normally need to be exempted from access restrictions if a sufficient number of convenient parking places can be provided. If this is not possible, there may be a case for allowing some form of access for disabled people's vehicles.

The guidance stresses the importance of consultation with organisations representing people with disabilities when zones are being planned.

A copy of local transport note 1/87 has been placed in the Library.

Mr. Harry Barnes: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many disabled orange badge holders there are in Derbyshire.

Mr. Atkins: The number is 26,942 at 31 March 1989, the latest date for which figures are available centrally.

Mr. Harry Barnes: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list those councils which ban vehicles belonging to disabled orange badge holders from pedestrian-only areas.

Mr. Atkins: The decision to ban vehicles displaying an orange badge from pedestrian zones is primarily for individual local authorities to take. Information on the number of local authorities which have implemented such a ban is not held centrally.

Mr. Harry Barnes: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he has any plans to amend the orange badge scheme for disabled drivers.

Mr. Atkins: Revised regulations governing the scheme were issued for consultation on 9 April. The changes are designed to clarify the eligibility criteria for badges, curb abuse and tailor the parking concessions provided under the scheme more closely to the needs of severely disabled people.

Major organisations representing disabled people, the local authority associations and the police are being consulted on the detailed changes to the statutory regulations.

A copy has been placed in the Library.

British Rail

Mr. Livsey: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what Government financial support has been allocated to British Rail provincial and its predecessors in actual terms and real terms in (a) 1975-76, (b) 1980-81, (c) 1985-86, (d) 1988-89, (e) 1989-90 and (f) 1990-91 projected.

Mr. Freeman: Figures for Government support paid to the British Railways Board, including public service obligation grant under EC regulation 1191/69 and section 3 of the Railways Act 1974, and level crossings grant under EC regulation 1192/69, are given in the table. Final claims have not yet been agreed for the years 1988-89 and 1989-90.

	Cash £ million[1]	1990-91 prices £ million[1]
1975[2]	307	1,052
1980[2]	591	1,072
1985-86	838	1,113
1988-89	557	632
1989-90	511	544
1990-91[3]	497	497

[1] Rounded to the nearest £ million.
[2] Before 1984-85 BR's financial year ran from 1 January to 31 December.
[3] This is a planning figure based on a technical adjustment of the figures in Chapter 7 of The Government's Expenditure Plans 1990-91 to 1992-93 (Cm 1007).

Before 1987-88 BR was not required to state the division of grant between sectors. In its annual report and accounts for 1988-89 BR estimated the PSO grant requirement for provincial to be £408 million (£461 million at 1990-91 prices). The Government's objectives for BR for the three years to 1992-93 endorsed BR's own target of reducing provincial's grant requirement to £367 million (1989-90 prices) by 1992-93, and requested BR to examine ways of reducing this by some £20 million.

Parking Act 1989

Mr. Kirkhope: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when he intends to bring into force the Parking Act 1989.

Mr. Atkins: The Parking Act 1989 is being brought into force by commencement order today. It paves the way for a wider range of parking equipment to be approved for use by local authorities in parking places under their control. In particular "cashless" systems—which offer advantages in security, flexibility and convenience—will be able to be approved for off-street use. An explanatory circular (DTp 2/90 WO 21/90) has been issued to local authorities and is available from Her Majesty's Stationery Office.

East London River Crossing

Mr. Evennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when he expects the present inquiry on the proposed east London river crossing to be concluded.

Mr. Atkins: The public inquiries into certain design changes on this scheme do not start until 3 July. They are being held concurrently with an inquiry into planning applications for the further development of London City airport. I cannot speculate how long these concurrent inquiries will last.

Dock Employment

Mr. Stern: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what has been the change in employment in docks since the abolition of the dock labour scheme.

Mr. McLoughlin: At the time of abolition there were 9,223 registered dock workers. To date, 4,734 redundancies have been notified to this Department under the compensation payments scheme.

Airport Rail Links

Mr. Fearn: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what studies his Department has undertaken into the feasibility of through trains from Heathrow and Gatwick airports to Manchester and Birmingham airports.

Mr. Freeman: None. This is for British Rail and airport operators to initiate.

ENVIRONMENT

Rural Industry

122. Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what financial support was given in real terms to industry in rural areas in (a) 1979 and (b) 1989.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: Most Government schemes for financial assistance to industry provide assistance for urban and rural areas alike. Where there are special rural problems in England, the Rural Development Commission, which is grant-aided by my Department, can provide assistance with both economic and social development. The commission's total gross expenditure at 1989-90 prices was £36·6 million in the financial year 1978-79 and £37·2 million in 1989-90.

Urban Regeneration

123. Mr. Michael J. Martin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when there will be a Government response to the Audit Commission document, "Urban Regeneration and Economic Development."

Mr. Moynihan: I will write to the hon. Member.

Property Transfers, London

Mr. Chris Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list all those properties vested in the London residuary body, with a voluntary organisation or organisations in occupation, which have been transferred to the relevant borough council; and if he will give the estimated market value and the consideration paid for transfer in each case.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: The London residuary body has disposed of interests in the following properties occupied by voluntary organisations to the relevant borough councils. Sales at less than the estimated market value at the time of disposal are subject to clawback provisions and to covenants as to use.

Waste Recycling

Mr. Colvin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, pursuant to his reply of 25 April, Official Report, column 322, (1) whether the incentive to which he referred for waste collection authorities which recycle waste, will apply to a mechanised recycling plant receiving mixed domestic waste;

(2) what steps he proposes to take to ensure that the introduction of financial credits for waste collection authorities will be used for diverting waste from landfill, rather than as a means for funding source separation and that schemes which subsequently result in a higher percentage of waste diverted from landfill, but that do not require source separation, will not be disadvantaged by the support offered through public expenditure;

(3) what steps he proposes to take to ensure that recycling initiatives, such as financial credits from one public body to another, designed to promote source separation of waste, will not be allowed to disadvantage market-led and funded schemes for waste reclamation and recycling.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: The Government wish to encourage all environmentally beneficial and cost-effective methods of recycling domestic waste and avoiding disposal to landfill. The proposal for recycling credits, which we hope will be the subject of an amendment to be brought forward to the Environmental Protection Bill, is not intended to favour one recycling method over another. It will simply seek to ensure that the benefits of landfill avoidance feed through as financial incentives to those responsible for diverting domestic waste to recycling, whether in the public sector or not.

Mr. Hayward: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what encouragement is being given to local authorities that wish to increase the level of recycled waste.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: The provisions of the Environmental Protection Bill will require every local authority involved in waste collection or disposal to make plans that will give priority to the recycling of waste wherever practicable. Other provisions of the Bill will allow them to specify environmentally favourable options for waste disposal, such as recycling, even if they are not the cheapest in purely financial terms and will require waste disposal authorities to pass to collection authorities the savings that accrue because refuse has been recycled rather than passed to them for disposal. The Bill will also strengthen the existing powers of local authorities to arrange recycling schemes for their localities.

The Government are also working with local authorities to develop projects such as recycling city in Sheffield and Cardiff and similar plans in other areas which can, when fully evaluated, be used as models for future schemes. We shall be providing comprehensive advice to local authorities to assist them in the production of recycling plans and the development of recycling projects.

Chipboard Factories

Mr. Beith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) what steps he is taking to take account of the views of environmental groups in respect of emissions from chipboard factories; and if he will make a statement;

(2) if he will make it his policy to set an emission limit of just particles from timber dryers at 25 mg per cubic metre in respect of chipboard factories; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: Chipboard factories will come under the new and more rigorous controls provided by part I of the Environmental Protection Bill. Operators of chipboard factories will be required to use the best available techniques not entailing excessive cost (BATNEEC) to minimise emissions and their potential for harming the environment.

Guidance will be issued on appropriate air pollution controls for these processes and it is intended that this will contain a limit for emissions of particulate matter which is achievable using BATNEEC. Bodies representing relevant interests, including environmental ones, will be given the opportunity to comment on the draft guidance before it is issued by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State.

Political Activities (Disqualification)

Mr. Flannery: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what are his estimates of the numbers of individuals disqualified from political activities as a result of the Local Government and Housing Act.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: On the basis of the lists received from 428 out of the 491 authorities concerned, I understand that some 32,000 holders of local authority posts in England have been included in lists under section 2 of the Local Government and Housing Act 1989 as subject to political restrictions. This figure does not include all posts of chief executive, monitoring officer, chief officer and deputy chief officer, whose posts are subject to the political restrictions but are not necessarily included in the lists under the 1989 Act.

Local government officers whose posts are in these lists, other than the holders of the specific posts I have mentioned, have the right to exemption if the independent adjudicator considers that their posts do not meet the statutory criteria.

Wild Geese

Mrs. Ray Michie: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when he last made a statement regarding wild geese management.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: My right hon. Friend has made no recent statement on this subject. Various steps have been taken to control wild geese where necessary including scaring and limited shooting.

Drinking Water

Mr. Anthony Coombs: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what level of investment is planned over the next five years to improve standards of drinking water.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: Water undertakers in England and Wales will be spending £1·8 billion, at November 1989 prices, up to the end of 1995 to remedy current situations of non-compliance with the EC drinking water directive.

Sewage Outfalls

Mr. Butler: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what information he has on the practicality of sterilising sewage outfalls by the process of infusing hydrogen peroxide.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: My Department has received information on the use of hydrogen peroxide as a disinfectant from Interox Chemicals Ltd. which markets the "Oxymaster" range of disinfectants based on peracetic acid.

Dogs

Mr. Thurnham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what further measures he intends to take to reduce the problems caused by dogs; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: We remain committed to the package of measures outlined in the consultation paper "Action on Dogs" which we issued last year. These include duties on local authorities to deal with strays and to enforce the existing requirement that dogs should wear a collar and identification tag. We are discussing with the RSPCA and others how this package might be strengthened in some respect. We intend to legislate at a convenient opportunity.

Unleaded Petrol

Sir Dudley Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many grades of unleaded petrol are now marketed; and what guidance is given to drivers as to which grade will not prove harmful to their cars, where these are converted for unleaded petrol use.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: Two grades of unleaded petrol are being marketed—95 octane "Premium" and 97/98 octane "Super" or "Super Plus". The vast majority of new cars can use 95 octane and from 1 October this year all new cars will be required to be able to do so. Super unleaded is being marketed for a relatively small number of cars that cannot be, or are not, tuned for 95 octane. Any car that is tuned for 95 octane can use the super fuel but will show no advantage for the extra expense. The Department has issued guidance on which existing cars can use 95 octane unleaded, and information is also being disseminated by the motor and petrol trades. Any motorist who does not find unequivocal guidance in his car manual or from one of the other sources should consult his dealer or other qualified person.

Cleveland Structure Plan

Mr. Frank Cook: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when he will publish the draft modifications to the Cleveland structure plan; what are the reasons for the delay; and what assessment he has made of the damage to development prospects in the area arising from such delay.

Mr. Moynihan: It is hoped to publish the Secretary of State's proposed modifications to the Cleveland structure plan in June. It has not been possible to do so earlier because of the need to resolve some complex issues raised in the report of the panel which conducted the examination in public. I am not aware of any damage to development prospects in Cleveland as a result of this timetable. Local planning authorities have continued to carry out their functions and, where appropriate, have taken the new structure plan into account as a material consideration in reaching their decisions. Similarly, recent appeal decisions issued by the Secretary of State have had regard to the emerging structure plan.

Endangered Species

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, pursuant to his reply to the hon. Member for Linlithgow of 26 February, Official Report, columns 21-22, whether he will seek to recover the operating costs of the Endangered Species (Import and Export) Act 1976, as he is empowered to do under section 1(5) of that Act.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: Section 1(5) of the 1976 Act empowers the Secretary of State to charge for the issue of a licence under the Act. He has no plans to invoke those powers at present.

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) pursuant to his reply to the hon. Member for Linlithgow of 26 February, Official Report, columns 21-22, (a) if he will publish the list provided by the Nature Conservancy Council in 1985 of species unlikely to survive in captivity, and therefore eligible for protection under section 3 (dd) of the Endangered Species (Import and Export) Act 1976 and (b) which of those listed species are still exempt from licensing under that Act or any other legislation and not restricted for import;

(2) if he has conveniently available figures to show how many birds of species included in the Nature Conservancy Council's list of species unlikely to survive in captivity were recorded in Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food's quarantine statistics as imported into the United Kingdom during 1988; and what was the average mortality suffered on arrival or in quarantine.

Mr. Trippier: I will write to the hon. Member.

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, pursuant to his reply to the hon. Member for Linlithgow of 26 February, Official Report, columns 21-22, what action his Department takes to ensure that sufficient regard is taken of section 3(dd) of the Endangered Species (Import and Export) Act 1976, in consideration of its schedules and in the administration of licences.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: In the light of the Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food quarantine statistics for 1988 we are considering whether, in view of section 3(dd), any further species should be brought within the control of the 1976 Act. Inclusion in the list provided by the Nature Conservancy Council of species which generally do not survive well in captivity except in specialist hands is a factor which is taken into account in deciding import applications for those species.

Radiation

Mr. Strang: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list all aspects of governmental involvement with nuclear radiation; and if he will provide a breakdown of the allocation of responsibilities between the different Government Departments for radioactive materials and waste production, control and management.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: The Secretary of State for the Environment is responsible for radioactive waste management strategy in England, and for the regulation of the use and the authorisation for disposal of radioactive substances under the Radioactive Substances Act 1960. Other Government Departments with responsibilities for radioactive materials include the Department of Energy; Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food; Ministry of Defence; Department of Health; Welsh Office; Scottish Office; Northern Ireland Office; Department of Transport; Department of Employment.

Leeds Development Corporation

Dr. Hampson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what progress Leeds development corporation has made to date; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Moynihan: Leeds development corporation was established less than two years ago and it has already done much to stimulate the regeneration of its area.

Since designation there has been nearly £60 million of private sector investment, more than 1·5 million sq ft of industrial and commercial floor space completed and 105 dwellings completed or under construction. Further developments are in the pipeline. This has created over 1,300 construction and 5,200 permanent jobs.

Three major joint development competitions have been launched in partnership with Leeds city council, British Waterways and British Gas. These will provide housing and community facilities and industrial and commercial developments. The corporation is giving high priority to minimise disruption to existing businesses and finding alternative premises where necessary. It is assisting businesses to improve their premises and thereby safeguard existing jobs.

The corporation is improving the environment and has planted 150,000 trees and shrubs. It is working jointly with Leeds city council, British Waterways and the Government's Leeds/Bradford city action team to enhance the potential of the River Aire and the Leeds/Liverpool canal.

I congratulate Leeds development corporation—and those organisations with which it is working—on creating exciting new opportunities for the people of Leeds.

Woolaway Houses

Mr. Stern: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many privately owned Woolaway houses, qualifying for assistance with repair, remain unrepaired (a) nationally and (b) in Bristol.

Mr. Chope: This information is not available in the form requested. We estimate that there are 1,007 owners of Woolaway houses in England and Wales eligible for assistance under the housing defects legislation. Of these, 291 have received assistance by way of repair, or have repairs under way. The equivalent figures for Bristol are 222 and 86, respectively. A further 53 Woolaway houses in Bristol have been repurchased, and all but 13 of the remaining 83 owners have now received offers of assistance from the council—67 by way of repair, and three by way of repurchase.

Packaging

Ms. Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what representations he has received following his call for an all out attack on excessive packaging at a packaging conference on 25 March; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory [holding answer 11 May 1990]: My right hon. Friend and other Ministers have received many representations in support of his call on 25 March for reductions in excessive packaging, and for an enhanced effort to promote recycling by manufacturers, retailers, local authorities, voluntary groups and Government Departments. We have also received representations from the packaging industry emphasising the economic and environmental advantages of well-designed packaging.

Local Government Finance

Sir John Wheeler: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what would be the estimated charge on the basis of current expenditure (a) per household and (b) per capita for each London borough if a system of local income tax were to be introduced.

Mr. Nicholas Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what would be the estimated charge on the basis of current expenditure (a) per household and (b) per capita for each English district if a system of local income tax were introduced.

Mr. Portillo: I have no information on which to estimate the average amount which would be payable in any area under a system of local income tax either per household or per capita. Estimated local income tax rates which could have applied in each local authority area in 1990-91 were placed in the Library on 4 April.

Sir Alan Glyn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what figure was allowed for in respect of the cost of repairing the roof of Shire hall, Reading, in setting the standard spending assessment for Berkshire county council; and what assessment was made of the likely effect on the level of the community charge in Windsor and Maidenhead.

Mr. Portillo [holding answer 18 April 1990]: No specific figure for this item of expenditure was allowed for in calculating the standard spending assessment for Berkshire county council.

The SSA includes support for the costs of capital expenditure fi anced from credit approvals. But at the recommendation of the Association of County Councils, credit approvals for this type of expenditure are distributed on the basis of population rather than for particular projects.

Sir Alan Glyn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what is the effect of the use by the Royal County of Berkshire of capital reserves to fund revenue expenditure on the community charge for Windsor and Maidenhead.

Mr. Portillo [holding answer 19 April 1990]: The precept which Berkshire county council has levied on Windsor and Maidenhead reflects the revenue which it has chosen to raise. That in turn reflects its general financial position, including the extent to which capital reserves may generate interest and the extent to which capital expenditure is being financed from revenue income.

Mr. Harry Barnes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, pursuant to his answer of 3 May to the hon. Member for Derbyshire North-East, Official Report, columns 617-18, about local government revenue, if he will list the equivalent percentage details for Wandsworth and Westminster councils.

Mr Chope: The equivalent calculation cannot be made for individual authorities because some revenues are paid to charging authorities' collection funds on behalf of charging authorities and precepting authorities. The relevant amounts paid into Wandsworth's general fund and collection fund are given in the table. Complete information is not yet available for the city of Westminster.

Amounts to be paid into Wandsworth's General Fund and Collection Fund

	£000
General Fund
Specific and Supplementary grants (excluding community charge benefit and transitional relief)	34,717
Collection Fund
Government grants (including community charge benefit and transitional relief)	158,308
Business rates	60,386
Community charges (net of community charge benefit and transitional relief)	23,608

Water Pollution

Ms. Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, pursuant to the answer of 4 April, Official Report, column 669, if the source of the solvent affecting groundwater at the Blewbury borehole in south Oxfordshire has been identified.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory [holding answer 15 May 1990]: No definite source of the carbon tetrachloride found in groundwater at the Blewbury borehole has yet been identified. Work is continuing in order to discover the origins of this contamination.

SCOTLAND

Rents-to-Mortgages Scheme

Mr. Bill Walker: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland whether he has any plans to amend the rents-to-mortgages scheme in Scotland; and if he will make a statement.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: Early experience of the rents-to-mortgages trial scheme for Scottish Homes and new town development corporation tenants indicates that it is enabling those who could not previously afford to buy their own homes to do so.

I shall continue to monitor the trial scheme closely to see whether it fulfils its early promise and will make a further statement in due course.

Water Supplies

Mr. Andrew Welsh: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list the number of water supplies in Scotland in breach of the 50 micrograms per litre limit of the amount of lead permitted; and if he will list the number of people covered by each water supply.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: Water supplies in Scotland do not generally breach the 50 micrograms per litre standard for lead at the point of supply to the consumer. Breaches of the standard at consumers' taps are caused by pick-up of lead from pipes and plumbing systems, mostly within the consumer's property, after the water leaves the mains. Installation of water treatment is in progress in 26 supply areas where it is known that some tap samples fail to meet the standard set in the EC drinking water directive. It is estimated that about 37,000 people in these areas may be involved.

Water authorities are currently embarking on assessments to establish in which zones the new 50 micrograms per litre standard for any sample, as set in the drinking water quality regulations now in force, may not be met and whether additional treatment schemes will be effective in further reducing lead levels at taps.

Criminal Injuries Compensation Board

Mr. Darling: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many cases awaited determination by the Criminal Injuries Compensation Board in Scotland as of 31 March; and what is the average time between submission of the claim and the determination.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: Separate details of the number of Scottish cases awaiting determination and of the average time taken by the Criminal Injuries Compensation Board to resolve Scottish cases are not available. The criminal injuries compensation scheme administered by the board provides compensation for victims of crimes of violence throughout Great Britain. For information on a Great Britain basis such as the hon. Member seeks, I refer him to the answer given today to his question to my right hon. and learned Friend the Secretary of State for the Home Department.

Fishing Vessels

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will supply figures for the costs and earnings of United Kingdom fishing vessels in Scotland for the period 1983 to 1989 broken down by vessel size (a) under 40 ft, (b) 40 to 79·9 ft, (c) 80 to 109·9 ft, (d) 110 to 139·9 ft and (e) 140 ft and over.

Mr. Lang [holding answer 15 May 1990]: This information is not available in the form requested. I will write to the hon. Member as soon as possible.

Health Service

Mr. Nigel Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what is the number of junior hospital doctors working in the Royal Hospital for Sick Children in Edinburgh.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: The most recent figures available from Lothian health board show 26 junior doctors with duties in the Royal Hospital for Sick Children, Edinburgh.

Mr. Canavan: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland whether he will investigate nurse staffing levels at Falkirk and District royal infirmary; and if he will instruct the Forth Valley health board not to implement any further reductions which would threaten the standards of patient care.

Mr. Michael Forsyth [holding answer 11 May 1990]: Nurse staffing levels at Falkirk and District royal infirmary are primarily a matter for Forth Valley health board. The nurse staffing numbers for 1989-90 have increased slightly compared to 1988-89. The board has no proposals to reduce the nurse staffing levels at the hospital.

Central Institutions

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how much the principals of each of the central institutions were paid in 1987-88, 1988-89, 1989-90 and 1990-91.

Mr. Lang [holding answer 15 May 1990]: This information is not held centrally. Until February 1990, the salary levels were determined on the basis of agreements of the Scottish joint negotiating committee for teaching staff in further education which has now been abolished and I am sending to the hon. Gentleman copies of the relevant circulars issued by the joint committee. Salaries are now for determination by the boards of governors of the colleges themselves.

Coastal Erosion

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) whether he proposes to make any additional funds available to local authorities to enable them to tackle the problems of coastal erosion; and if he will make a statement;

(2) what resources have been made available to local authorities in the present financial year and 1989-90 to tackle the problem of coastal erosion.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton [holding answer 15 May 1990]: Coast protection is one item covered by the capital expenditure allocations made each year by my right hon. and learned Friend for local authorities' water and sewerage programmes. Within their permitted capital expenditure, authorities are free to set their own priorities for expenditure on such works. Allocations for authorities' water and sewerage programmes in 1989-90 totalled £126 million and in 1990-91, £137·5 million. Provisional allocations for 1991-92 total £159·6 million and for 1992-93, £182 million. Nevertheless expenditure on coast protection remains relatively small and in 1988-89 was less than £1 million.

Grants are available to regional and islands councils, under the Coast Protection Act 1949, for coast protection schemes providing that certain criteria are met. The percentage grant available varies from 20 per cent. to 80 per cent. depending on authority. No changes are proposed.

Education (Ethnic Monitoring)

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland why he has decided not to obtain ethnically based data on pupils and teachers in Scottish schools.

Mr. Lang [holding answer 15 May 1990]: Information is currently being collected about the ethnic origin, religion and home languages of all secondary pupils and of primary entrants. It is not proposed to obtain corresponding information about school teachers because so few teachers in Scotland come from minority groups.

EMPLOYMENT

Business Failures, Yorkshire

139. Mr. O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many businesses have failed in the Yorkshire region over the past 12 months; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Nicholls: The best available guide to trends in numbers of businesses comes from VAT data. In 1988, the latest year for which figures have been published by this Department, an estimated 10,700 businesses came off the VAT register in the counties of North, South and West Yorkshire. Companies may leave the register for a variety of different reasons. In the same period, there were an estimated 13,800 registrations, giving a net increase of 3,100, or 3·3 per cent.

Small Businesses

138. Mr. Fearn: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what information he has regarding (a) the general level of debt and (b) the sums owed by Government Departments and agencies to small businesses.

Mr. Nicholls: I regret that the information requested is not available.

Training

Ms. Short: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will publish details for Great Britain and for the west midlands region for each year from April 1986 to the most recent date, of the total number of YTS trainees (a) within each of the four provider types and their sub-categories and (b) with disabilities within each of the four provider types and their sub-categories.

Mr. Eggar: The information requested can be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Mr. Leighton: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what percentage of the potential client group is receiving employment training.

Mr. Nicholls: The information requested is not available.

Ms. Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many people are undertaking employment training in each London area office; and how many are women requiring child care costs to be paid.

Mr. Nicholls [holding answer 14 May 1990]: The number of people on employment training in each London area office is given in the table. No information is available about the number of women claiming or receiving child care payments because information about the number of trainees receiving child care payments is not disaggregated by sex.

Employment training
In training at 30 March 1990—London region

Area office	Numbers
London North	4,935
London West	1,238
London East	2,870
London South	2,129
Inner London North	7,699
Inner London South	3,827

Ms. Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will make a statement on his assessment of the effectiveness to date of his policy of encouraging women to take up employment training courses by paying child care costs.

Mr. Nicholls [holding answer 14 May 1990]: Assistance with the cost of child care is available to any lone parent in employment training (ET). Payments for help with child care are being made for some 3 per cent. of trainees. After only 18 months of ET I regard this as encouraging.

Health and Safety Executive

Mr. Andrew Welsh: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what are the staffing levels for (a) Scotland and (b) Angus for the Health and Safety Executive in each of the last 10 years.

Mr. Nicholls: The following information is available (1 April figures):

	(1) HSE staff based in Scotland	(2) of which: staff serving HSE's Scotland East Area (including Angus)
1980	[1]214·0	[1]137·5
1981	[1]214·0	[1]140·5
1982	[1]195·0	[1]130·0
1983	[1]182·5	[1]122·0
1984	[1]174·5	[1]114·5
1985	193·0	118·0
1986	177·0	106·5
1987	180·0	108·5
1988	177·0	109·0
1989	171·0	107·0
1990	177·5	111·0

[1]Staff located in Scotland in mines and quarries inspectorate's Scottish and north eastern district have been excluded as, prior to April 1985, central records cannot identify mines and quarries field staff by location.

Factories

Mr. Bill Michie: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment whether the Health and Safety Executive will undertake or commission research into the proportion of factory premises which are not registered with the factory inspectorate and the proportion of factory employees who work in unregistered premises.

Mr. Nicholls: Each year the factory inspectorate spends a percentage of its resources on the identification and inspection of unregistered fixed workplaces as part of its programme of preventative inspections.

The Health and Safety Executive has no plans to undertake or commission other research into the proportion of unregistered factory premises or the number of employees who work in such premises.

TVEI

Mr. Pawsey: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what funding is available for the technical and vocational education initiative for 1990-91; and how much was available in 1989-90.

Mr. Eggar: The funding available for the technical and vocational education initiative (TVEI) in 1990-91 is £134 million. Expenditure in 1989-90 was £129 million.

Jobcentres

Mr. Yeo: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment (1) what assessment has been made of the impact on rural areas of the mergers of jobcentres with unemployment benefit offices;

(2) if he will list those towns with populations below 10,000 whose mergers of jobcentres and unemployment benefit offices have taken place in the last 12 months;

(3) if he will list the towns with population below 10,000 whose mergers of jobcentres and unemployment benefit offices will take place during the current financial year;

(4) what steps are being taken to maintain access to his Department's services for people in rural areas following the reduction in the number of jobcentres and unemployment benefit offices resulting from his policy of merging these two.

Mr. Eggar: On 1 December 1989 my right hon. Friend the Member for Sutton Coldfield (Sir N. Fowler) said that the employment service would be moving progressively to bring jobcentres and benefit offices together under one roof to form a new network of employment service offices.

As part of this development it remains ES policy to provide its clients in rural areas with reasonable access to the full range of ES services. This will continue to be provided in the new network of employment service offices and supplemented in some locations through the use of outreach facilities to deliver advisory and counselling programmes and other services. By the end of March 1990 113 new offices had been established. Some 500 offices are scheduled to be established by March 1991. The information on size of towns where ES offices are located is not readily available and can be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Right hon. and hon. Members are informed when changes are to be made to employment service offices in their constituencies.

Channel Tunnel

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will accept anonymous evidence from workers on the channel tunnel for his inquiry into safety.

Mr. Nicholls: It is the Health and Safety Executive's policy to consider any representations made to it about particular safety matters and to treat representations in confidence if asked to do so.

Mr. Tony Lloyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what is the fatal and major injury rate per 100,000 workers for the construction of the channel tunnel on the (a) British side, (b) the French side and (c) for the construction industry as a whole.

Mr. Nicholls [holding answer 15 May 1990]: The fatal and major injury rate per 100,000 workers in the construction industry in Great Britain for the year April 1988 to March 1989, the latest period for which information is available, was 275. Comparable incidence rates for the British side of the channel tunnel cannot be calculated because of the considerable rise in employment during the period. Information to enable a figure to be calculated in the form requested for the French side is not available.

Training and Enterprise Councils

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what training opportunities are available through the training and enterprise councils to women with no qualifications.

Mr. Eggar: Each training and enterprise council will set out in its corporate and business plans how it intends to meet the training requirements of individuals in its area. Where appropriate this will include the provision of training opportunities for those with few or no qualifications, whether women or men.

Fishing Industry (Ex-employees)

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what information his Department has, by region, on the employment destination of ex-employees in the United Kingdom fish-catching sector who have left the industry since 1985.

Mr. Nicholls: The information requested is not available.

Age Discrimination

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will introduce legislation to make it illegal to discriminate on the basis of age in employment.

Mr. Nicholls: The Government have no plans to introduce such legislation. The Government believe that older workers are a valuable resource. Age discrimination is unfair to individuals and not in an employer's own interest. We continue to put this message across to employers through various media, particularly in the context of publicity about demographic change. In addition, instructions to jobcentre staff have been strengthened to ensure that all upper age limits on vacancies notified by employers are challenged.

There are encouraging signs that employers are heeding this message. We shall continue our efforts to ensure that this progress continues.

Enterprise Allowance Scheme

Mr. Blair: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if his Department has any plans to increase the amount paid under the enterprise allowance scheme.

Mr. Eggar: No.

Labour Statistics

Mr. Lewis: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what is the latest figure for the reduction in jobs in the manufacturing sector since 1979; and what has been the figure for each of the past five years in (a) the Bolton and Bury travel-to-work areas and (b) the rest of the north-west area.

Mr. Nicholls: The number of employees in employment in the United Kingdom in the manufacturing sector fell by 2,013,000 (27·7 per cent.) between June 1979 and December 1989.

Information about employment in travel-to-work areas is available only from the census of employment. The latest available figures are for September 1987; the earliest on a comparable basis are for September 1981. Between these two dates, the number of employees in employment in the manufacturing industry sector in the Bolton and Bury travel-to-work area fell by 9,600 or 15 per cent.

Changes in employees in employment for the north-west region in the manufacturing sector in each of the past five years are as follows:

Employees in employment—north-west region
Manufacturing industries (SIC 1980 divisions 2 to 4)

December	Number (thousands)[1]	Yearly change (thousands)[1]	Yearly percentage change
1985	670	5	0·8
1986	659	−11	−1·7
1987	668	10	1·5
1988	688	20	2·9
1989	685	−2	−0·4

[1] Unadjusted for seasonal variations.

Low Pay

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will make a statement on Her Majesty's Government's policy on low pay.

Mr. Nicholls: The best way to help the lower paid is through continuing economic and employment growth and greater prosperity for all.

Disabled People

Mr. Ashley: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what information his Department has as to the number of disabled peole who are able to work for (a) 10 to 15 hours per week, (b) 16 to 19 hours per week and (c) 20 to 24 hours per week.

Mr. Eggar [holding answer 15 May 1990]: I regret that this information is not currently available. However, a study commissioned by this Department, which will report soon, will provide much new information about people with disabilities including the numbers of hours per week they are able to work.

DEFENCE

Low Flying

Mr. Livsey: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will provide information on the perceived noise decibels for the following aircraft in tactical training areas where they fly at an altitude of 100 ft: (a) Hawk, (b) Jaguar, (c) Tornado and (d) F1-11.

Mr. Neubert: The most comprehensive information on aircraft noise currently available to the Ministry of Defence relies on a noise database collected in 1983 during exercise Bedlam, the report of which is already available in the House of Commons Library. To supplement this information, further work is planned this year to provide actual measurements of noise generated by aircraft at heights down to 100 ft but the results of this further work are not expected to be available until early next year. It should be noted that neither the Hawk nor the F1-11 aircraft carry out any operational low-flying training in the tactical training areas.

RAF Chivenor (Helicopters)

Mr. Speller: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when he expects to replace the Wessex helicopters at RAF Chivenor with Sea King helicopters.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: There are no plans to do so.

Radiation

Mr. McFall: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he has any plans to collate centrally the records for radiation dose exposure of submarine refit personnel prior to 1979; and if he will assess the distribution of total radiation dose exposure for refit workers in the ranges up to 5, greater than 5 to 10, greater than 10 to 15, greater than 15 to 20, greater than 20 to 25, greater than 25 to 30, greater than 30 to 35, greater than 35 to 40, greater than 40 to 45, greater than 45 to 50 and greater than 50 milliSieverts, in terms of percentage of overall work force.

Mr. Neubert: Records of radiation dose exposures of submarine refit personnel prior to 1979 are already held centrally. The analysis requested, however, could be supplied only at disproportionate cost.

Mr. McFall: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence in what form the records for individual radiation dose exposure of submarine refit personnel were collated and held prior to 1979; if they are available to the House; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Neubert: Individual radiation dose records prior to 1979 are held centrally in paper form. Analysis of this information could be supplied to the House only at a disproportionate cost.

Mr. McFall: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence without identifying any individual by name or by any other means what is the total occupational, whole body equivalent radiation dose exposure of each individual worker employed in the Royal Navy dockyards in the United Kingdom, in milliSieverts, grouped in the bands up to 5, greater than 5 to 10, greater than 10 to 15, greater than 15 to 20, greater than 20 to 25, greater than 25 to 30, greater than 30 to 35, greater than 35 to 40, greater than 40 to 45, greater than 45 to 50 and greater than 50 for each year since the onset of the naval nuclear propulsion programme and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Neubert: The data requested were contained in my reply to the hon. Member on 18 April at column 942. Further sub-division of the data into 5 mSv intervals can be produced only at disproportionate cost.

Mr. McFall: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is the average radiation dose exposure of refit workers involved with the United States nuclear propulsion programme; what is the average radiation dose exposure of refit workers in the United Kingdom; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Neubert: Information concerning the average radiation dose exposure of American refit workers is a matter for the United States authorities. The figures showing the average radiation dose exposure of refit workers in the royal dockyards were given in my reply to the hon. Member on 2 May at column 944.

NATIONAL FINANCE

European Community Trade

127. Mr. James Lamond: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what was the balance of trade with the European Economic Community in (a) 1979 and (b) 1989.

129. Mr. Leadbitter: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what was the balance of trade with the European Economic Community in (a) 1979 and (b) 1989.

133. Mr. Lewis: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what was the balance of trade with the European Economic Community in (a) 1979 and (b) 1989.

Mr. Norman Lamont: I refer the hon. Members to the reply that I gave on 18 April 1990, Official Report, columns 855-56.

135. Mr. Teddy Taylor: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on the reasons for the deficit in manufacturing trade with the European Economic Community; and what is the current export/import ratio.

Mr. Norman Lamont: The deficit with the European Community is, like the deficit with other countries, the result of domestic demand temporarily growing faster than domestic supply. The deficit will fall as demand and capacity pressures ease further. The export/import ratio in 1989 was 73 per cent.

Manufactured Goods

128. Mr. Cryer: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on the current deficit in the balance of trade in manufactured goods.

Mr. Norman Lamont: The latest information is available in table A9 of the "Monthly Review of External Trade Statistics", available in the Library of the House, or on the Central Statistical Office database, which may be accessed through the Library.

Value Added Tax

130. Mr. Amos: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what was the net number of new firms registered for value added tax purposes for the last year for which figures are available; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Ryder: On the basis of Customs and Excise data on registrations and deregistrations processed, the net increase in the number of businesses registered for value added tax in 1989 was 84,374. This reflected 261,783 new registrations and 177,409 deregistrations. The net increase was more than three-and-a-half times higher than in 1980.

Interest Rates

131. Mr. Geraint Howells: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what representations he has received from businesses and business associations concerning interest rate levels.

Mr. Ryder: My right hon. Friend has received a number of such representations.

Economic Growth

132. Mr. Livsey: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what effects he expects the anticipated level of economic growth in 1991 to have on industry.

Mr. Norman Lamont: The latest forecast for the growth of manufacturing industry in the first half of 1991 on a year earlier is ¾ per cent. This forecast was published in the Financial Statement and Budget Report.

Erratic Items (Imports)

134. Mr. Morgan: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is his latest estimate of the level of imports into the United Kingdom of items classified as erratic items, in 1990.

Mr. Norman Lamont: The value of erratic imports, defined as ships, North sea installations, aircraft (together comprising SITC(REV 3) 792 and 793), precious stones (667) and silver (681·1) on a seasonally adjusted, balance of payments basis is £1,801 million, for the first quarter of 1990.

Japanese Investment

136. Mr. Robert G. Hughes: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what was the level of Japanese investment in the United Kingdom in (a) 1979 and (b) 1989.

137. Mr. Hanley: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what was the level of Japanese investment in the United Kingdom in (a) 1979 and (b) 1989.

Mr. Norman Lamont: The available information on the book value of direct investment in the United Kingdom by Japanese companies is given in table 12 of "Business Monitor MO4 (Census of Overseas Assets)" published by the Central Statistical Office. Information on portfolio investment in the United Kingdom, by country, is not available.

Manufacturing Investment

Mr. Pike: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what was regional investment in real constant value terms in manufacturing industries for the latest year for which figures are available and in 1979.

Mr. Norman Lamont: The information is not available in the form requested. However, current price information for capital expenditure (investment) in regional manufacturing industry is published annually in "Business Monitor PA 1002, Report on the Census of Production", summary volume. Copies of this volume up to 1987, the latest available year, are available from the House of Commons Library. Constant price estimates are not made because there are no regional price indices.

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will provide the information given in his reply of 8 March, Official Report, column 749, on manufacturing investment, with the privatised companies in a separate column.

Mr. Norman Lamont [holding answer 9 May 1990]: I regret that the information cannot be provided. To do so would involve disclosing figures for individual undertakings in breach of the Statistics of Trade Act 1947.

Manufacturing Trade

Mr. Buchan: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will publish in the Official Report tables showing the balance of payments and the balance in manufacturing trade between the United Kingdom and the other member states of the European Economic Community.

Mr. Norman Lamont: Information on the balance of payments with the EC is available only on an annual basis in the CSO pink book. The latest available data are in section 10 (pages 62-66) of the 1989 edition which is available in the Library. Information on the balance of payments between the United Kingdom and individual member states is not available.

The table shows the balance of trade in manufactures between the United Kingdom and the European Community. The 1988 figure is consistent with the data in the 1989 pink book and the 1989 figure is the latest available.

Balance of trade in manufactures with the European Community[1]

Balance of payments basis	£ million
1988	−12,538
1989	−13,583

Crude Oil Exports

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what are the causes of the overseas trade statistics under-recording direct exports of crude oil; who records the tonnages under-recorded; and what is the percentage of the total exports in each year since 1979 represented by the under-recorded direct exports.

Mr. Norman Lamont [holding answer 9 May 1990]: The under-recording concerns exports of crude oil loaded offshore directly on to tankers. The powers of the Customs and Excise Management Act do not cover this trade. Until the end of 1987 information was assembled by the Department of Energy from an administrative source known as the prior notice waiver system. This system was ended in December 1987. Although an alternative system was set up, some oil companies failed to report complete data for this trade to Customs. However, the Department of Energy routinely collects information on oil production and disposals, and the comparison of this data with that sent to Customs and Excise enables an adjustment for under-recording to be estimated.

Figures published by the Central Statistical Office for the current account of the balance of payments and for visible trade on a balance of payments basis include an adjustment for the under-recording of oil exports. On this basis therefore oil exports are not under-recorded, although for the most recent months' figures, issued in the monthly trade figures press notice, the adjustments made to oil exports are partly estimated; figures are revised as further details become available.

Figures published for "Overseas Trade Statistics of the United Kingdom" for 1988 did not include any adjustment for under-recorded oil exports. The adjustment advised to Customs by the Department of Energy for 1989 and subsequently, will appear in the cumulative figures.

There was unlikely to have been under-recording under the prior notice waiver system which was discontinued at the end of 1987. About 10 per cent. of total exports of crude oil in each of 1988 and 1989 was not reported by oil companies to Customs and Excise.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Non-alcoholic Drinks

13. Mr. Stott: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what action he proposes to take to tackle any possible overcharging for non-alcoholic drinks.

Mr. Redwood: Action is already in hand to ensure effective competition in wholesale supplies to retailers. Tenants of the major brewers have been free since 1 May to buy non-alcoholic drinks from the most competitive supplier. The supply of carbonated soft drinks was also referred to the Monopolies and Mergers Commission on 25 April.

The retail margin is however determined by the individual retailer. Consumers who feel they are charged too much have the ultimate sanction of taking their custom elsewhere.

Manufacturing Deficit

20. Mr. Livingstone: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will list the EEC countries with which the United Kingdom has a manufacturing trade deficit.

48. Mr. Tony Lloyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will list the European Economic Community countries with which the United Kingdom has a manufacturing trade deficit.

91. Mr. Lofthouse: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will list the European Economic Community countries with which the United Kingdom has a manufacturing trade deficit.

Mr. Redwood: In the first quarter of 1990 the United Kingdom had a manufacturing trade deficit with the Federal Republic of Germany, Netherlands, Italy, France, Belgium-Luxembourg, Denmark and Portugal.

Plessey

21. Mr. Corbett: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what recent representations he has received on the subject of the GEC/Siemens takeover of Plessey.

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what recent representations he has received on the subject of the GEC/Siemens takeover of Plessey.

Mr. Ridley: I have received two recent representations about the GEC/Siemens takeover of Plessey.

British Exporters

22. Mr. McWilliam: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he has any new proposals to help British exporters.

41. Mr. Allen McKay: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he has any new proposals to help British exporters.

Mr. Redwood: The volume of United Kingdom exports has continued to grow reflecting the strong position of United Kingdom industry. Excluding oil and erratic items, the volume of exports in the first quarter of 1990 was 8 per cent. higher than a year earlier. There is a wide range of advice and support available from my Department to assist United Kingdom exporters and of which many firms make use.

Regional Policy

23. Mr. Hood: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make a statement on regional policy.

30. Mr. Home Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make a statement on regional policy.

114. Mr. Norman Hogg: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make a statement on the regions.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: The Government remain committed to an effective regional policy and will continue to make the necessary resources available.

40. Mr. Ronnie Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when he last met a regional body of the Confederation of British Industry to discuss regional policy.

97. Mr. Buckley: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when he last met a regional body of the Confederation of British Industry to discuss regional policy.

99. Mr. Tom Clarke: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when he last met a regional body of the Confederation of British Industry to discuss regional policy.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: My Department maintains regular contact with the CBI at all levels on a wide range of matters relating to industry.

LAUTRO

24. Mr. Win Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make a statement on the work of the Life Assurance and Unit Trust Regulatory Organisation.

56. Mr. Bernie Grant: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make a statement on the Life Assurance and Unit Trust Regulatory Organisation.

Mr. Redwood: The Life Assurance and Unit Trust Regulatory Organisation is one of five self-regulating organisations recognised by the Securities and Investments Board under the Financial Services Act 1986. It is responsible for regulating the investment business of insurance companies and friendly societies engaged in retail marketing of life insurance products, and operators of regulated collective investment schemes engaged in retail marketing of units in such schemes.

Estate Agents

25. Mr. David Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when he expects to bring forward his recently announced proposals to strengthen the law governing the regulation of estate agents.

Mr. Forth: I intend that in the next few weeks a draft order and regulations under the Estate Agents Act 1979 will be sent to interested parties. My proposals for amending the Trade Descriptions Act 1968 by extending it to cover misdescription of real property have already been circulated.

Industrial Investment

26. Mr. Bidwell: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when he will next meet the director general of the National Economic Development Council to discuss the impact of Government policies on British industrial investment intentions.

29. Mr. Geoffrey Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when he will next meet the director general of the National Economic Development Council to discuss the impact of Government policies on British industrial investment intentions.

53. Mr. Radice: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when he will next meet the director general of the National Economic Development Council to discuss the impact of Government policies on British industrial investment intentions.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: My Department has frequent contacts with NEDO officials on a wide range of business matters and I last chaired the council on 4 April. I have no immediate plans to meet the director general.

Mr. Campbell-Savours: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what proposals he has for further industrial investment in the north-west of England.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: My Department will continue to support investment as appropriate in the north-west, including through regional selective assistance and the consultancy and export initiatives.

Financial Services

27. Mr. Murphy: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make a statement on the efficacy of the system of financial services regulation set up since 1979.

Mr. Redwood: The Financial Services Act 1986, which came into force in April 1988, established a comprehensive structure for the protection of investors and regulation of investment business in the United Kingdom. Under the Act, the Securities and Investments Board has prime responsibility for ensuring that the appropriate standard of protection for investors is provided in respect of persons carrying on investment business.

Steel Industry

28. Dr. Kim Howells: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make a statement on the future of the steel industry in the United Kingdom.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: I am confident that the United Kingdom steel industry will continue to perform well now that all of it is in the private sector and free from Government interference.

104. Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make a statement on the future of the steel industry in the United Kingdom.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: I refer the hon. Gentleman to the answer I gave to the hon. Member for Coventry, North-East (Mr. Hughes) earlier today.

89. Mr. David Nicholson: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many tonnes of steel per man year were produced in the United Kingdom in (a) 1981 and (b) 1989.

102. Mr. David Shaw: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many tonnes of steel per man year were produced in the United Kingdom in (a) 1981 and (b) 1989.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: Crude steel production per man year rose from 159 tonnes in 1981 to 344 tonnes in 1989.

Iraq

31. Mr. Ron Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many British firms currently trade with Iraq; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Redwood: Iraq is an important market offering worthwhile opportunities to a wide range of United Kingdom exporters, but we do not keep records of the number of companies involved.

Mr. Caborn: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will place in the Library information given to potential British exporters to Iraq by his Department and by the British consulate in Iraq.

Mr. Redwood: A selection, and complete list, of the numerous handouts available to potential exporters to Iraq both here and at our embassy in Baghdad have been placed in the Library.

Arms Exports

32. Mr. Beith: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he has any plans to review the working of the export licensing system for arms exports.

Mr. Redwood: The administration by my Department of export licensing including arms exports, was thoroughly reviewed in 1988. The need for changes to ensure that the controls remain effective and are efficiently administered is kept under continual review.

Company Prosecutions

33. Mr. Orme: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many prosecutions arising from company investigations commenced after 1 June 1979; and how many of the prosecutions were successful.

Mr. Redwood: I am aware of 132 successful prosecutions completed since 1 January 1979 arising from investigations under the Companies Acts; some of those prosecutions may have commenced before that date.

The figure given includes prosecutions carried out not only by my Department but by other prosecution authorities, for example the DPP, Serious Fraud Office and the police.

Further information is given in the annual report prepared under section 729 of the Companies Act 1985 and published by Her Majesty's Stationery Office. This report is available in the Library.

Defence Industry

34. Mr. Andrew F. Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make a further statement about the United Kingdom defence industry and attempts to find alternative products.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: I have nothing to add to the replies I have given to the hon. Member's earlier questions on this subject.

Monopolies and Mergers

35. Mr. Maxton: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will initiate a review of monopolies and mergers legislation.

44. Mr. Meale: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will initiate a review of monopolies and mergers legislation.

Mr. Redwood: We have recently implemented the conclusions of our review of mergers policy, which were published in 1988. As we said in our White Paper, "Opening Markets: New Policy on Restrictive Trade Practices", Cm. 727, we are currently reviewing the provisions in the Fair Trading Act 1973 and Competition Act 1980 dealing with the position of the individual, anti-competitive firm.

58. Mr. Barron: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when he next expects to meet the directors of the Office of Fair Trading to discuss monopolies and mergers.

92. Mr. Battle: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when he next expects to meet the directors of the Office of Fair Trading to discuss monopolies and mergers.

Mr. Redwood: My right hon. Friend and I met the Director General of Fair Trading on 2 April. There are no further meetings currently planned with Ministers in this Department.

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will visit the state of Massachusetts to study its regulatory system for mergers and takeovers.

Mr. Redwood [holding answer 14 May 1990]: Neither my right hon. Friend nor I have current plans to visit the Commonwealth of Massachusetts.

European Community Trade

36. Mr. Doran: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when he will next meet his counterparts in the European Commission to discuss United Kingdom trade with the European Community.

73. Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when he will next meet his counterparts in the European Commission to discuss United Kingdom trade with the European Community.

Mr. Redwood: Ministers meet European Commissioners on a regular basis to discuss a range of issues of common interest.

Pharmaceuticals

37. Mr. Martlew: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what representations he has received on the subject of parallel imports of pharmaceuticals.

Mr. Redwood: Representatives of the pharmaceutical industry have contributed to consultations initiated by my Department on the question of parallel imports in overseas markets.

Eastern Europe

38. Mr. Hind: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he has any plans to improve the provision of export credit guarantees for Warsaw pact countries; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Redwood: The provision by ECGD of export credit guarantees—including those for countries in the Warsaw pact—is kept under regular review. Any improvement in the provision of such guarantees is made as and when justified. A review of ECGD's investment insurance cover for eastern European countries was recently undertaken and as a result some wide-ranging extensions to the scheme for those markets were announced.

Postal Service

39. Mrs. Maureen Hicks: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make a statement about the future of the postal service monopoly.

Mr. Forth: The letter monopoly is a privilege, not a right. While we keep the options under review, there are no plans to end the letter monopoly at present, although in the event of serious disruption we would consider suspending it. The Government and the Post Office remain fully committed to the existence of a national letter service available to everyone, including those in rural areas, at a reasonable and uniform tariff.

106. Mr. Allen Adams: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when he next intends to meet the chairman of the Post Office to discuss the future of the postal service.

Mr. Forth: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State expects to meet the chairman of the Post Office, Sir Bryan Nicholson, on 21 May. They will discuss matters of mutual interest.

Product Safety

42. Mr. Wray: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what discussions he has had with trading standards officers on product safety.

90. Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what discussions he has had with trading standards officers on product safety.

Mr. Forth: I have met trading standards officers and members of their representative organisations on several occasions at which product safety was one of the issues discussed. Also officials of my Department keep in regular contact with trading standards officers.

72. Ms. Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what discussions he has had with the Consumers Association on product safety.

115. Mr. Patchett: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what discussions he has had with the Consumers Association on product safety.

Mr. Forth: I have had no recent meeting with the Consumers Association but it meets officials in my Department on a regular basis.

Dangerous Goods

43. Mr. Steinberg: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will consider introducing legislation to extend the time limit for prosecuting sellers of dangerous goods.

45. Mr. Snape: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will consider introducing legislation to extend the time limit for prosecuting sellers of dangerous goods.

117. Mr. Soley: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will consider introducing legislation to extend the time limit for prosecuting sellers of dangerous goods.

Mr. Forth: When the Consumer Protection Act 1987 passed through the House there was no concern expressed about the time limit of six months in respect of prosecutions for a breach of general safety requirement. If there is substantial evidence that this time limit is now leading to proceedings being frustrated I am prepared to consider what might be done to help the enforcement authorities.

66. Mr. Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what further steps he is taking to strengthen legislation against sellers of dangerous goods.

Mr. Forth: The introduction of the general safety requirement in part II of the Consumer Protection Act 1987 means that it is now a criminal offence to sell any consumer product that is not reasonably safe. This is supported by specific regulations and by a range of enforcement powers that enable action to be taken effectively and swiftly against unsafe consumer goods. I see no justification for further legislation in this area.

Textiles Industry

46. Mr. Riddick: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when he last met representatives of the textiles industry; and what matters were discussed.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: The Minister for Trade met members of the North East Lancashire Textile Manufacturers Association on 4 May. The main topic of discussion was the multi-fibre arrangement.

Insider Dealing

47. Mr. Nicholas Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make a statement on the present regulations to deal with insider dealing.

71. Mr. Buchan: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make a statement on the present regulations to deal with insider dealing.

Mr. Redwood: The Government will continue to pursue all insider dealing cases where prosecution is justified under the code for Crown prosecutors. Convictions have been obtained in 11 out of 20 cases brought under the legislation. Two prosecutions are in progress and 13 inspections into possible breaches of the legislation are being carried out.

The Government published a consultative document on proposals for changes to the law on insider dealing late last year. I am grateful to all who responded, and careful consideration is being given to their comments.

Bankruptcies

49. Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what are the latest figures on the trend in business bankruptcies in (a) the United Kingdom, (b) England and (c) Cornwall.

Mr. Redwood: Because of the differences in the relevant legislation for the different parts of the United Kingdom, it is inappropriate to provide figures for the United Kingdom as a whole. Separate figures are not available for England or Cornwall. The available information is given in the following table:

Procurement and Information Technology

50. Mr. Cunliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what representations have been made to him about public procurement policy and information technology in the European Economic Community.

65. Mr. Cummings: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what representations have been made to him about public procurement policy and information technology in the European Economic Community.

86. Mr. Ernie Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what representations have been made to him about public procurement policy and information technology in the European Economic Community.

Mr. Forth: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry has not received any representations about public procurement policy and information technology in the European Economic Community.

64. Mr. Rogers: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what is the Department's latest estimate of the balance of trade in information technology with Japan and the United States of America.

75. Mr. Darling: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what is his Department's latest estimate of the balance of trade in information technology with Japan and the United States of America.

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what is his Department's latest estimate of the balance of trade in information technology with Japan and the United States of America.

Mr. Redwood: In the year to March 1990 the estimated crude deficit on trade in electronics and information technology products (defined as divisions 75 and 76 of the standard international trade classification) was £2 billion with Japan, and £1·6 billion with the United States of America.

Manufacturing Industry

51. Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when he next intends to meet the president of the Confederation of British Industry to discuss the performance of British manufacturing industry.

79. Mr. Eadie: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when he next intends to meet the president of the Confederation of British Industry to discuss the performance of British manufacturing industry.

81. Mr. Eastham: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when he next intends to meet the president of the Confederation of British Industry to discuss the performance of British manufacturing industry.

87. Mr. Fisher: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when he next intends to meet the president of the Confederation of British Industry to discuss the performance of British manufacturing industry.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: I have no immediate plans to discuss the performance of British manufacturing industry with the president of the CBI, although I expect to see him at the CBI's annual dinner on 17 May.

Environment Policy

52. Mr. David Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he has any new proposals to encourage British industry to be environmentally friendly.

68. Mr. Jim Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he has any new proposals to encourage British industry to be environmentally friendly.

Mr. Forth: I shall continue to encourage British industry to respond positively to the challenges and opportunities presented by environmental issues.

European Commission

54. Mr. Bradley: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when he last met the Vice President of the European Commission, Sir Leon Brittan, to discuss competition policy.

60. Mr. Boateng: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when he last met the Vice President of the European Commission, Sir Leon Brittan, to discuss that part of his remit which affects the United Kingdom.

62. Mr. Boyes: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when he last met the Vice President of the European Commission, Sir Leon Brittan, to discuss industry policy.

Mr. Ridley: I meet Sir Leon Brittan as and when necessary for discussion of a wide range of topics.

Engineering Products

55. Mr. Robert Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what is the current balance of trade in engineering products.

85. Mr. Sean Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what is the current balance of trade in engineering products.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: The crude deficit on the balance of trade for engineering products (defined as divisions 71 to 79 of the standard international trade classification) was £8·2 billion in the year to March 1990.

Scotch Whisky

57. Mr. Wallace: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when he last met representatives of the Scotch whisky industry; and what subjects were discussed.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: I met representatives of the Scotch whisky industry on 5 April to discuss my proposal to introduce legislation permitting gin, rum, vodka and whisky sold on licensed premises to be served in a single round metric quantity of 25 ml from the middle of this year and to prohibit the use of the existing imperial quantities after 31 December 1994. Having considered the industry's representations, I announced on 3 May my intention to consult interested parties about the possibility of also permitting one further metric quantity of 35 ml and of extending to other spirits the requirement for prescribed measures.

Mr. Sims: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry whether, in view of the United States section 301 initiative against Taiwan in regard to distilled spirits, he is taking steps to ensure that any resultant liberalisation applies equally to Scotch whisky.

Mr. Redwood: The authorities in Taiwan are well aware of United Kingdom concerns. Her Majesty's Government have no dealngs with the Taiwanese authorities, but United Kingdom concerns on this and other matters are put across very clearly in Taipei and London by the Anglo-Taiwan Trade Committee, a private organisation set up to promote British exports to Taiwan.

The Scotch Whisky Association recently went on a mission to Taiwan during which further representations were made to the appropriate Taiwanese authorities.

Departmental Reorganisation

59. Mr. Bill Michie: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he has yet reached a decision on the reorganisation of his Department.

74. Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he has yet reached a decision on the reorganisation of his Department.

111. Mr. Morley: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he has yet reached a decision on the reorganisation of his Department.

Mr. Forth: I have nothing to add to the statement on the structure of my Department which my right hon. Friend made on 21 February in answer to a question from my hon. Friend the Member for Nottingham, East (Mr. Knowles), Official Report, columns 783-84.

Capital Adequacy

61. Mr. Ian Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what assessment has been made by his Department of the implications for British financial institutions of any change in arrangements for capital adequacy.

Mr. Redwood: The European Commission has consulted member states and other interested parties in preparing its proposals for a directive on the capital adequacy of Community investment firms, which should be published shortly. The Government will continue to take account of the views of British financial institutions during the negotiation of the directive. I am particularly concerned that the levels of initial capital proposed may be against the interests of smaller and new financial intermediaries.

British-built Cars

63. Mr. Batiste: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry whether he will list the levels of sales in the United Kingdom of British-built cars in (a) 1974, (b) 1979 and (c) 1989.

98. Mr. Mans: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry whether he will list the levels of sales in the United Kingdom of British-built cars in (a) 1974, (b) 1979 and (c) 1989.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: The available figures, showing United Kingdom registrations of British-built cars, are as follows:

(a) 915 thousand;
(b) 750 thousand;
(c) 991 thousand.

Car Production

67. Mr. Donald Thompson: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry whether he will list the numbers of cars produced in the United Kingdom over the last five years.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: I refer my hon. Friend to my replies earlier today to my hon. Friends the Members for Daventry (Mr. Boswell) and for Hornchurch (Mr. Squire).

100. Mr. Favell: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many cars were produced in the United Kingdom in (a) 1979 and (b) 1989.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: The figures are as follows:

(a) 1·070 million.
(b) 1·299 million.

Hosiery and Knitwear

69. Mr. Janner: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry whether he will make a statement regarding the hosiery and knitwear industry in Leicester.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: I refer the hon. and learned Member to my answer to his question given in the Official Report for 9 January at column 599.

West Germany

70. Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make a statement on the level of United Kingdom trade with West Germany.

116. Mr. Lambie: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make a statement on the level of United Kingdom trade with West Germany.

Mr. Ingram: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make a statement on the level of United Kingdom trade with West Germany.

Mr. Redwood: In the first quarter of 1990 United Kingdom visible exports to West Germany were £3 billion, an increase of 20 per cent. over the first quarter of 1989. On the same comparison, visible imports from West Germany rose by 11 per cent., to £5 billion.

82. Mr. Clelland: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when he last met his West German counterpart to discuss the trade deficit of the United Kingdom with West Germany.

93. Mr. Frank Cook: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when he last met his West German counterpart to discuss the trade deficit of the United Kingdom with West Germany.

96. Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when he last met his West German counterpart to discuss the trade deficit of the United Kingdom with Germany.

Mr. Redwood: DTI Ministers maintain close contacts with their West German opposite numbers on a range of issues. The Secretary of State last met the Federal Economics Minister, Dr. Haussmann, in London at the Anglo-German summit on 30 March.

Car Industry

76. Mrs. Fyfe: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when he will next meet the major car manufacturers to discuss matters relating to the car industry.

83. Mr. Galloway: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when he will next meet the major car manufacturers to discuss matters relating to the car industry.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: The Government have regular contacts with the major car manufacturers on a range of issues of interest to the industry.

80. Mr. Roger King: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what was the value of British motor industry exports for the year 1989.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: The figure is £8,193 million.

EC Industry Council

77. Mr. McCartney: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what matters he expects to discuss at the next meeting of the European Economic Community Industry Council.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: The next meeting of the Industry Council, at which I will be representing the United Kingdom, will be held on 28 May. The provisional agenda proposes discussion on steel, shipbuilding, semi-conductors, small and medium-sized enterprises, and audio-visual matters.

Small Investors

78. Mr. Knapman: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what discussions he has had with institutions in the City of London on ways to encourage the growth in the number of small investors.

Mr. Redwood: I regularly discuss ways of promoting wider share ownership with institutions and individuals, both in the City and elsewhere. In a recent speech to the Institute of Economic Affairs I outlined a number of areas in which further action is needed to encourage the small investor. I also welcome other innovative ways of making the City more accessible to small shareholders which are being developed.

Iron and Steel Exports

84. Mr. Devlin: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what was the level of exports of United Kingdom-produced iron and steel in (a) 1979 and (b) 1989.

Mr. Redwood: United Kingdom exports of iron and steel products on an ECSC basis were (a) 3·72 million tonnes, with a value of £767 million, in 1979; and (b) 5·60 million tonnes, with a value of £1,886 million in 1989.

Industrial Performance

88. Mr. Adley: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what proposals he has to improve the performance of British industry.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: The Government continue to pursue policies intended to improve the climate for business activity, and to reduce the burdens on business. In addition, my Department continues to operate a range of specific schemes to improve business performance under the enterprise initiative.

Single Market

94. Mr. Irvine: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many of the directives necessary to complete the single European market have yet to be implemented; and whether he will make a statement.

Mr. Redwood: The Commission's fifth progress report on the single market shows that the United Kingdom, as recorded by the European Community, has the best record in the Community for the implementation into national legislation of single market measures with nine measures not implemented as at 1 March 1990. Unfortunately only 21 of the directives have been implemented in all European Community member states.

My Department's publication "Progress on Commission White Paper" also shows that as at 1 March there were 60 individual directives which had been adopted and which were not yet required to have entered into force. Also, 139 measures had not been adopted, five of which had not yet been presented to the Council. Copies of this publication have been deposited in both Libraries.

Textile Trade

95. Mr. Graham: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry which issues he will raise in relation to the international trade in textiles when he next meets his European Economic Community counterparts.

105. Mr. Ted Garrett: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry which issues he will raise in relation to the international trade in textiles when he next meets his European Economic Community counterparts.

110. Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry which issues he will raise in relation to the international trade in textiles when he next meets his European Economic Community counterparts.

Mr. Redwood: When he sees his EC colleagues at the informal Trade Ministers' meeting in Dublin this week, my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry will be discussing developments in the Uruguay round negotiations on international trade in textiles and the way forward, both in relation to the EC's preferred method of phasing out the multi-fibre arrangement over a transitional period and the parallel strengthening of GATT rules and disciplines.

Director General of Fair Trading

101. Mr. McCrindle: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry on how many occasions during the past 12 months he has rejected the formal advice of the Director General of Fair Trading.

Mr. Forth: In the last 12 months formal recommendations from the Director General of Fair Trading have not been accepted on two occasions.

Pirate Radio

103. Mr. Evennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what additional action he intends to take to deal with pirate radio broadcasting in Greater London.

Mr. Forth: Pirate radio is a nuisance that can endanger lives and disrupt business. The radio investigation service of my Department's radiocommunications agency has powers to raid pirate stations and prosecute offenders where this proves necessary. It will be considerably helped in its efforts by new powers in the Broadcasting Bill that is currently before the House.

Passenger Car Prices

107. Mr. Dykes: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will initiate an independent inquiry into passenger car prices in the United Kingdom.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: The Director General of Fair Trading announced on 9 May that he had made a reference to the Monopolies and Mergers Commission on the supply of new motor cars in the United Kingdom.

Business Receiverships

108. Mr. Ieuan Wyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will obtain a copy for his departmental library of the recently published KPMG Peat Marwick McLintock survey on the number of businesses forced into receivership.

Mr. Redwood: Yes.

East Midlands

109. Mrs. Currie: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will estimate the level of investment in the east midlands now provided by foreign-owned companies; and how that number may change by 1995.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: According to the latest figures available to the Department's Invest in Britain Bureau, from 1979 to 1989, 142 inward investment decisions were made to locate in the east midlands. These include the establishment of a new business, expansion or acquisition of an existing business and involvement in joint venture. The projects were expected to create 11,640 new jobs and, since 1983 when the relevant records were started, to have safeguarded a further 8,900. The figures are based on information provided by the companies themselves at the time of the investment decision and do not take account of subsequent developments.

Although growth in inward investment in the United Kingdom is expected to continue into the 1990s, it is not possible to predict the likely amount of such investment nor its location.

Consumer Guarantees Bill

112. Mr. Watson: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what further representations he has had on the Consumer Guarantees Bill.

113. Mr. Alan W. Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what further representations he has had on the Consumer Guarantees Bill.

118. Mr. Wilson: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what further representations he has had on the Consumer Guarantees Bill.

Mr. Forth: At the Committee stage of the Bill I undertook to inform members of the Committee of the representations I had received about various aspects of the Bill, where I had the agreement of the parties concerned to do so. This I have done. Further representations received since Committee were made in confidence and it would be inappropriate to give details of them.

Telecommunications

119. Mr. Ian Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what plans the Government have to allow more suppliers into the telecommunications market.

Mr. Forth: The major liberalisation which the Government have already introduced in United Kingdom telecommunications, including the recent announcement of licences for three personal communications networks, has allowed many new suppliers to flourish. I have no further significant plans at present, pending the Government's review, starting in November this year, of the BT/Mercury duopoly in the provision of fixed link services.

Wessex Trust

120. Mr. Ashdown: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make a statement on action taken by his Department since the collapse of Wessex Trust in 1984.

Mr. Redwood: Between February and July 1986 my Department contributed to the investigation into Wessex Trust co-ordinated by the fraud investigation group of the Crown prosecution service by carrying out inquiries into companies concerned in the affairs of the trust.

Investors' Compensation

121. Sir William Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what plans he has to amend the Financial Services Act 1986 to empower the Securities and Investments Board to require recognised professional bodies to contribute to the central investors compensation scheme.

Mr. Redwood: None. Paragraph 3 of schedule 3 to the Financial Services Act requires the recognised professional bodies to have adequate arrangements for compensating investors.

Exports (Manufactures)

Mr. John Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what steps his Department plans to take to increase exports of British manufactured goods.

Mr. Redwood: In 1989, the United Kingdom exported £75 billion worth of manufactured goods, a 16 per cent. increase on 1988. The Government will continue to follow the macro-economic policies which have created a climate in which United Kingdom firms can prosper and increase their exports. The Government will also continue to provide direct support to United Kingdom firms seeking business overseas by providing a wide range of advice, information and assistance through the British Overseas Trade Board.

Illegal Broadcasting

Sir John Wheeler: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many raids have been carried out in 1990 by radio investigation service enforcement teams in the Greater London area; with what result; and how many prosecutions have been successful.

Mr. Forth: The radio investigation service of my Department's radiocommunications agency has so far this year carried out a total of 169 raids on unlicensed broadcasting stations operating in the Greater London area. On each occasion equipment used in the commission of the offence was seized and on 14 occasions persons believed to be connected with the unlicensed station were interviewed with a view to prosecution.

Between 1 January and 30 April 1990, 33 persons were successfully prosecuted for their involvement with such stations in the Greater London area. The average fine imposed was £287 and average costs of £209 were ordered to be paid. However, one person was sentenced to seven days' imprisonment. Invariably the courts ordered that the equipment used in the offence be forfeited.

Sir John Wheeler: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many officials are employed in radio investigation service enforcement teams in the Greater London area; what is the extent of their workload; and what proposals he has to increase the numbers of such personnel.

Mr. Forth: The radio investigation service of my Department's radiocommunications agency currently employs 25 officers on enforcement work in the Greater London area. Their remit involves regulating all categories of radio use and responding to complaints of interference from authorised users. The performance of the radio investigation service is kept under review to ensure that the service is correctly resourced.

Technology Transfer

Mr. Atkinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry whether the transfer of technology was discussed at the recent Bonn CSCE conference on economic co-operation in Europe; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Redwood: Among the issues discussed at the conference was the encouragement of exchanges of know-how in a number of fields including the environment, agro-industry and food processing. Participating states also agreed to co-operate in fields such as energy conservation; raw material saving techniques; hydrocarbon technologies; and the safety of nuclear energy installations.

Internal Market Council

Mr. French: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make a statement on the Internal Market Council held in Brussels on 14 May.

Mr. Redwood: I attended the Internal Market Council in Brussels on 14 May. The Council held preliminary discussions on the legal protection of computer programmes, and on a proposal for extending the patent life for pharmaceuticals. Further discussions were also held on the European company statute.

The Commission made a presentation on barriers to takeover. The United Kingdom gave a strong welcome to the proposals to amend three directives in company law, which were the Commission's response to a United Kingdom request for action. The proposals represent a step towards a fair and transparent market, in which shareholders' interests are properly respected.

There was also substantive discussion of the motor insurance services directive. The Irish Presidency had worked hard to produce a compromise, which the United Kingdom was prepared to accept, although it did not go as far in liberalising motor insurance as we would have liked. It was disappointing that some member states could not accept even this compromise, and seemed intent on blocking moves towards a common market in motor insurance. The proposal will be discussed again in June following further work in the Committee of Permanent Representatives.

Indonesia

Mr. Madden: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make it his policy to refuse export licences for the export of military equipment, including Tornado aircraft and naval vessels, to Indonesia.

Mr. Redwood [holding answer 14 May 1990]: Export licence applications for military equipment, including aircraft and naval vessels, are considered on a case-by-case basis, in accordance with stringent criteria. It is not our practice to grant a licence for the export of military equipment which would not be in the national interest or which is likely to be used for internal repression.

Bristol Evening Post

Mr. Sayeed: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when he expects to be able to announce his decision over the report by the Monopolies and Mergers Commission on the attempt by Mr. David Sullivan to take a controlling interest in the Bristol Evening Post plc.

Mr. Redwood [holding answer 14 May 1990]: The report will be published and the Secretary of State's decision announced as soon as is practicable.

Industrial Output

Mr. Ralph Howell: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will give details of (a) the overall output and (b) the output per person engaged, in each of the following industries, for the years 1979 and 1989: (i) agriculture, (ii) the steel industry, (iii) coal mining, (iv) car industry, (v) electrical goods industry, (vi) local government and (vii) the National Health Service.

Mr. Norman Lamont: I have been asked to reply.

Estimates are not compiled on precisely the basis requested, but index numbers of output and of output per head are available for the following industry groups, on a 1985 = 100 basis, as shown in the table:

	Output		Output per head
	1979	1989	1979	1989
(i) Agriculture, forestry and fishing	76·8	98·5	[1]	[1]
(ii) Metals	118·2	124·7	68·1	168·2
(iii) Coal and coke	136·6	105·7	96·8	221·1
(iv) Motor vehicles and parts	132·6	126·1	78·7	127·1
(v) Electrical and instrument engineering	79·2	129·1	65·0	133·0
(vi) Medical, health and veterinary services	[1]	105·0	[1]	[1]

Figures for local government are not available.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Afforestation

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement about the release of agricultural land for afforestation.

Mr. Gummer: On 16 March 1988 my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for the Environment made a statement to the House which set out the Government's objectives for forestry policy in England. In this we foresaw that the main potential for afforestation in England lay on arable land and improved grassland which may no longer be needed for food production.

In addition, there would be some scope for broadleaved and mixed woodlands on unimproved land but the Forestry Commission was instructed not to approve new planting of predominantly conifers in the uplands of England. The only exception would be small areas where it was clear that such planting would be environmentally acceptable.

I believe that this approach is still valid.

Fishing Industry, Dorset

Mr. Ian Bruce: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what plans the Government have for the fishing industry in Dorset.

Mr. Curry: The characteristics of fisheries around our shores vary considerably but our overall aim is to work for effective conservation of fish and shellfish stocks as renewable resources. Further, representatives of the channel coast fishing industry who are members of the area VII whitefish industry advisory committee provide guidance on the management of quotas for the English channel.

Bovine Spongiform Encephalopathy

Mr. Butler: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what forward estimates he has made of the number of cattle likely to become infected with bovine spongiform encephalopathy.

Mr. Maclean: It is not possible to predict with accuracy the number of cattle likely to be affected by bovine spongiform encephalopathy. However, the incidence is not expected to decline significantly until at least 1993.

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will now undertake the random sampling for bovine spongiform encephalopathy of all cattle slaughtered for human consumption in the United Kingdom.

Mr. Maclean: We have no plans to do so.

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he proposes any initiative to sample for bovine spongiform encephalopathy-type disease among (a) all food animals, (b) companion animals, (c) other animals.

Mr. Maclean: We have no plans to do so. However, research into the transmissibility of bovine spongiform encephalopathy to other animals will continue. Research is also being conducted into the possibility of finding a test in the live animal. None is available at the moment.

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what advice he has issued to cattle breeders concerning the possible vertical transmissibility of bovine spongiform encephalopathy; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Maclean: Revised guidelines about all aspects of bovine spongiform encephalopathy are being prepared for issue to farmers.

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement on the occurrence of spongiform encephalopathy in a cat.

Mr. Maclean: Pathologists at the Bristol veterinary school and the central veterinary laboratory at Weybridge have diagnosed a sub-acute spongiform encephalopathy in a five-year-old Siamese cat originating from the Bristol area. Inquiries are being made into the case. At present there is no evidence that the condition is transmissible, nor is there any known connection with any spongiform encephalopathies in other animal species.

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food (1) whether he has issued any guidance to the veterinary investigation service concerning the possible incidence of spongiform encephalopathy in domestic animals;

(2) what instruction or guidelines he has given to the veterinary investigation service to monitor for bovine spongiform encephalopathy-type diseases in animals other than cattle; when such guidelines were issued; and if he will place copies in the Library.

Mr. Maclean: The veterinary investigation service is well aware of the need to monitor for the possibility of spongiform encephalopathies in other species and will consider them as differential diagnoses in appropriate cases.

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what is the estimate of the number of cattle born to cows subsequently confirmed as bovine spongiform encephalopathy sufferers, since the disease was declared notifiable, which have been (a) slaughtered for human consumption, (b) exported, (c) retained as suckler cows, (d) destroyed as suffering a notifiable disease, (e) retained as dairy cows or (f) otherwise disposed of; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Maclean: This information is not available.

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food (1) whether any cases of possible or confirmed bovine spongiform encephalopathy-related conditions in domesticated animals have been reported to officials of his Department; and if he will make a statement;

(2) whether any cases of possible or confirmed bovine spongiform encephalopathy-related conditions in domestic cats have been reported to officials of his Department; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Maclean: Transmissible spongiform encephalopathies can be confirmed only by post mortem histopathology of brain tissue and, apart from bovine spongiform encephalopathy in cattle, are not notifiable. In addition to cattle, these diseases are known to occur naturally in man and in sheep, goats, mule deer, elk and farmed mink.

Some of these diseases have been successfully transmitted under laboratory conditions to a number of species. The experimental animals used have included certain primates, mice, hamsters, sheep, goats, cattle, cats, mink and voles.

In addition, a spongiform encephalopathy has been identified in a zoo antelope and a domestic cat in Great Britain. It is not known whether these diseases are transmissible, or what relationship they have to BSE.

Animal Diseases

Mr. Barry Field: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what steps he is taking in conjunction with his European Community partners to ensure that the risks of the spread of animal diseases are not increased as a result of the introduction of the Europan single market.

Mr. Maclean: In discussions in Brussels I have sought to persuade my European Community partners that changes associated with the realisation of the single market should not be achieved at the cost of an increased risk of spread of animal disease. The directive on veterinary checks on trade in certain animal products, agreed last December after lengthy negotiation, reflects that key contention and leaves me optimistic that in completing the single market we will achieve the right balance between the removal of trade barriers and continued progress towards reducing and eliminating disease threats.

Animal Feed

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will list, for each of the last five years, how many imports of animal feed have been contaminated; and, in each case, if he will list the port concerned, the type of feed, the contaminant involved and whether the feed was (a) allowed into the United Kingdom for normal distribution, (b) returned to the country concerned or (c) dispersed in the United Kingdom.

Mr. Gummer: Since enforcement of the relevant provisions is a local authority responsibility, the information sought is not available centrally and could be produced only at disproportionate cost.

The extent of the import trade is considerable—more than 4 million tonnes a year. The commercial companies involved therefore have a strong interest in maintaining their own monitoring of supplies quite apart from that of the enforcement agencies.

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will require the manufacturers of all animal feeding stuffs to label their products indicating the nature and origin of their contents.

Mr. Maclean: Manufacturers will be obliged by a recently agreed European Community directive to declare the origin and the contents of animal feeds. The contents must be declared either by listing specific ingredients or categories of similar ingredients.

This directive will come into force in all member states on 22 January 1992.

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will now ban the use of sheep and cattle-derived protein from all animal feeding stuffs.

Mr. Maclean: This material is already banned from use in feedstuffs for ruminant animals. There is no evidence of a scrapie-like disease occurring naturally or under laboratory conditions in pigs and poultry and therefore no reason to ban the use of ruminant protein in their feedstuffs.

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will now ban the use of those offals specified in the Bovine Offals Order for consumption by domestic animals.

Mr. Maclean: No. Although inquiries will continue, there is no evidence that the spongiform encephalopathy recently found in a cat is either transmissible or connected with other spongiform encephalopathies.

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will publish the results of the analysis of the Spanish cargo of animal feed which was investigated at Goole, giving details of which organisation carried out the tests, where the contaminants came from and how the cargo came to be contaminated.

Mr. Gummer: Enforcement of the Feedingstuffs Regulations 1988, as amended, and the Agriculture Act 1970 is the responsibility of local authorities. My officials alerted local authorities and port health authorities on Friday 5 May of the possibility of a contaminated cargo of animal feed disembarking at Goole. In this particular case, the port health authorities took appropriate action and cleared the suspect cargo on Tuesday 8 May.

Pesticides

Mr. Win Griffiths: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food when the advisory committee on pesticides last met; and what matters were discussed.

Mr. Maclean: The advisory committee on pesticides last met on 26 April.

The main items discussed were a request for approval of a new pesticide and reviews of four existing approvals. In addition, the committee considered tributylin esters in industrial wood preservatives and anti-fouling paints; home-made pesticides; mineral hydrocarbons in food; liaison with the Food Safety Directorate consumer panel and control of the Blandford fly.

Council of Ministers

Mr. John Greenway: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what representations he has received from the National Farmers Union on the outcome of the last Council of Ministers meeting.

Mr. Maclean: The price-fixing settlement reached last month has been warmly welcomed by the farming community, including the National Farmers Union.

Consumer Panel

Mr. Tony Lloyd: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food when his consumer panel first met; and what matters were discussed.

Mr. Gummer: The first meeting of the consumer panel took place on 12 March 1990. It discussed a wide range of issues including BSE, food irradiation, water quality and blood enzyme gels in meat products. The minutes of this meeting are publicly available.

Consumers Association

Mr. Cox: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food when he last met the Consumers Association to discuss consumer affairs.

Mr. Maclean: Representatives of the Consumers Association attended a meeting with consumer organisations which the Minister hosted on 3 April 1990.

Discussions focused particularly on the European Community price-fixing proposals, GATT and food labelling.

Small Farms

Mr. Amess: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he has any plans to increase assistance to small farms.

Mr. Gummer: All farms will benefit from the recent agreement on farm prices for 1990-91, which we estimate will boost farmers' returns by at least £500 million in a full year. We have no plans to provide additional assistance to small farms.

Green Currency

Mr. Boswell: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how much green currency disparities have recently been reduced.

Mr. Gummer: At the farm price settlement, agreement was reached on green pound devaluations which will have the effect of significantly reducing the monetary gaps between green and market exchange rates in the United Kingdom. On the basis of exchange rates at the time of the settlement the monetary gaps for crops will be reduced by 55 per cent., for milk by 38 per cent., beef by 55 per cent., pigmeat by 86 per cent. and sheep by 56 per cent. This compares with reductions of one third originally proposed by the Commission.

Green rate changes agreed for other member states will have the effect of reducing or removing monetary gaps for all sectors except cereals in Germany and the Netherlands and cereals, rice, oilseeds, fruit and vegetables, cotton and beef in Spain where it was agreed that no changes would take place.

Salmon

Mr. Stern: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food approximately how many salmon are now fished from the River Severn and its tributaries.

Mr. Curry: Statistics provided by the former Severn Trent water authority and the National Rivers Authority are published annually by my Department. Catches of salmon in the River Severn catchment for the last five years for which figures are available are given in the table.

	1984	1985	1986	1987	1988
Method of capture
Rod and line	545	1,256	1,254	929	1,362
Commercial instruments	3,376	1,651	3,300	2,963	3,511
TOTAL	3,921	2,907	4,553	3,892	4,873

Insect Damage

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food (1) what response he has given to the submission on changed risk of insect damage in a changed climate from AFRC Rothamsted; and what funds are available for this work;

(2) if he will list the projects contributing to the study of changes in the (a) abundance of, and (b) development of potential pest problem insects, as a result of climatological change or global warming.

Mr. Maclean: The Department has advised the AFRC's Rothamsted experimental station that funds amounting to some £100,000 are to be set aside over three years for research there on any change in the risk of insect damage in a changed climate. Work on this project, which was submitted in response to a request by my chief scientists group as an initial step in the Department's programme of research in this area, is due to start in 1991-92.

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what estimates his Department has made of the need for aphid identifiers over the next decade; and what steps he is taking to make financial provision for such training.

Mr. Maclean: No staff of this description are employed by the Ministry. Entomologists are employed in a number of capacities and their deployment and training are kept under review.

Conservation (Training Courses)

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will list the number of regional training courses on wildlife and landscape conservation that have been held for Agricultural Development Advisory Service officers in each year from 1979 to 1990 and the region in which the courses occurred.

Mr. Gummer: Information on regional training on wildlife and landscape conservation for Agricultural Development Advisory Service officers over the period specified is not available. However, records since 1987 show that more than 30 conservation courses have been held in regions. A breakdown of this total is as follows:

	1987	1988	1989	1990 (planned)
Northern	—	1	1	1
Midlands and Western	2	4	3	3
Eastern	3	2	4	—
South-Eastern	1	2	2	1

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many regional and national training courses on wildlife and landscape conservation are planned for Agricultural Development Advisory Service officers for 1990.

Mr. Gummer: A comprehensive programme of six national and 11 regional training courses on aspects of wildlife and landscape conservation is proposed for 1990.

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will list the number of national training courses on wildlife and landscape conservation that have been held for Agricultural Development Advisory Service officers in each year from 1979 to 1988.

Mr. Gummer: Records of national training on wildlife and landscape conservation for Agricultural Development Advisory Service officers are available from 1980 onwards. The number of courses held each year is as follows:

	Number
1980	2
1981	4
1982	4

	Number
1983	4
1984	5
1985	7
1986	8
1987	2
1988	1

Meat Exports

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what action he proposes to take to overturn the current West German ban on bone-in beef from the United Kingdom.

Mr. Maclean: Following the European Community's scientific veterinary committee opinion earlier this year that British beef does not pose a problem for public health, our export trade with West Germany is getting back to normal levels under existing Community rules.

Cattle Exports

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what action he proposes to take in respect of the European Economic Community ban on live cattle exports from the United Kingdom.

Mr. Maclean: We will keep the position under review in the light of new developments on bovine spongiform encephalopathy generally.

Product Labelling

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he proposes to introduce regulations to prohibit or require the labelling of products from transgenic animals.

Mr. Maclean: Subject to parliamentary approval, we intend to use powers under the Food Safety Bill to introduce regulations providing for a positive approval system for any food produced by genetic manipulation techniques, including any products from transgenic animals for food use. We have also specifically asked the Food Advisory Committee to consider, on a case-by-case basis and within the context of the Food Labelling Regulations, the need for special labelling of these products following their approval.

Scrapie

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will introduce measures requiring the processors of ruminant remains to ensure the treatment of such remains and temperatures adequate to destroy scrapie and scrapie-infective agents.

Mr. Maclean: The treatments needed to destroy scrapie-like agents during the rendering process are not known. Research will be undertaken into the inactivation of the agent.

River Mersey

Mr. Tony Lloyd: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what programmes the Government have implemented or plan to implement to encourage the application and development of clean technology in the River Mersey area.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: I have been asked to reply.

Part I of the Environmental Protection Bill will apply integrated pollution control to industrial and other processes which have a significant potential to pollute. Under integrated pollution control, discharges to the water environment will be subject for the first time to requirements to apply clean technology to minimise polluting wastes and render them harmless. Many such processes are located in the Mersey basin.

Mr. Tony Lloyd: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what progress the River Mersey campaign has made towards the agreements in the North sea conference for (a) 50 per cent. reduction in red list substances and (b) 70 per cent. reduction in heavy metals.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: I have been asked to reply.

It was agreed at the second North sea conference to reduce quantities of substances that are persistent toxic and liable to bioaccumulate, reaching the North sea by values in the order of 50 per cent. The Government took the view that other seas around the United Kingdom would be given the same degree of environmental safeguarding. Progress in implementation of this was published in the United Kingdom North sea action plan which was presented to the third North sea conference in March 1990. The Mersey catchment basin has made a satisfactory contribution to this progress.

It was agreed at the third North sea conference, for substances that cause a major threat to the marine environment, and at least for dioxines, mercury, cadmium and lead, to achieve reductions between 1985 and 1995 of total inputs of the order of 70 per cent. or more, provided that the use of the best available technology or other low waste technology measures enables such reductions. The Department is preparing guidance on how this should be implemented.

Sewage Sludge Disposal

Mr. Tony Lloyd: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what is Government policy with regard to the dumping of industrial effluent into sewerage systems.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: I have been asked to reply.

Treatment in a sewage works may be an appropriate solution for certain industrial effluents. The discharge of any such effluents to a public sewer requires the consent of the water service company under section 2 of the Public Health (Drainage of Trade Premises) Act 1937, and it may impose conditions. Discharges from sewage works or sewers to rivers or coastal waters require the consent of the National Rivers Authority.

Mr. Tony Lloyd: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if the Government plan to build more incinerators to dispose of sewage sludge as sea dumping is phased out.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: I have been asked to reply.

It is the responsibility of the water service companies to make provision for the disposal of sewage sludge. It is likely that a greater proportion of sewage sludge will be incinerated as dumping of sludge at sea is terminated.

Mr. Tony Lloyd: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if heavy metal and other contaminants are released into the environment at the same level in sewage sludge as in sea dumping.

Mr. Maclean: In excess of 95 per cent. of sewage sludge is water. The solid element is largely organic matter which will decompose in the environment whether on land or in the sea. Contaminants associated with this organic matter are likely to be released into the environment. In many cases, however, contaminants such as heavy metals are rapidly reabsorbed on to other solid materials such as clay particles.

WALES

Moorings

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will arrange to discuss with his Wales tourist board, the Crown Estate and yachting and boating interests, the policy being followed by the Crown Estate with regard to charges for moorings in Welsh resorts; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Roberts: I have no plans to do so.

Planning Appeals

Mr. Nicholas Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will give the number of planning appeals made to the Welsh Office against decisions made by each Welsh local authority in 1987, 1988 and 1989 together with the number of appeals upheld in each year against each authority.

Mr. David Hunt: The information is not available in the form requested. Records of planning appeals are held for each district in which they occur but not for the planning authority to whose decisions they relate. Since 1989 records have also been kept of appeals within national parks. The information available is:

New Housing

Mr. Nicholas Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will give details of the new-built housing provided in each local authority area in 1987, 1988 and 1989 provided by (a) the private sector, (b) local authorities and (c) housing associations.

Mr. David Hunt: Information on housebuilding completions for 1989 is given in the following table. The total number of housebuilding completions was 11,388 in 1989, compared with 11,037 in 1988 and 9,254 in 1987. Data by local authority area for 1987 and 1988 were published in "Welsh Housing Statistics No. 9 1989", a copy of which is in the House of Commons Library.

Health Authority Expenditure

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will publish a table showing to the most recent available date, the cost of administrative and clerical staff as a proportion of net revenue expenditure for each health authority in Wales; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. David Hunt: The information requested for 1988-89 (the latest year for which information is available) is as follows:

	Per cent.
Clwyd	6·5
East Dyfed	6·7
Gwent	6·5
Gwynedd	6·7
Mid Glamorgan	6·3
Pembrokeshire	6·7
Powys	5·6
South Glamorgan	7·6
West Glamorgan	6·4
All district health authorities	6·7
WHCSA	47·2
HPAW	26·5
All Welsh health authorities	7·2

Source Health authorities' annual accounts.

It is to be expected that Powys health authority, which does not have a large acute sector, has a lower than average proportion of its revenue expenditure accounted for by administrative and clerical costs and that South Glamorgan health authority with its teaching and regional services responsibilities has a higher than average figure. WHCSA and HPAW are not really comparable since the nature of their functions and consequently their staff mixes are different from each other and from those of district health authorities.

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will publish a table showing for the decade 1979 to 1989 what was the average cost of administrative and clerical staff as a proportion of net revenue expenditure of (a) all health authorities in Wales, excluding South Glamorgan and (b) Gwynedd health authority.

Mr. David Hunt: The information requested is as follows:

	Gwynedd health authority Per cent.	District health authorities[1] Per cent.	Welsh health authorities[2] Per cent.
1979-80	6·6	6·1	6·6
1980-81	12·3	13·3	13·8

Geriatric Services

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what was the number of discharges and deaths of elderly people in Gwynedd from National Health Service hospitals in the county for each year from 1980 to 1989, together with the number of beds, including acute, rehabilitation and support, which were available for elderly people in these hospitals in each of these years.

Mr. David Hunt: The latest available data, relating to the number of discharges and deaths of people aged 65 and over from NHS hospitals in Gwynedd, are as follows:

	Numbers
1980	8,676
1981	9,765
1982	8,951
1983	11,151
1984	11,250
1985	12,559
1986	14,626
1987	15,592
1988	16,553

Information on the number of beds specifically available for the elderly is not available centrally. While information on the number of beds in specialties designated as geriatrics, psychogeriatrics and elderly mentally ill is available, beds in other specialties (eg general medicine, general surgery) can be used for people of all ages.

In-patient Treatment

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what is the average length of stay for in-patients for all surgical conditions in each of the district health authorities in Wales, respectively, analysed (a) by district general hospitals and (b) by district general hospital and community hospitals combined.

Mr. David Hunt: The available information is given in the following table:

Health authority	Average length of stay (days) for surgical specialties[1] 1988-89
	District general hospitals	All hospitals
Clwyd	5·8	5·7
East Dyfed	5·7	5·9

Parliamentary Questions

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will recruit into his Department additional staff to facilitate expeditious replies to parliamentary questions.

Mr. David Hunt: No. Providing for timely answers to parliamentary questions is given high priority by my staff.

Health Authority Posts

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many (a) medical and (b) administrative posts are currently officially frozen in each of the nine district health authorities in Wales.

Mr. David Hunt: This information is not available centrally.

X-Ray Waiting Times

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will undertake a study into the time delay in processing and analysing X-ray studies by Gwynedd health authorities; and if he will publish a table showing over the past five years the average waiting time from when a request is made by a doctor for an X-ray for a patient, to the taking of that X-ray and the average time from taking the X-ray to the results being available to the relevant doctor.

Mr. David Hunt: The information requested is not available centrally. The hon. Gentleman has written to me separately about the processing of X-ray investigations and I shall reply to him when I have seen the comments of Gwynedd health authority.

Cardiff Development Corporation

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what are the terms and conditions of employment, including the length of contract and severance terms, of the chief executive of Cardiff development corporation.

Mr. David Hunt: The chief executive of Cardiff Bay development corporation is an employee of the corporation. The terms and conditions of employment are, therefore, matters for the chief executive and the board of the corporation. An indication of the chief executive's salary is given in the corporation's annual report.

Private Nursing Homes

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list, giving the full postal address and the number of authorised beds in each instance and the date of opening all private registered nursing homes in Wales.

Mr. David Hunt: I will write to the hon. Gentleman as soon as details have been obtained from district health authorities and place a copy of my letter in the Library of the House.

Hospital Closures

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list in the Official Report every hospital closure which has been approved by his Department between 3 May 1979 and 1 June 1987; and the date on which approval to close that hospital was given.

Mr. David Hunt: I will write to the hon. Gentleman and place a copy of my letter in the Library of the House.

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales, pursuant to his reply of 9 May, Official Report, column 152-53, what factors account for the delay in sending formal notification to the authority of, and making a public announcement about, the closure of Caernarfon cottage hospital after the decision to close the hospital had been taken; when the chairman and general manager of Gwynedd health authority were told of his decision; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. David Hunt: Unfortunately, a typing error resulted in the date of approval of closure of the cottage hospital Caernarfon, being recorded as 20 March 1990 in my hon. Friend's answer when the correct date was 20 April 1990. I apologise for this mistake.

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales (1) what was the original estimate in 1987 for the additional annual running costs at Bronygarth hospital, Penrhyndeudraeth, in order to accommodate the transfer to that hospital of services currently provided at Ysbyty Madog, Porthmadog; and what is his latest estimate of this additional annual running cost;

(2) what was the original estimated net capital cost, excluding sales value, of his closure of the Madog memorial hospital, Porthmadog and the transfer of facilities to Bronygarth hospital; and what is his latest estimate of this cost.

Mr. David Hunt: I refer the hon. Gentleman to my hon. Friend's reply of 14 May 1990 at column 296.

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how much capital expenditure on buildings and equipment has been incurred at the cottage hospital, Caernarfon, since the beginning of the financial year 1984-85; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. David Hunt: I shall write to the hon. Gentleman and place a copy of my letter in the Library of the House.

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what is the most recent available estimate of the net annual savings which will be achieved by Gwynedd health authority from the closure, respectively, of (a) Ysbyty Coffa Madog, Porthmadog, (b) Druid hospital, Llangefni, (c) Groesynyd hospital, Conwy, (d) Ysbyty Dewi Sant, Bangor, and (e) the cottage hospital, Caernarfon; and what will be the net annual savings achieved from each of these closures, respectively, in 1990-91, and 1991-92.

Mr. David Hunt: Following the issue of the Welsh Office's letters of 3 and 22 March 1989 which conveyed approval of Gwynedd health authority's proposals to close Madog memorial hospital, Druid hospital, Groesynyd hospital and St. David's hospital, Bangor, detailed issues relating to the closures are a matter for the health authority, subject to compliance with the relevant conditions set out in the letter of 3 March. The hon. Gentleman should therefore contact the health authority for further information.

I shall write to the hon. Gentleman about the cottage hospital, Caernarfon.

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will review the decision of Gwynedd health authority to make a temporary closure of the gynaecology annexe ward at St. David's hospital, Bangor, and take steps to ensure that women awaiting childbirth do not have to share facilities with women awaiting termination of pregnancy.

Mr. David Hunt: Gwynedd health authority is to consider the temporary closure of the gynaecology annexe at its meeting on 21 May in the light of consultation with interested local bodies. Any concerns that the hon. Gentleman may have about the proposals should therefore be made known to Gwynedd health authority.

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales whether Gwynedd health authority, in considering its hospital closure programme, followed the requirements of planning paper 5 on procedures for consultation on the closure and change of use of health buildings; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. David Hunt: This issue was addressed in the letters of 3 March 1989 and 20 April 1990 from the Welsh Office to the general manager of the health authority, which were copied to the hon. Gentleman.

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales whether the provisions of service planning paper 5 are mandatory on health authorities in Wales considering the closure or change of use of hospitals; and what action he takes if health authorities do not follow such provisions.

Mr. David Hunt: Service planning paper 5 sets out the guidance on the consultative procedures to be followed by health authorities when proposing to close or change the use of health buildings. My action in cases where authorities do not follow its provisions depends on the individual circumstances.

Gwynedd Health Authority

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales on how many occasions during the past five years his Department has granted temporary financial assistance to Gwynedd health authority; on what dates such assistance was granted; what sums were involved; and what requirements were placed on the health authority, prior to such assistance being agreed, with respect to its strategy for restoring financial balance in the medium term.

Mr. David Hunt: A loan of £1·3 million was provided to Gwynedd health authority by cash limit adjustment on 8 February 1988. The loan was made on the understanding that the authority had determined and was consulting on a plan for restoring its financial balance by the end of 1991-92; £0·5 million of this sum was provided for revenue purposes and £0·8 million for capital purposes in recognition of the authority's immediate cash flow problems. The whole of the loan was repaid by the authority the following year.

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales whether, prior to 7 February, Gwynedd health authority had given any indication to the director of the National Health Service in Wales as to its likely overspend in either 1989-90 or 1990-91; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. David Hunt: The financial plan submitted by the Gwynedd health authority in April 1989 indicated that the authority would cover its projected expenditure in 1989-90 only through the achievement of significant savings from the service rationalisation measures set out in the action plan which it drew up in 1987-88 and the use of a small loan from another health authority. The financial plan also projected the need for substantial loans in 1990-91 to facilitate the capital expenditure necessary to achieve further service rationalisation measures and hence achieve its aim of restoring financial balance in the medium term.

At its annual review meeting with the executive committee of the health policy board in September 1989, the authority indicated that there had been a deterioration in its financial position since the submission of its financial plan, and that additional remedial action would be necessary if the authority were to contain its expenditure within its notified resources and that this action was to be discussed by the health authority at its meeting in November.

The income and expenditure monitoring form submitted by the health authority for the period ended 31 December, confirmed the slippage in the authority's planned programme of savings and indicated that this shortfall would be compensated by the transfer of funds from the authority's capital allocation to its revenue allocation.

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what steps he has taken following the information being given by Gwynedd health authority in February to his Department that it anticipated facing a £4 million shortfall in 1990-91; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. David Hunt: I refer the hon. Gentleman to the replies that I gave him on Thursday 10 May and Monday 14 May.

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales who appointed the consultants currently investigating the financial difficulties of Gwynedd health authority.

Mr. David Hunt: I refer the hon. Gentleman to the answer given to him on 14 May at columns 288-89.

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales whether he has received any application from Gwynedd health authority to sell the Coed Mawr office site in Bangor; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. David Hunt: The health authority has delegated authority to sell the Coed Mawr office site.

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many abortions have taken place in Gwynedd since Gwynedd health authority decided to curtail its family planning services; and what was the number for the comparable period preceding that decision.

Mr. David Hunt: I understand that Gwynedd health authority proposes to consider the outcome of the local consultation exercise on measures to reduce overspending, including a temporary reduction in family planning services, at its meeting on 21 May.

THE ARTS

Bands

Mr. Fisher: To ask the Minister for the Arts what financial support (a) the Arts Council and (b) regional arts associations have given to (i) brass bands and (ii) silver bands in each of the last 10 years.

Mr. Luce: This information is not held centrally. However, both the Arts Council and the regional arts associations are active in supporting the work of brass and silver bands where a professional input is involved. In particular, the Arts Council will consider applications for financial assistance under its music for small groups programme.

NATIONAL FINANCE

Manufactured Goods

Mr. Skinner: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on action he proposes to reduce the deficit in trade in manufactured goods.

Mr. Norman Lamont: The deficit in trade in manufactures will fall as domestic demand and capacity pressures ease and exports increase. There are clear signs that this is happening; in the first quarter of 1990 the volume of exports of manufactures—less erratics—was 9½ per cent. higher than in the same quarter a year earlier, while imports were only 1 per cent. higher.

Public Expenditure

Mr. Leighton: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is the average public expenditure per capita paid for out of national taxation for each citizen of (a) the United Kingdom and (b) Northern Ireland.

Mr. Norman Lamont: Public expenditure is financed from a number of sources including taxation, national insurance contributions, borrowing, interest and dividend receipts and local authorities' revenue collection. There is, generally, no direct linkage between specific areas of expenditure and sources of revenue. Consequently, information is not available in the form requested.

Information on per capita general Government expenditure in the United Kingdom and Northern Ireland, financed from all sources including local authority revenue collection, was given in the reply to my hon. Friend the Member for Wrye Forest (Mr. Coombs) on 19 December 1989, Official Report, columns 179-90.

G7 Countries (Interest Payments)

Mr. Allen: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list how much gross domestic product is used for scheduled interest payments (a) in the public sector and (b) in the private sector of the G7 countries.

Mr. Ryder: United Kingdom sector net interest payments and GDP data are published in the CSO "Blue Book", 1989 edition. General Government net interest payments are published in the CSO's "Financial Statistics". Data on sectoral net interest payments and GDP for the other G7 countries are published by the OECD in "National Accounts volume II, 1975-1987".

Civil Service Pensions

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will give an estimate of the number and percentage of the total of (a) pensions in payment to retired civil servants, (b) pensions to be paid to existing civil servants on retirement which are/will be (i) uprated in line with prices each year and (ii) uprated by any other formula.

Mr. Ryder: There are 385,395 pensions in payment to retired civil servants, plus a further 117,905 dependants' pensions. The numbers of pensions in payment is expected to show some increase for the next 10 to 15 years. All civil service pensions, in common with other public service pensions, are uprated annually in line with prices.

EC Finance Ministers

Mr. Simon Coombs: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on his recent meetings with other European Community Finance Ministers.

Mr. Ryder: My right hon. Friend the Chancellor of the Exchequer regularly meets his Community counterparts at the Council of Economic and Finance Ministers, the last meeting of which took place in Luxembourg on 23 April. My right hon. Friend made a statement in the House about the outcome on 25 April, Official Report, column 238.

In addition, my right hon. Friend sees his European colleagues for bilateral discussion from time to time, most recently Sr Carli, the Italian Minister of Finance, on 30 April in Rome.

Petrol Prices

Sir Dudley Smith: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if it remains Government policy that unleaded petrol should cost significantly less than the leaded variety.

Mr. Ryder: Yes.

Civil Service Costs

Mr. Chris Smith: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what was the total cost of civil service support for the Financial Secretary on the occasion of the debate on the private Member's motion on Monday 14 May.

Mr. Lilley: Ministers generally receive support for debates from the civil service on matters of fact and Government policy. Separate costings are not available.

Economic Statistics

Mr. Higgins: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if, further to his statement to the Treasury and Civil Service Committee on 3 April, he can now announce his plans to improve the quality of economic statistics.

Mr. Major: I have arranged for the Central Statistical Office to take further steps to improve the quality of statistics in three areas—services, companies and balance of payments. My aim is to introduce these changes as quickly as possible so that some results will begin to appear in the figures as early as the end of this year. This is a development made possible by last summer's reorganisation of the CSO which was undertaken to enable improvements to be made to economic statistics.

On services, I propose that extensions are made to quarterly inquiries of turnover in the services industries, and that more information on external trade in services is collected on a quarterly basis. On company statistics, I propose to obtain more quarterly information on capital expenditure, stockbuilding and profits. On balance of payments (and other financial) statistics, I propose that the quarterly direct investment inquiry should be expanded, and that more information be collected about United Kingdom companies' financial transactions with domestic and overseas residents. Because of the severe problems with balance of payments statistics, I have asked the CSO to undertake a thorough review over the next 12 months of the way in which these statistics are collected and compiled.

In addition, I have asked the CSO, in consultation with the appropriate bodies, to consider the case for wider use of statutory surveys. This should improve the quality of statistics by increasing response rates. It should also ensure that the burden on businesses is shared more fairly.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Prison Disturbances

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many cellular spaces were destroyed during the recent prison disturbances.

Mr. Mellor: A total of 1,908 inmate places were lost during the recent prison disturbances at Bristol, Cardiff, Dartmoor, Glen Parva, Long Lartin, Manchester, Pucklechurch and Stoke Heath, of which 561 have now been brought back into use.

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he expects to receive the findings of Lord Justice Woolf's inquiry into the recent prison disturbances.

Mr. Waddington: I have not asked Lord Justice Woolf to report by any particular time, but I know that he attaches importance to delivering his report to me at the earliest possible date.

Deportations

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many deportations have taken place from the United Kingdom under regulations which relate to the cases of Messrs Alexander and Oladehinde since his Department lodged its appeal; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: The divisional court decided on 21 February 1990 that members of the immigration service could not exercise deportation powers on behalf of the Secretary of State. This decision was reversed by the Court of Appeal on 15 March and an appeal has been made to the House of Lords. Despite the Court of Appeal judgment, the immigration service has not exercised the relevant powers since 21 February and action on outstanding affected cases has been suspended since that date. No affected deportation orders have been enforced since 21 February, although 34 people concerned have opted to leave the country under the voluntary supervised departure arrangements.

Electoral Rights

Mr. David Nicholson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department in what circumstances citizens of Namibia enjoy the right to vote in United Kingdom elections.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Namibia joined the Commonwealth on 21 March 1990 and those of her citizens resident in the United Kingdom will become eligible to register as electors here once an Order in Council is made adding Namibia to the list of Commonwealth countries in schedule 3 to the British Nationality Act 1981.

Football

Mr. Atkinson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, further to his reply of 8 May, Official Report, column 21, if he will make a statement on the meeting with representatives of the Football League and the Football Association.

Mr. Waddington: On 8 May I met at my request representatives of the Football Association and the Football League. I told the football authorities that it was unacceptable that they should ignore advice from a chief officer of police that a particular fixture ran a high risk of serious disorder. I indicated that it was their public duty to act on such advice. The Football League representatives accepted that they had been wrong to ignore the advice from the Dorset police on the Bournemouth v. Leeds United fixture on 5 May.

The Football League agreed to work out urgently with the Association of Chief Police Officers effective arrangements for obtaining police advice about the scheduling of fixtures and to act upon it on all occasions.

Extradition

Mr. Butler: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many United Kingdom citizens have been sought for extradition by foreign powers in the latest available year; and into what categories of alleged offence they fell.

Mr. John Patten: The United Kingdom does not distinguish between extradition requests in respect of its own nationals and nationals of other countries. For this reason, the nationality of those whose return is sought is not centrally recorded.

During 1989, extradition proceedings were commenced against 35 individuals in England and Wales. The offences were as follows:

Offence	Number of applications
Murder	1
Armed robbery	1
Theft	5
Burglary	2
Robbery	4
Obtaining property by deception	2

Offence	Number of applications
Forgery	3
Fraud	8
Embezzlement	2
Parental kidnapping	1
Indecent exposure	1
Handling stolen goods	1
Drugs	10

In some cases, extradition was sought for more than one offence.

Mr. Butler: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many extraditions have been applied for by the United Kingdom in the latest available year; and into what categories of alleged offence they fell.

Mr. John Patten: In England and Wales during 1989, extradition applications in respect of 29 individuals were made to foreign and Commonwealth countries. The alleged offences were as follows:

Offence	Number of applications
Murder	2
Armed robbery	1
Assault	1
Malicious wounding	1
Theft	12
Burglary	2
Obtaining money/property by deception	8
Forgery	3
Fraud	3
Receiving/handling stolen goods	3
Deception	1
Bankruptcy	1
False accounting	1
Procuring the execution of a valuable security	1
Perjury	1
Conspiracy to pervert the course of justice	1
Evasion of liability by deception	1
Drugs	5

In some cases, extradition was sought for more than one type of offence.

Women Prisoners

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many women prisoners from Her Majesty's remand centre Pucklechurch the prison department has failed to produce in court on the due date following their removal to Her Majesty's prison Holloway after the disturbances in April 1990.

Mr. Mellor: Of the 44 female prisoners temporarily transferred from Her Majesty's remand centre Pucklechurch to Her Majesty's prison Holloway on 23 April as a result of the disturbances, five were not produced in court on the due date because of difficulties in arranging escorts over the long distances involved.

All the women have now been transferred back to Her Majesty's remand centre Pucklechurch and arrangements have been made with the courts concerned to produce those not produced on the original due date.

Smoke Alarms

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make it his policy to require every home in the United Kingdom to be fitted with a functioning smoke alarm; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. John Patten: We would not anticipate legislation for this until at least the outcome of current research is known. Meanwhile, we are encouraging the installation and maintenance of smoke alarms on a voluntary basis. Since 1987, the proportion of homes with smoke alarms installed has increased from about 9 to 38 per cent.

Sex Offenders

Mr. Roy Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what consultations took place with interested parties in the county of Gwent before a decision was taken to move prisoners into the county who have been convicted of sex offences;

(2) what additional security precautions, including recruitment of additional staff, have been taken following the decision to move into Gwent certain prisoners who have been convicted of sex offences.

Mr. Mellor: The role of Usk has recently been changed to that of an adult training prison. I have written to my hon. Friend the Member for Monmouth (Sir J. Stradling Thomas) explaining the position and officials have written in similar terms to local authorities and other interested parties.

In its former role, Usk held those convicted of a wide range of offences, including sex offences. A prisoner's present and past offences are among the factors taken into account in assessing his security requirements and, therefore, the establishment to which he will be allocated.

Some work to upgrade physical security at Usk has already been completed. Other measures have been identified and work will be completed as soon as possible. The number and type of prisoners held there are within the capacity of existing staffing levels and appropriate to the general security standard of the establishment.

Birmingham Pub Bombings

Mr. Mullin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, pursuant to his answer of 14 May, if a copy of the Devon and Cornwall report will be made available to solicitors for the men convicted of the Birmingham pub bombings.

Mr. Waddington: No. The report will be confidential. Its purpose will be to assist me in reaching a decision on whether to take any action to intervene in the safety of the convictions in the light of the representations I have received.

Mr. Mullin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, pursuant to his answer of 14 May, whether the West Midlands chief constable will comment on the findings of the Devon and Cornwall inquiry when he submits the report to the Home Secretary.

Mr. Waddington: This will be a matter for the chief constable of the West Midlands police once he has had an opportunity to consider the report of the Devon and Cornwall police's inquiry.

Mrs. Khadija Bi

Mr. Madden: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when a decision is going to be taken on the application of Mrs. Khadija Bi, whose date of birth is 1 January 1936, and family to join Mr. Sadiq Hussain (Ref: H 155772/HUL 30/90) who was interviewed in Hull on 20 February last.

Mr. Mellor: The application is currently being considered by the immigration department and a decision will be reached shortly.

Security Vetting

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) if he will list by year for the last 10 years the number of people for which his Department is responsible who have been negatively vetted;

(2) if he will list by year for the last 10 years the number of posts for which his Department is responsible that required negative vetting.

Mr. Waddington: It is not our practice to give detailed information about security vetting procedures.

Strangeways Prison

Mr. Litherland: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the future of Strangeways prison, Manchester.

Mr. Mellor [pursuant to the reply, 8 May 1990, c. 28]: After reviewing a range of options, my right hon. and learned Friend the Home Secretary has concluded that the redevelopment of Her Majesty's prison Manchester should be based on a major refurbishment of the inmate accommodation—including the installation of integral sanitation—and the provision of a range of new and improved supporting facilities. This approach offers, we believe, the best prospect of bringing the accommodation at Her Majesty's prison Mancheser back into use as quickly as possible, so as to end the use of police cells and ease pressures on other parts of the prison system in the north, while at the same time seizing this opportunity to make much-needed improvements in conditions and facilities at Manchester.

About 970 places should be available within three years. Of these, over 300 places—in the remand wings—should all be available after about a year. The need for remand places in the north-west is, however, so great that the main part of the remand centre—K wing, the least damaged of the wings—will be repaired and brought back into use within 4 or 5 months, albeit without installing integral sanitation at this stage. It will be used with the places in the undamaged hospital to provide accommodation for up to 200 inmates who would otherwise be in police cells. Additional security will be provided, as will opportunities for education, religion, and physical education.

The programme of work is estimated in all to cost over £60 million at outturn prices. It will be undertaken to stringent timings and management contracting will be used to assist in this.

Discussions will now commence with all the interested parties including the board of visitors, Her Majesty's prison Manchester and the trade unions on the detailed arrangements to be made within the framework which I have set out, including their operational consequences and arrangements for dealing with commitments to courts in the Manchester area.

Other measures will, however, be needed at other establishments in the north, and we shall be discussing these with boards of visitors and trade unions at the establishments concerned.

PRIME MINISTER

European Political Union

Q12. Mr. Allen: To ask the Prime Minister what discussions she has had with other Heads of Government on the name of a politically unified Europe; and what has been the result.

The Prime Minister: I have had no such discussions.

Hungary

Q29. Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Prime Minister what action Her Majesty's Government are taking on the recommendations of Professor Paul Hare, of Heriot-Watt university, in relation to encouraging British financial institutions to counteract Hungarian over-dependence on financial institutions in Dusseldorf and Frankfurt, by British participation in the Hungarian economy and by linguistic, scientific and marketing practice assistance; and if she will make a statement.

The Prime Minister: British financial institutions' involvement in the development of the Hungarian economy is a matter for their commercial judgment. The Government's know-how fund is available for projects in Hungary including linguistic and marketing training. The Export Credits Guarantee Department is now considering applications for investment insurance in eastern Europe.

Cyprus

Q55. Mr. Cox: To ask the Prime Minister if she will list the issues concerning Cyprus that she discussed with the Prime Minister of Turkey during her recent visit to that country.

The Prime Minister: I discussed with President Ozal prospects for the future of the Cyprus intercommunal talks. Mr. Ozal reaffirmed his Government's support for the United Nations Secretary-General's good offices mission and said that Turkey accepted the common objective of a bizonal and bicommunal state in Cyprus.

Scottish Constitutional Convention

Q138. Mr. Harry Ewing: To ask the Prime Minister if she will accept an invitation from the hon. Member for Falkirk, East in his capacity as joint chairman of the Scottish constitutional convention to address the convention at its July or September meetings.

The Prime Minister: No.

Image Building

Mr. Allen: To ask the Prime Minister whether she will review the official guidance for the Government information service that image building, whether explicit or implied, is not acceptable.

The Prime Minister: There is no need to do so.

Government Employees

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Prime Minister what are the rules governing the procedures under which personnel employed by Her Majesty's Government speak to hon. Members.

The Prime Minister: Ministers are accountable to Parliament for the policies and actions of their Departments, and will usually wish to be present at briefings of Members when policy issues are involved. Briefings of Members by civil servants on factual matters may be undertaken at the discretion of Ministers. On next steps agencies, I refer the hon. Member to my reply to the hon. Member for Newport, West (Mr. Flynn) on 15 May, Official Report, column 374-75.

Security Vetting

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Prime Minister if she will make a statement as to the difference between (a) positive and (b) negative vetting.

The Prime Minister: It is not the normal practice to give detailed information about vetting procedures.

Jordan (Arms Purchases)

Mr. Rogers: To ask the Prime Minister what undertakings were given by Jordan during her negotiations with King Hussein on the Jordan defence package about the forwarding of arms, ammunition and equipment to Iraq.

The Prime Minister: It is customary to include provisions restricting transfer in any major arms sales agreement.

Mr. Rogers: To ask the Prime Minister (1) what financial agreements were considered during her negotiations with King Hussein on the Jordanian defence package;

(2) whether her office authorised the preferential interest rates accorded to Jordan in the financing of the purchase of arms and ammunition under the Jordon defence package.

The Prime Minister: The financial arrangements governing defence sales of this kind are a matter of commercial confidence.

Engagements

Mr Lewis: To ask the Prime Minister if she will list her official engagements for Thursday 17 May.

Mr. Meale: To ask the Prime Minister if she will list her official engagements for Thursday 17 May.

Mr. Eastham: To ask the Prime Minister if she will list her official engagements for Thursday 17 May.

Mr. Stern: To ask the Prime Minister if she will list her official engagements for Thursday 17 May.

Mr. Barry Field: To ask the Prime Minister if she will list her official engagements for Thursday 17 May.

The Prime Minister: This morning I presided at a meeting of the Cabinet and had meetings with ministerial colleagues and others. In addition to my duties in the House I shall be having further meetings later today, including one with President Mubarak of Egypt.

HEALTH

Syringes

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Health why he has decided to exclude one third millilitre syringes from the list of items available on prescription.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: One third millilitre syringes have recently been introduced into the market in this country. Our view is that there is insufficient clinical demand for this product to be included in the list of appliances GPs may prescribe. We are keeping the matter under review.

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many (a) one third millilitre syringes, (b) one half millilitre syringes and (c) one millilitre syringes were issued on prescription for 1989, 1988, 1987 and 1986.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: One third millilitre syringes have never been available on general practitioners' NHS prescriptions. Disposable syringes in one millilitre and one half millilitre sizes for use with U100 insulin became prescribable on 1 September 1987. Estimated prescribing figures in England are:

Period	Size	Total
1987
1 September to 31 December	0·5ml	10 million
	1ml	Not available
1988
January to December	0·5ml	27·3 million
	1ml	4·9 million
1989
January to June (latest available data)	0·5ml	13·9 million
	1ml	5·4 million

Dukeries Community Hospital

Mr. Andy Stewart: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when he will be able to announce the start of the new Dukeries community hospital.

Mr. Dorrell: Hospital building is a matter for the relevant regional health authority. I therefore suggest that my hon. Friend contacts Sir Michael Carlisle for the information he seeks.

Abortion

Mr. Alton: To ask the Secretay of State for Health what instructions or advice his Department has issued to National Health Service hospitals concerning abortions after the 24th week of gestation.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: I refer the hon. Member to the reply that I gave him on 22 March at column 730.

Mr. Alton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) how many notifications of abortions from 1989 have been received by the chief medical officer of the Department of Health six months or later after the abortion took place;

(2) what action his Department takes in cases where notifications of abortions are received by the chief medical officer later than the time specified by abortion regulations.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: The provisional data available suggest that in 1989 a total of 323 notifications were received six months or more after the month of termination. All notification forms are scrutinised by staff authorised by the chief medical officer. Where the forms received appear clearly to have been sent later than the period specified in the regulations, without a reasonable explanation, the matter may be taken up with the doctor concerned.

Hearing Aids

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether deaf children are required to insure commercial hearing aids supplied by the National Health Service.

Mr. Dorrell: I refer the hon. Member to the reply my hon. Friend the then Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Health gave to the hon. Member for Gordon (Mr. Bruce) on 1 May at column 538.

Hepatitis

Sir Dudley Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what estimate he has of the number of professional people and workers who are at risk in contracting hepatitis B as a result of their duties and what approximate percentage have been inoculated against it.

Mr. Dorrell: Hepatitis B can be contracted in many ways in private life as well as through professional activity. For this reason, it is difficult to provide an accurate estimate of the numbers of professional people and workers at risk of contracting the disease as a result of their duties. The incidence of hepatitis B in both the general public and public service workers has declined markedly from a total of 1,785 laboratory reports in 1985 to 644 such reports in 1988.

Professional people considered at risk may have been vaccinated either through occupational health services or by their general practitioners, and it is not possible therefore to estimate the percentage who have received vaccination.

Sir Dudley Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps he has taken to ensure that all who are at risk through their work in the public service have been given adequate warning about hepatitis B and information as to how they can obtain inoculation against it.

Mr. Dorrell: Departmental advice regarding hepatitis B vaccination is contained in the joint committee on vaccination and immunisation's memorandum "Immunisation against Infectious Disease". A new edition of this memorandum will be published this month, copies of which will be placed in the Library. The potential risks arising from work in the public service have been drawn to the attention of the relevant occupational health services whose responsibility it is to assess those who may be considered for vaccination.

National Health Service Trusts

Mr. Canavan: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many expressions of interest have been made for hospitals to opt out of existing arrangements within the National Health Service; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: A total of 193 units have expressed an interest in NHS trust status, including a number with more than one hospital.

Health Link Workers

Mr. Rooker: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what considerations led his Department to cease to sponsor the health link worker for the Chinese community in Birmingham; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Corbett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health for what reasons he has decided to withdraw funding for a health link worker with the Chinese community in Birmingham from 11 July; and what steps he is taking to ensure the continuation of this service.

Mr. Dorrell: As part of the "Helping the Community to Care" initiative, the Department of Health funded a health link worker post within the Birmingham Chinese community centre for the years 1988-89 and 1989-90. As with all these schemes, central funding for this project was planned to last for a limited period.

Nurses (Training)

Mr. Burns: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether he has approved the implementation of Project 2000 nurses training in any additional schools of nursing.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: I am pleased to announce that approval has been given today to implementation of Project 2000 in 14 more schools of nursing during 1990-91, subject to the necessary educational approval being obtained from the English national board. They cover the following 30 health districts:

Lancaster; East, South and West Cumbria
Harrogate and Northallerton
North and South Lincolnshire, Nottingham, and Central Nottinghamshire
West Suffolk
Hillingdon
Barking, Havering and Brentwood
Canterbury and Thanet, South-East Kent
Croydon, Merton and Sutton
Southampton and South-West Hampshire
East and West Berkshire
Cornwall and Plymouth
Herefordshire, Kidderminster, Worcester, and Bromsgrove and Redditch
South Sefton, Southport and Formby
Salford, Bolton

In addition, I am able at this stage to give approval in advance to implementation in 1991-92 for three further schools, covering a further five health districts:

Shropshire, Staffordshire
City and Hackney
Stockport and Glossop

The total funding to be made available by the Department for the implementation of Project 2000 in 1989-90 and 1990-91 will be approximately £38 million.

Multiple Births

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when the findings of the national study of triplets and higher order births will be published.

Mr. Dorrell: During the first half of July.

Benzodiazepines

Mr. Fearn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he intends to contra-indicate benzodiazepines for pregnant women.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave him on 16 May.

Mr. Fearn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much industry contributed to helping those addicted to benzodiazepines to withdraw from them in the last year for which figures are available.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: The information requested is not held centrally.

Vaccinations

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much money was spent on vaccinations at GPs' surgeries in 1989.

Mr. Dorrell: Figures are not available on a comprehensive or consistent basis. The cost of item of service payments to GPs for vaccination and immunisation in the general medical service in financial year 1989-90 was £41 million. The basic ingredient cost of prescriptions for vaccines written by GPs and dispensed by community pharmacists and dispensing doctors in calendar year 1989 (financial year figures are not yet available) was £26 million; this excludes the cost of dispensing fees, and takes no account of discount, container allowance or VAT. These figures do not include the cost of vaccines which GPs obtain from health authorities or from any other source, information on which is not held centrally.

ENERGY

UKAEA Chairman

Mr. Eadie: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what will be the salary of Mr. John Maltby as part-time chairman of United Kingdom Atomic Energy Authority.

Mr. Baldry: The salary of Mr. John Maltby as part-time chairman of the UKAEA will be £50,000 per annum.

Electricity Prices

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy (1) what assessment he has made of the probable rise in electricity prices for large electricity-intensive industries, when the transitional price-cap expires;

(2) what assessment he has made of the effect on the electric arc steel-making industry of the ending of the qualifying industrial users schemes;

(3) what assessment he has made on the effects on heavy industry of the ending of the qualifying industrial users schemes;

(4) what representations he has received about the ending of the qualifying industrial users schemes for intensive industrial electricity consumers.

Mr. Baldry: Future prices to large users are a matter for negotiation between customer and supplier. It would be premature to try to predict the outcome of those negotiations. Privatisation is benefiting such customers by enabling them to seek competing bids for supply. Many have already succeeded in negotiating price reductions. Disputes between regional electricity companies and customers may also be referred to the Director General of Electricity Supply.

EDUCATION AND SCIENCE

Local Management of Schools

Mr. Madden: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science, pursuant to the reply of 14 May, if he will name the local education authority which has sought to defer the implementation of LMS.

Mrs. Rumbold: Rochdale.

Rothera point

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what assessment he has made of the implications for wildlife from the construction of the airstrip at Rothera Point.

Mr. Jackson: An assessment of the implications for wildlife from the construction of the airstrip is given in the final comprehensive environmental evaluation published in September 1989 by the Natural Environment Research Council, prior to placing the contract for the construction. This document was referred to in my reply to my hon. Friend the Member for Suffolk, South (Mr. Yeo) on 19 October 1989, Official Report, column 189, and a copy is in the Library.

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science how many seals are killed each year by personnel at the British Antarctic Survey station on Rothera point; how many deaths are classified as intentional, and how many as accidental; what is the purpose of the intentional deaths; what is the explanation for the accidental deaths; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Jackson: No accidental seal deaths have ever been reported from Rothera. Meat from some 140 seals is however used annually to feed about 30 sledge dogs at the Rothera base. There is full compliance with the agreed measures for the conservation of Antarctic flora and fauna of the Antarctic treaty.

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what is the origin of the materials being used to construct the British Antarctic airstrip at Rothera point; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Jackson: The origin of materials being used to construct the airstrip at Rothera point is given in the final comprehensive environmental evaluation published in September 1989 by the Natural Environment Research Council, prior to construction. A copy of the report is in the Library.

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what company is constructing the British Antarctic strip at Rothera point; on what basis the contract was awarded; and what safeguards exist in the contract relating to environmental protection.

Mr. Jackson: Pelly Construction Company of Whitehorse, Yukon, Canada is constructing the airstrip at Rothera. The contract was awarded by competitive tender and in consideration of experience, expertise and cost. Environmental safeguards were incorporated into the tender exercise and thence into the contract. They are given in the final comprehensive environmental evaluation published in September 1989 by the Natural Environment Research Council, prior to construction. A copy of the report is in the Library.

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what discussions he has had with other countries in respect of measures to ensure environmental protection in connection with the operation of the British Antarctic airstrip at Rothera; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Jackson: A draft comprehensive environmental evaluation for the Rothera airstrip was circulated to all Antarctic treaty consultative parties for comment in 1989 —as well as to environmental, non-governmental organisations such as Greenpeace, Friends of the Earth, and the International Union for the Conservation of Nature.

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he has a provisional estimate of the number of aircraft likely to be using the British Antarctic airstrip at Rothera.

Mr. Jackson: A provisional estimate of the number of aircraft likely to be using the Rothera airstrip is five, all operated by the British Antarctic Survey in support of its science programme. I would also refer the hon. Member to the reply that I gave on 11 May, Official Report column 243, on the use of the airstrip.

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what precautions have been taken to prevent fuel spills at the British Antarctic airstrip being built at Rothera point; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Jackson: Precautions to prevent fuel spills at the Rothera airstrip are given in the final comprehensive environmental evaluation published in September 1989 by the Natural Environment Research Council, prior to construction. A copy of the report is in the Library.

The fuel handling and emergency containment facilities are designed to Canadian Arctic standards. Facilities will exist to contain any spillage considered likely to result from national operations.

Educational Performance

Mr. Straw: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what work is being undertaken or supported by Her Majesty's Government (a) to compare educational performance with that of other OECD countries and (b) to compare levels of performance after the introduction of the national curriculum with those before.

Mr. MacGregor: The Government are participating in a current OECD project which aims to develop a set of educational indicators applicable to the education system of all OECD member countries. The School Examinations and Assessment Council has a remit to analyse national curriculum assessment data, and will be considering how to compare these with earlier performance, particularly at age 16.

Ryrie Rules

Mr. Barry Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what advice he has given polytechnics on privately funded projects in the light of the retirement of the Ryrie rules.

Mr. Jackson: The provision of advice to polytechnics and colleges funded by the Polytechnics and Colleges Funding Council is a matter for the council. The PCFC is encouraging institutions to seek a variety of sources of funding for capital projects and, subject to investment appraisal, gives priority to projects where substantial external funding has been raised.

Thalassaemia

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science how much money was spent nationally on research in thalassaemia for each of the last 10 years.

Mr. Jackson: The Medical Research Council is the main Government agency for the promotion of medical and related biological research in this country. The council's total expenditure on research projects which could in whole or part be related to thalassaemia in the last 10 years is as follows:

	£000's
1979-80	211
1980-81	489
1981-82	697
1982-83	611
1983-84	666
1984-85	681
1985-86	906
1986-87	1,042
1987-88	1,057
1988-89	1,154

Figures for 1989-90 should be available in July. Research on thalassaemia may have been undertaken by university departments and medical schools with support from the University Funding Council (UFC) block grants and by health authorities; but information on this is not collected centrally. Charities may also be spending money on research into thalassaemia.

British Antarctic Survey

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science who has been appointed as environmental officer for the British Antarctic Survey; and what matters were of consideration in deciding the appointment.

Mr. Jackson: Mr. Shears will take up his post on 4 June 1990. The requirement of the post was a minimum of a good honours degree in the environmental sciences and a minimum of four years' postgraduate experience in aspects of environmental management, including waste management, and conservation. Relevant postgraduate qualifications were also sought. Normal Civil Service Commission procedures were followed in making the appointment.

National Curriculum

Mr. Jack: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science whether he plans to accept the advice given to him by the National Curriculum Council on core skills for 16 to 19-year-olds.

Mr. MacGregor: I have today written to the National Curriculum Council (NCC), endorsing in principle the list of core skills it proposes, namely:

communication problem solving personal skills numeracy information technology modern language competence.

I have also written to the School Examinations and Assessment Council (SEAC), asking it to use the list as the basis of further work. The NCC advised that the first three core skills should be built into all AS and A-levels, and that the remaining three should be built into syllabuses where this does not distort the nature of the subject. I have asked SEAC to advise me by the end of July on the practicability of building in the various core skills in this way. There must of course be no question of compromising the academic standards of AS and A-levels.

I have also commended to SEAC the idea, put forward by the NCC, that the themes of social and economic understanding, scientific and technological understanding and aesthetic and creative understanding should be included as guiding principles for those who design syllabuses at AS and A-level.

The NCC's report comments on how attainment in the core skills might be described; how it might be assessed and reported; and how credit transfer might be developed. These are all issues on which I have already invited advice from SEAC. I have therefore asked SEAC to comment on those sections of the NCC report when it gives its advice in July.

Finally, NCC stresses in its report that the core skills it has identified are suitable not only for those taking AS and A-levels but for all young people aged 16 to 19. I have accordingly, with the agreement of my right hon. and learned Friend the Secretary of State for Employment, asked the National Council for Vocational Qualifications (NCVQ), in consultation with the further education unit (FEU) and SEAC, to consider the applicability of the NCC list of core skills to vocational qualifications and report on this before the end of July.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Bomb Damage

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland whether the Housing Executive carries out emergency repairs to (a) executive homes and (b) private properties following damage by terrorist bombs.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: Assistance is available under the first-aid repair scheme for householders whose dwellings have been damaged as a result of terrorist activity. The Northern Ireland Housing Executive operates the scheme for public sector housing. The Department of the Environment at present deals with privately owned residential properties.

The Housing Executive maintains a 24-hour emergency call-out service which renders immediate remedial work to weatherproof all dwellings, public and private, as a result of criminal damage.

Harbour Road, Ballyhalbert

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what assessment he has made of the effectiveness of road safety precautions along Harbour road, Ballyhalbert, County Down; whether local residents have expressed any concern about danger from traffic; how close the traffic is to the front doors of homes along this section of road; how wide is the carriageway; what evidence he has of traffic driving on the existing footway; and whether he has any proposals to widen Harbour road.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: No specific assessment has been made of the effectiveness of road safety precautions along Harbour road at Ballyhalbert, County Down. Correspondence from a resident expressing concern about danger from traffic is currently being investigated. Traffic on the carriageway is separated from the houses by a 1·5 m wide strip at road level. There is no evidence of traffic driving on the footway on the shore side of the road. There are no plans at present to widen Harbour road.

Sewage Station, Portavogie

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what proposals he has to replace the foul sewage station on the foreshore at Portavogie, County Down; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: The sewage pumping station at New road, Portavogie, will be converted to an underground macerator station later this year.

Gas Pipelines

Mr. Beggs: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many kilometres of mains gas pipeline is still considered serviceable of the remaining mains gas distribution network in Northern Ireland.

Mr. Needham: No repairs or maintenance works have been carried out on the mains gas distribution network since the closure of the former town's gas undertakings, so considerable degeneration in the former network can be assumed. Its precise condition could not be determined without a detailed and expensive technical investigation.

Mr. Beggs: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland whether he will consult the Manx Government regarding their participation in any future project to pipe gas from Morecambe bay through the Isle of Man to South Down in Northern Ireland.

Mr. Needham: Consultations with the Manx Government are a matter for my right hon. and learned Friend the Secretary of State for the Home Department, but no such project has been proposed.

General Medical Practices

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many general medical practices have withdrawn from the health centres at (a) Bangor, (b) Lisburn, (c) Limavady and (d) Coleraine; how many practices remain at each of these four centres; from which other health centres general medical practices have withdrawn; and whether there are any plans to extend existing health centres or to provide new health centres for general medical practices.

Mr. Needham [holding answer 14 May 1990]: The numbers of general medical practices that withdrew from the four health centres during the past three years and the numbers now remaining are shown in the table:

	Bangor	Coleraine	Limavady	Lisburn
Practices remaining	6	2	3	8

The numbers that withdrew from other health centres in the same period are:

Practices withdrawn:
Cookstown 1
Moneymore 1

There are no plans to extend existing or to provide new health centres to accommodate additional general medical practices. The improvement or extension of facilities at existing health centres is a matter for the appropriate health and social services board.

OVERSEAS DEVELOPMENT

Vietnamese Boat People

Mr. Lester: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what steps he is taking to tackle the root causes of the departure of boat people from Vietnam; what role non-governmental organisations can play in this; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Chalker: I welcome the recent UNHCR initiative aimed at tackling the root causes of the migration of Vietnamese boat people through intensified non-governmental organisation (NGO) activity. In response, I am pleased to announce the setting up of a special scheme to support NGO activities in those parts of north Vietnam from which boat people have predominantly come in recent years. Under the special scheme, ODA will meet 80 per cent. of the costs of agreed humanitarian and economic projects put forward by British NGOs in the target areas. A sum of £1 million has been set aside to support these projects, separate from and additional to the allocation of £20 million for projects worldwide under the joint funding scheme.

Though most of the population in the camps is from the north, not all boat people come from the north. Indeed, two thirds of arrivals in Hong Kong this year have come from the south of Vietnam. I have therefore decided to add Vietnam to the list of countries participating in the general joint funding scheme, under which the ODA meets 50 per cent. of the costs of agreed NGO projects. The details of the new scheme will be discussed with British agencies at working level shortly. I am confident that we shall receive a good response.

ENVIRONMENT

Farmers (Compensation)

53. Mr. Cran: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what plans he has to review the arrangements governing the compensation paid to farmers for the compulsory purchase of land and buildings.

Mr. Moynihan: Compensation for all types of interests in compulsorily purchased land and buildings is based on their market value. Those affected are also reimbursed their costs arising from the compulsory purchase. In addition farmers may be entitled to farm loss payments to help them start farming on unfamiliar land. These arrangements are all under review. Our consultation paper on land compensation and compulsory purchase legislation, issued in March 1989, contained proposals for improvements, including proposals relating to farm loss payments. We plan to introduce legislation on these proposals when the parliamentary timetable permits.

Bellwin Scheme

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if, for each event which led to the activation of the Bellwin scheme since 1 April 1989, he will list the qualifying local authorities and the total grant aid paid to each of them.

Mr. Portillo: Activations of the Bellwin scheme for England since 1 April 1989, with the exception of those for the flooding in the Severn valley and Maidenhead, have applied to all local authorities. Whether an authority qualifies for grant will depend on whether its eligible expenditure exceeds its threshold. Because the earliest deadline for the submission of claim forms is 30 June 1990 there is as yet no information on how many authorities will claim or how much grant will be paid.

Polychlorinated Biphenyls

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what study he is making of the problems of leakage of polychlorinated biphenyls from hydraulic irrigation made available to him by Dr. Chris Mason of the Department of Biology in the university of Essex, and consequent dangers to others.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: Neither I, nor my right hon. Friend the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food, have any record of receiving copies of a report from Dr. Mason on the problems of leakage of polychlorinated biphenyls (PCBs) from hydraulic irrigation pumps.

My officials have written to Dr. Mason to obtain a copy of the report and when I have studied it, I shall write to the hon. Member.

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what research is available to him on the concentration of polychlorinated biphenyls in large oily fish favoured by marine mammals.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: Marine mammals show considerable variation in their feeding patterns and movements as illustrated in research on seals monitored around the Isle of May in the Firth of Forth and commissioned by my Department from the Natural Environment Research Council's sea mammal research unit. In some localities, marine mammals show a preference for oily fish such as herring, mackerel and sandeel.

As part of their general monitoring programme of commercial species consumed by humans, both the Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food, and in Scotland, the Department of Agriculture and Fisheries monitor PCB levels in herring and mackerel. These show generally that concentrations of lipophilic contaminants such as PCBs are higher in the tissues of oily fish than in other fish with a lower natural lipid content, but not so high in edible tissues as to affect human health. As yet no comparable data are available for sandeels, but DAFS is currently considering new work on the food chains of marine mammals and this will address in particular the bio-accumulation of persistent organochlorines such as PCBs.

Dangerous Dogs

Mr. Shersby: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what information he has concerning the number of successful prosecutions mounted under the provisions of the Dangerous Dogs Act 1989; how many dangerous dogs have been destroyed under the provisions of section 1(a); how many owners have been disqualified from having custody of a dog under section 1(b); and what advice he is giving to local authorities on the operation of the Act.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: I have been asked to reply.

There are no statistics yet available for the number of successful prosecutions mounted under the provisions of the Dangerous Dogs Act 1989. This Act extended the powers available to a court on a complaint under section 2 of the Dogs Act 1871 together with additional rights of appeal and enhanced penalties. It is not possible from the information held centrally to isolate such penalties from others under section 2 of the Dogs Act 1871.

Guidance on the Dangerous Dogs Act was given in Home Office circular 63/1989, copies of which were placed in the Library on 9 August 1989.

Action for Cities

Mr. Andrew Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what level of investment the Government plan for the inner cities under the action for cities programme in the current year.

Mr. Moynihan: Spending under the action for cities initiative is planned to be about £4 billion in 1990-91, compared with just over £3 billion in 1988-89 and just under £3·5 billion in 1989-90.

Rates (Hammersmith)

Mr. Carrington: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what would be the average capital value rates bill on a property worth (i) £50,000, (ii) £80,000 and (iii) £100,000 in Hammersmith in 1990-91 assuming such a system had to raise the same amount of revenue as the community charge.

Mr. Chope: Figures placed in the Library on 4 April show illustrative levels of capital value-based rates in 1990-91 were such a system to be used to raise the same amount nationally as the community charge. The implied bills in Hammersmith and Fulham for properties worth (a) £50,000, (b) £80,000 and (c) £100,000 are £868, £1,389 and £1,736 respectively.

Housing (Disabled People)

Mr. Hannam: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment whether he has received a copy of Shelter's report entitled, "Our Homes, Our Rights—Housing, Independent Living and Physically Disabled People; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Chope: The report is based on a survey of 21 local authorities in England and Wales.

Local Government Finance

Mr. Hannam: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what criteria he has set for exemption from payment of the community charge by people with acquired brain damage; what guidance has been issued to general practitioners in this respect; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Chope: A person is exempt from the personal community charge on the ground of severe mental impairment if he or she is entitled to one of a number of qualifying benefits and is in receipt of a certificate from a registered medical practitioner stating that he or she is severely mentally impaired. For the purposes of the community charge legislation, a person is severely mentally impaired if he or she has a severe impairment of intelligence and social functioning, however caused, which appears to be permanent.

Guidance to general practitioners has been issued in a circular letter from the Department of Health, dated 3 November 1989. A further letter of guidance will be issued shortly.

Mr. Barron: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when he last met representatives of the Association of Metropolitan Authorities to discuss local government finance.

Mr. Chope: My right hon. Friend met representatives of the Association of Metropolitan Authorities and other local authority associations on 27 March. They discussed the community charge and other issues.

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment in how many local authority areas single prisoners who maintained unoccupied property would be liable to pay standard community charge at greater than a multiple of 0.

Mr. Chope: The information is not yet available.

Mrs. Gorman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what is the average level of community charge, discounting the safety net, in inner London in boroughs that were (a) Conservative controlled and (b) Labour controlled before 3 May.

Mr. Chope: Conservative controlled—£227. Labour controlled—£516. The figures are based on charges at 1 April 1990.

Mr. Michael Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what would be the average capital value rates bill on a property worth (i) £50,000, (ii) £80,000 and (iii) £100,000 in London in 1990-91 assuming such a system had to raise the same amount of revenue as the community charge.

Mr. Chope: Figures placed in the Library on 4 April show illustrative levels of capital value based rates in 1990-91 were such a system to be used to raise the same amount nationally as the community charge. The implied average bills for inner and outer London are:

Value of property £	Inner London £	Outer London £
(i) 50,000	743	507
(ii) 80,000	1,189	811
(iii) 100,000	1,486	1,014

Mr. Boswell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when he next plans to meet representatives of the local authority associations to discuss the relative effects of a tax on property values and the community charge.

Mr. Chope: We have no plans to discuss a tax on property values with representatives of the local authority associations.

Mr. Teddy Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what a person on average male earnings would pay in local income tax in 1990-91 in order to raise the same amount of revenue as the community charge in London.

Mr. Chope: The level of local income tax payable by a person on average male earnings would depend on the precise way in which such a system were introduced and on the precise tax allowances which were available. Illustrative figures exemplifying possible local income tax rates and the bill payable with a taxable income of £12,800 were placed in the Library on 4 April.

Mr. Robert G. Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment whether he has any plans to replace the community charge with a tax based on property floorspace.

Mr. Chope: No.

Mr. Hardy: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list the local authorities in England which within the consideration given in regard to the determination of the standard spending assessment for 1990-91 emerged as more socially deprived than Rotherham.

Mr. Chope [holding answer 14 May 1990]: The main measure of relative social deprivation within standard spending assessments is the all ages social index which is used in the assessment of the standard spending assessment elements for all other services and for other social services. The composition of this index is described fully on page 24 of the Revenue Support Grant Distribution Report (England) which was approved by the House on 18 January. The following authorities are those which have higher scores on this index than Rotherham:

Mr. Nicholas Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, pursuant to his reply of 9 May, how much of the additional £2·5 billion in budgeted receipts for local authorities in the current financial year over the last financial year will be received by authorities which at the time of setting the community charge were under (a) Labour control, (b) Conservative control, (c) Liberal Democrat control and (d) under no outright control.

Mr. Portillo [holding answer 16 May 1990]: A breakdown of the £2·5 billion estimate is not possible on information currently available. The increases in demands and precepts in 1990-91 over the estimated equivalent figures for 1989-90 uprated by 8·1 per cent. are as follows:

Political control of authority	Increase in £ million
Conservative	690
Labour	790
SLD or Liberal	30
No overall control	420
Other	10

Mr. Nicholas Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment whether he has any estimate of the percentage of the additional £2·5 billion in budgeted receipts for local authorities in the current financial year over the last financial year which will (a) be used to build up reserves which were depleted in the last financial year and (b) be spent upon services.

Mr. Portillo [holding answer 16 May 1990]: Local authorities as a whole are budgeting to draw down about £500 million from reserves in 1990-91.

Mr. Nicholas Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what would be the increase per capita in the level of community charge paid by residents in an area if their local authority were to increase by £1 per capita its total revenue; and what comparative increase would be borne by payers of the uniform business rate in the same area.

Mr. Portillo [holding answer 16 May 1990]: Local authorities have a number of ways of increasing their revenue, not all of which increase the community charge in their area, and none of which impacts directly on payers of the uniform business rate.

Mr. Campbell-Savours: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what proportion of the grant settlements for Westminster city council for the year 1990-91 related to a calculation of needs.

Mr. Chope: As for all other charging authorities, the RSG entitlement for Westminster is calculated on the basis of the Revenue Support Grant Distribution Report (England), approved by the House on 18 January, and is related to the assessment of the cost of providing a standard level of service. In Westminster's case, this amount is reduced by the £75 per adult contributions of the safety net.

Mr. John Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he plans to increase central Government assistance to local authorities to reduce the community charge.

Mr. Portillo: We will be taking decisions on the amount of central Government support to local authorities in the next few months. The detail of the revenue support grant settlement for 1991-92 will be the subject of consultation with the local authority associations in the autumn.

Mr. Colvin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what would be the average capital value rate bill on property worth (i) £50,000, (ii) £80,000 and (iii) £100,000 in England in 1990-91 assuming such a system had to raise the same amount of revenue as the community charge.

Mr. Chope: Figures placed in the library on 4 April show illustrative levels of capital value-based rates in 1990-91 were such a system to be used to raise the same amount nationally as the community charge. The implied average bills in England for properties worth (i) £50,000, (ii), £80,000 and (iii) £100,000 are £528, £845 and £1,056 respectively.

Tenants' Choice

Mrs. Gorman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make a statement on the initiatives taken on and the level of resources committed to promoting tenants' choice.

Mr. Chope: The Department carried out a national publicity campaign to make tenants aware of their rights and opportunities under tenants' choice at the time of its introduction in March 1989. This cost £524,000. It was followed in March this year by a regionally based publicity campaign, costing £130,000, in some areas where awareness of tenants' choice remained relatively low. Last week, I launched a series of four explanatory videos about tenants' choice, which the Housing Corporation will make available to interested groups of tenants. These cost £120,000. Further publicity may be undertaken later this year. The Housing Corporation also provides advice and information to tenants as part of its day-to-day work on tenants' choice.

Lake District

Mr. Ieuan Wyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment whether his Department has any plans to extend the environmentally sensitive areas programme currently in operation in the Lake district.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: There is no such programme currently in operation in the Lake district.

Farmland (Conversion)

Ms. Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment whether he will make a statement on the progress of the pilot scheme administered by the Countryside Commission in which farmers are paid to convert land for wildlife or recreational use.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: The countryside premium scheme which was launched last June is currently operating on a pilot basis in seven counties in eastern England. Under these arrangements farmers who have taken land out of agriculture production under the set-aside scheme administered by the Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food, agree to take prescribed measures to manage the land in ways which will be beneficial to wildlife, the local community and the landscape. I have been delighted with the response to the scheme so far. In less than a year since the scheme was launched agreements have been signed with 115 farmers covering nearly 15 per cent. of the land eligible for the premium scheme.

Landfill Sites

Ms. Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will identify those landfill sites which his Department considers represent a threat to the environment; what remedial action is required; and what action he is taking to ensure the safety of these sites.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: Responsibility for assessing environmental threats associated with individual landfill sites rests with the appropriate waste disposal authorities, working in conjunction with the National Rivers Authority and Her Majesty's inspectorate of pollution. It is for the authorities concerned to decide upon appropriate remedial action in each case. For the particular problem of landfill gas, the Government have made special provision of £33 million in the form of supplementary credit approvals for 1990-91, to allow authorities to undertake remedial work on those sites where problems have been identified.

Waste Disposal

Ms. Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list the special waste disposal facilities operational in the west midlands area.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: This information is not held centrally. It is the responsibility of waste disposal authorities to make details of disposal site licences available for public inspection. I understand that the west midlands hazardous waste unit, based at Walsall, should be able to provide the information the hon. Member seeks.

Ms. Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will give an estimate of the volume of (a) household waste, (b) industrial waste and (c) special waste produced in the west midlands area and disposed of in the west midlands area for each of the next five years.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: Regional estimates are not held centrally. It is for waste disposal authorities in preparing and reviewing waste disposal plans under section 2 of the Control of Pollution Act 1974, to include future estimates of the kinds of quantities of controlled waste arisings and disposals in their area based upon relevant survey work. I understand that the west midlands joint committee is currently preparing a revised plan for its area.

Smoke Alarms

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what plans he has for making smoke alarms mandatory.

Mr. Chope: A consultation paper containing proposals for amendments to part B, "Safety in Fire", of the Building Regulations 1985 was issued in March this year. It includes a proposal that new dwellings not protected by an automatic fire detection and alarm system should be provided with one or more self-contained smoke alarms. Comments on the proposals in the consultation paper have been invited by 30 June.

Otters

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what information he has on the threatened extinction of the otter.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: A major national otter survey, covering 8,606 sites in England, Scotland and Wales, was carried out in 1977-79, and repeated in 1984-86. The repeat survey showed a higher percentage of sites with otters present, indicating likely population recovery in particular in Wales, Scotland and the south-west, north-west and Welsh borders of England. Between the two surveys, legal protection for the otter was introduced and the use of organochlorine insecticide was reduced. These two positive factors seem likely to have contributed to the apparent recovery in distribution.

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what research is available to him on the damage caused to otters' wombs by polychlorinated biphenyls.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: I am not aware of any study which directly links exposure to PCBs to damage to otters' wombs. However, several studies have been reported which may be indirectly related to the effects of PCBs on the reproductive performance of otters. These are reviewed in a draft environmental health criteria document which will be published by the International Programme on Chemical Safety. The relevant section of the draft has been prepared by the Institute of Terrestrial Ecology (NERC) under contract to my Department and as part of the United Kingdom contribution to the international programme.

Ivory

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what information he has received from the records of trade in ivory maintained by his Department in accordance with article VIII.6 of CITES in terms of the impact in the United Kingdom of the ban on ivory trade.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: None. In accordance with normal practice, records of trade in ivory in 1990, which are being maintained under article VIII.6 of CITES, will not be collated until early 1991.

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what details he possesses in his Department of tradeable ivory currently held in the United Kingdom.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given to him by my hon. Friend the Minister for the Environment and Countryside on 1 May 1990, Official Report, column 504.

Leaded Petrol

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what steps he is undertaking to establish the incidence of motor vehicles being converted back to be able to run on leaded petrol; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: Discussions with motoring organisations following a recent press story produced no evidence to suggest that readjustment to leaded tune is widespread. A minority of cars—their number diminishing all the time—cannot be adjusted to run on unleaded petrol. This is made clear in the Department's booklet "Adjust to Unleaded", and in information diseminated by the vehicle and petrol trades. In all other cases, however, provided that the manufacturer's guidance is followed by competent mechanics, I am confident that motorists will encounter no problems in using unleaded petrol. They will, of course, both contribute to an important environmental improvement and save money by doing so.

Endangered Species

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what applications for exemption under article 6.1(a) of EC regulation 3626/82 have been considered by his Department in each of the last three years; and how many were granted.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: This information is not readily available and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Housing Grants

Mr. Madden: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many organisations, funded under section 73, have had such funding stopped; if he will list the names of these organisations; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Michael Spicer: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave to the hon. Member for Hammersmith (Mr. Soley) on 11 May 1990, Official Report, column 245.

Nature Conservancy Council

Mr. Colvin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment whether he is yet able to respond to the report of the House of Lords Select Committee on Science and Technology on the Government's proposals for the future of the Nature Conservancy Council.

Mr. Chris Patten: I have today written to Lord Flowers, conveying the Government's response to the Select Committee's most helpful report. A copy has been placed in the Library of both Houses.

City Grant

Mr. Cryer: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will place in the Library a copy of the application for city grant by 3Ds Ltd.

Mr. Moynihan [holding answer 15 May 1990]: No. Information presented by developers in city grant applications is commercially confidential.

Mr. Cryer: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when the application for city grant was received for the west end development in Bradford from 3Ds Ltd.; how much grant is being requested; what assessment has been made of the application; when a decision is likely to be made; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Moynihan [holding answer 15 May 1990]: The application for city grant from 3Ds Ltd. for the west end development in Bradford was received on 3 April 1990. The information presented in this application is commercially confidential. The application will be dealt with in the normal way and a decision made as quickly as possible.

Peat

Ms. Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what specific guidance has been circulated to local authorities and Government Departments regarding suitable alternatives to peat, if he will list the local authorities to which his Department has given guidance on this subject; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory [holding answer 14 May 1990]: My Department has not circulated any specific guidance to local authorities or other Government Departments on this subject. However, advice on peat alternatives has been provided to some local authorities on a contractual basis by the Agricultural Development and Advisory Service of the Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food. In addition the Forestry Commission's arboricultural advisory and information service, which is funded by the Department, is preparing a note on "Organic Soil Amendments" in relation to amenity tree planting. This note will report the results of recent research carried out for the Department and is likely to indicate that the money traditionally spent on bulky organic matter, inluding peat, to establish trees would often be better spent on thorough site preparation and post-planting care. This note will be available to local authorities. Finally, I refer the Member to the concluding paragraphs of the debate on peat resources which took place in another place on 9 May. Lord Reay set out the Government's position in his concluding speech on that debate.

Norman Shaw North (Heating)

Sir Dudley Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment why the heating system was on full strength in Norman Shaw North on Monday 23 April; what was the outside temperature for the main part of the day; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Chope: [holding answer 3 May 1990]: The highest outside temperature recorded on the roof of the Palace of Westminster on 23 April was 17·2 degrees centigrade. The heating was still on then because neither the House authorities nor the Parliamentary Works Office considered that the weather had settled sufficiently for the boilers to be shut down. Once the boilers have been shut down it is not possible to reheat the building quickly when there is a subsequent drop in temperatures. The situation was reviewed on 30 April and the boilers were then shut down for the summer.

Community Charge

Mr. O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what representations he has received from parish councils following the introduction of the community charge about the loss of business rate and the exemption of overseas service personnel from the community charge; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Chope [holding answer 4 May 1990]: My right hon. Friend has received many representations from parish councils about the treatment of business rates under the new system. He has received a few about the exemption from liability to pay the community charge of overseas service personnel.

Commercial Rateable Values

Mr. Gregory: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what is the anticipated time period for settling an appeal on new commercial rateable values to be completed by the valuation and community charge tribunal for (a) the York area and (b) England; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Chope [holding answer 4 May 1990]: The length of time will depend on when the proposal to alter the rating list is lodged, whether the ratepayer is able to reach agreement with the valuation officer without recourse to the valuation and community charge tribunal, and, if he is not, on how complex the matter is and on the volume of appeals in the area concerned.

Sewage Disposal

Mr. Tony Lloyd: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if the Government have any plans to implement programmes encouraging alternative sewage sludge disposal methods.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: The development and operation of alternative sewage sludge disposal methods are a matter for the water service companies themselves. Several novel methods of water or sewage treatment are currently being looked at and the Government encourage this development of new and innovative technology to deal with sludge disposal.

HOUSE OF COMMONS

Mineral Water

Mr. Barry Field: To ask the Lord President of the Council what steps he is taking to review the sale of Perrier water in the House.

Sir Geoffry Howe: None. New production Perrier water will continue to be available on demand in the Dining Rooms.

Mr. Barry Field: To ask the Lord President of the Council what information he has about illness among hon. Members following purchase of sparkling mineral water in the House of Commons.

Sir Geoffrey Howe: None. I understand that no such cases of illness have been reported.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Namibian Children

Mr. Nicholas Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assistance is being given by Her Majesty's Government to the Internationale Gesellschaft für Menschenrechte in its attempts to ensure that children from Namibia who are currently in children's homes in East Germany are identified before they are returned to Namibia and that their welfare in Namibia is monitored following their return.

Mr. Waldegrave: We are not providing any help to the Internationale Gesellschaft für Menschenrechte.

Mr. Nicholas Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether he has any information concerning the numbers of children from Namibia who are curently in children's homes in (a) East Germany, (b) Cuba, (c) Zambia and (d) Czechoslvakia.

Mr. Waldegrave: We have no precise information about numbers of children from Namibia in children's homes abroad. However, we understand from press and other reports that there may be as many as 430 Namibian children in East Germany, 350 in Cuba and 60 in Czechoslovakia. We have no information about numbers of Namibian children in Zambia.

Mr. Nicholas Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what information he has on the involvement of the South-West Africa People's Organisation in expatriating to children's homes in other countries which are sympathetic to its aims the children of Namibians who oppose SWAPO's policy and methods.

Mr. Waldegrave: We are aware of general allegations that Namibian children from families opposed to SWAPO may have been expatriated against their will. These allegations have been denied by the relevant authorities. We have no information about any specific cases.

Immigration

Mr. Madden: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when a decision is to be made on the application of Mr. Umar Hayat, whose date of birth is 2 January 1967, Ref: KA 0526, to enter the United Kingdom.

Mr. Madden: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when a decision is going to be taken on the application made to Her Majesty's Government's post in Islamabad on Mrs. Azra Bi, whose date of birth is 1 January 1970 Ref: IMM/98119, to join Mr. Mohd Amanat, who was interviewed in Hull in August 1989.

Mr. Sainsbury: In accordance with the guidelines on the handling of representations by Members of Parliament in immigration cases, issued to Members on 14 December 1988, I have referred these questions to the correspondence unit of the migration and visa department of the Foreign and Commonwealth Office. The hon. Member will receive replies from the unit as soon as possible.

'Bahia Paraiso'

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he has any information regarding the oil aboard the Argentinian vessel Bahia Paraiso currently lying in Antarctic waters.

Mr. Sainsbury: According to a report provided by the Argentine authorities at a meeting of the Council of Managers of National Antarctic Programmes (November 1989), the following amounts of oil products were estimated to be still on board the Bahia Paraiso:

568 cu m diesel fuels
73 cu m "Artic" diesel fuels
43 cu m JP1 Aviation Kerosene
9 cu m lubricating oil

Antarctica

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if it is his intention to arrange any meetings with members of the Antarctic treaty before the special convening of all the Antarctic treaty parties in November.

Mr. Sainsbury: We have no present plans to arrange formal meetings with other Antarctic treaty consultative parties before November.

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if Her Majesty's Government intend to reconsider their position in the light of the decision by the New Zealand Government not to ratify the convention on the regulation of antarctic mineral resource activities; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Sainsbury: Our understanding is that the New Zealand Government have not decided against ratifying CRAMRA. Rather they have "set aside" the convention for the time being.

Our position on CRAMRA is unchanged.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Scotch Whisky

Mr. Sims: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if Her Majesty's Government will continue to make representations to the Japanese Government urging them to fulfil their general agreement on tariffs and trade obligations in full with regard to liquor tax; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Redwood: Japan reformed its liquor tax last year following a GATT ruling, and Scotch whisky sales in Japan have since increased by 72 per cent. in value. We made strong representations to the Japanese Government last year about whisky lookalike products, which subsequently have not sold well. We continue to watch developments in the Japanese whisky market to ensure that the beneficial effects of the tax changes are not undermined, and will make further representations to the Japanese authorities as appropriate about any problems which arise from the remaining tax differentials.

Mr. Sims: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what recent representations have been made to the South African Government about the legislation which prevents certain Scotch malt whiskies from being sold in South Africa.

Mr. Redwood: Her Majesty's Government raised the matter with the South African Board of Trade and Industry on 17 April.

SCOTLAND

Planning Procedures

Mr. Teddy Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland under what powers he considers appeals by regional authorities for the calling in of planning decisions by district councils; what are the limits of time required for such decisions; if provision is made for cases where the time limits cannot be kept; and if he will make a statement.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: Under the terms of section 179 of the Local Government (Scotland) Act 1973 a district planning authority may appeal to my right hon. and learned Friend against the calling in of a planning application by a regional planning authority. There is no statutory time limit on my right hon. and learned Friend for determining a call-in appeal. SDD circular 29/1988 advised planning authorities that my right hon. and learned Friend would normally reach his decision on an appeal against call-in within 21 days of receiving written statements from both planning authorities.

ICI (Explosives Dumping)

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland why the 1987 licence to dump explosives from ICI's Nobel division in the Clyde estuary was excluded from the 1989 "Disposal of Waste At Sea" report; what other licences granted in respect of dumping at sea have been excluded from the report; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Lang: Information on the licence for ICI to dump explosive waste at the Birch Point site in the firth of Clyde was omitted in error from the report "Disposal of Waste at Sea—1986-87". The information in respect of Scotland was based on material which had been compiled for another purpose which did not require information on this type of dump site. The omission of figures in respect of the ICI licence for dumping at Birch Point was not noticed in preparation of this report.

I regret and apologise for this unintended omission. The information which should have been included in the report for 1986 and 1987, and the corresponding details for 1988 and 1989, are as follows:

Licences to dump solid industrial waste at Birch Point in the Firth of Clyde

Licensee	Amount licensed for dumping (tonnes)	Amount dumped (tonnes)
		Gross	Net
1986 ICI Nobel's	250	19·3	16·0
1987 ICI Nobel's	250	75·0	62·7
1988 ICI Nobel's	250	19·5	15·5
1989 ICI Nobel's	250	102·0	69·1

The licences for ICI in each year permitted dumping of wastes arising from the production of explosives and returned explosives (classes 1-4 of the 1984 Health and Safety Executive list of authorised explosives) including, in 1989, the slurry explosive NE1820 (class 2). The amount permitted for dumping in the licences granted to ICI Nobel applied to the gross quantity of material to be dumped including inert weighting, absorbent and packaging material (which are excluded from the net figures of amounts actually dumped).

Details of all licences issued for the dumping of waste at sea in Scottish waters are available for inspection on a public register maintained by the Department of Agriculture and Fisheries for Scotland as required under section 14 of the Food and Environment Protection Act 1985.

Private Hospitals

Mr. Wilson: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many operations, by type, were carried out in private hospitals in each of the last 10 years on behalf of the National Health Service; and at what cost.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: The information requested is not collected centrally.

DEFENCE

Aircraft Noise

Mr John Greenway: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether he has received the final report of the NATO committee on the challenges of modern society pilot study on aircraft noise; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Neubert: My right hon. Friend has now received this report and a copy has been placed in the Library of the House. The report surveys a very wide range of topics related to aircraft noise, including source noise, noise measurement, community response and health effects, operational considerations and public relations. It identifies areas in which further work is needed and proposes new arrangements for co-ordinating activity and exchanging information within the alliance.

Taking into account the work done by NATO, my Department has set in hand studies into the sources of noise within and around aircraft and to obtain further information on noise levels generated by aircraft operating at low level. A study has also been commissioned to review available information on any possible relationship between aircraft noise and hearing loss. To co-ordinate these and any follow-up studies and to ensure that the conclusions are taken into account in the future design and operation of aircraft, a low flying noise panel has been set up in the Ministry of Defence on which all relevant service, scientific and administrative staff are represented. My Department will also be co-operating fully in the wider co-ordination of activity and exchange of information within NATO as recommended by the CCMS report.

This work underscores the commitment of the Ministry of Defence to seek ways of reducing the impact of defence activities on the environment.

Regimental Mascots

Mr. Fisher: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what information he has on the aggregate costs of regimental mascots, for those units stationed both in the United Kingdom and abroad, during the last financial year.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: At present 10 regiments are authorised to keep regimental mascots. The majority of costs associated with mascots are met from non-public regimental funds, with certain veterinary and movement costs being paid for from public funds. Records are not held centrally for these costs, which could be isolated only at disproportionate cost.

Mr. Colin Wallace

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) what are the positions or posts of the senior officials referred to in paragraph 19(a) of his document, "Conclusions and Recommendations of the Enquiry into the Papers relating to Colin Wallace"; whether any of them are still in Government service; and whether any of them have been questioned;

(2) what was the rank of the official referred to in paragraph 13 of the report on the handling of papers relating to Mr. Colin Wallace.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: I have nothing to add to the information contained in the conclusions and recommendations of the report into how papers were overlooked in recent years in the case of Mr. Colin Wallace.

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what considerations of public policy informed his decision to give the answer to the intervention of the hon. Member for Linlithgow on 18 October 1989, Official Report, column 156.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: None. At the time of the intervention by the hon. Member, the special re-examination of departmental records was still at an early stage.

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what search of the archives was carried out before briefing the Prime Minister to answer questions from the hon. Members for Linlithgow and for Brent, East (Mr. Livingstone) in the case of Mr. Colin Wallace between 1981 and 1989, in the light of the report on the mishandling of relevant documents.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: During the period to which the hon. Member refers, some papers were recalled from archives in dealing with inquiries about the case of Mr. Colin Wallace, but as the conclusions of the report into how papers were overlooked makes clear, the main papers concerning Mr. Wallace's disciplinary case remained in archives from 1985 until August 1989.

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what stage developments relating to the scrutiny in progress within his Department of files relating to Mr. Colin Wallace had reached on 18 October 1989.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: An early stage.

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what were the reasons for the delay between 4 September 1989 and 30 January 1990 in bringing to the attention of the House past inaccuracies in statements relating to Mr. Colin Wallace.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The period to which the hon. Member refers was taken up by a special re-examination of departmental records relating to the case of Mr. Colin Wallace, and the preparation of the reply which I gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Arundel (Mr. Marshall) on 30 January 1990 at column 110.

Personal Papers

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is the usual practice of his Department after the resignation of an officer of the rank of major as to where to hold relevant personal papers on file.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: Normally once the immediate action relating to the resignation has been completed, the personal papers are added to the Department's archives.

Iraq (Presidential Guard)

Mr. Rogers: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what consideration was given to the fact that the presidential guard consisted of three infantry divisions and one armoured division when authorisation was given to the sale of ballistic jackets to the presidential guard of Iraq.

Mr. Alan Clark: All relevant factors are taken into account when exports of defence equipment are considered for any country, but it is not the practice to comment on specific defence sales matters.

Aldermaston

Mr. Rogers: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will set up an inquiry into the management of the contract to construct the A90 plant at Aldermaston by his Department and the Property Services Agency.

Mr. Neubert: No.

Mr. Rogers: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence on what dates the work to replace defective plutonium ductwork and supports in the A90 plant room area—Aldermaston commenced and finished.

Mr. Neubert: The replacement of the zone 1 ductwork in A90 commenced in September 1989 and was completed in April 1990.

Mr. Rogers: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether there was any wrongful substitution of materials in the construction and completion of the contract for the A90 building at Aldermaston.

Mr. Neubert: Investigation by both the PSA's central inquiry unit and the Ministry of Defence police found no evidence of the wrongful substitution of materials under the A90 mechanical and electrical contract at AWE Aldermaston. The outcome of these investigations was reported to the House of Commons Defence Committee in March 1990.

Mr. Rogers: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if his Department's police have submitted to him the results of their investigations into the malpractices that were alleged to have taken place during the construction of the A90 plant at Aldermaston.

Mr. Neubert: Yes.

Mr. Rogers: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) if the plutonium ductwork initially installed in zone 1 of the Aldermaston A90 plant conformed to atomic energy standard specification 6008;

(2) for what reasons the £5 million replacement of zone 1 plutonium ductwork in the A90 plant room area Aldermaston was required.

Mr. Neubert: I refer the hon. Member to House of Commons Defence Committee's Fifth Report on "The Progress of the Trident Programme" (HC374), and in particular to memorandum No. 5 included therewith, giving full details of the reasons for replacement of the zone 1 ventilation ductwork in the A90 building.

Jordan

Mr. Rogers: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether his Department authorised the preferential interest rates accorded to Jordan in the financing of the purchase of arms and ammunition under the Jordan defence package.

Mr. Alan Clark: The financial arrangements governing defence sales are a matter of commercial confidence.

Firth of Clyde (Dumping)

Mr. Wilson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his answer of 14 May about dumping, whether any areas of the firth of Clyde have been used by his Department for dumping in the last 10 years.

Mr. Neubert: No.

SOCIAL SECURITY

Lone Parents

Mr. Butler: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what changes he is planning for the collection of maintenance for lone parents; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: The Government are very concerned about the number of lone-parent families who receive little or no maintenance. We believe that absent parents should do more to meet their responsibilities. We are currently reviewing the maintenance system to see what changes need to be made and we aim to bring forward proposals later this year.

We have already taken action to improve the current system. We have strengthened the basis on which local social security offices assess absent parents' ability to pay maintenance and have improved our instructions on interviewing lone parents about the identity of the absent father. We have also introduced a new clause to the present Social Security Bill to expand our ability to take action and address some of the problems lone parents have experienced. In addition, my hon. Friend the Financial Secretary to the Treasury has just announced that the Inland Revenue will help the Department in tracing absent parents.

As a result of the action taken we aim to increase maintenance recovered from absent parents of lone-parent families on benefit from £180 million last year to £260 million in 1990-91.

Sir Ian Gilmour: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will publish figures showing the number of lone parents receiving supplementary benefit/income support by length of time on benefit, distinguishing between those who have been receiving it for less than one year, one to two years, two to three years, four to five years, over five years and over 10 years.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: I regret that not all the information requested is available. The information we do have on duration of claims by lone-parent families to supplementary benefit/income support is contained in table 20.21 of the 1988 edition of the income support annual statistical inquiry and a copy of this is in the Library.

Self-defence Courses

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what advice he is giving to social security office managers in Lothian region about the proposals of Lothian regional council that courses in self-defence should be offered to public service employees in jobs, where they may have to serve potential assailants; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: The Department does not provide training in self-defence for staff who deal with members of the public, and has no plans to do so. Interviewing and visiting staff receive training to help them cope with potentially aggressive situations, and to minimise risks to their safety.

Mobility Allowance

Mr. Lewis: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what was the total number of recipients of mobility allowance who have failed to have the allowance continued, on re-application, following the expiry of the original period of qualification giving the figures for each year from 1983 to 1989.

Mr. Scott: The information is in the table:

Year	Renewal Claims Decided	Renewal Claims Disallowed
1983	19,500	3,050
1984	23,950	4,050
1985	27,520	5,020
1986	29,530	5,110
1987	31,790	5,570
1988	34,060	4,840
1989	40,120	8,970

Therapeutic Earnings

Mr. Hannam: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) how many people currently benefit from his Department's therapeutic earnings allowance;

(2) what figures he has on (i) the average number of hours worked per week and (ii) the average level of payment received per week by those people receiving therapeutic earnings.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: Information on the number of people claiming an incapacity benefit and receiving earnings for therapeutic work is not collected centrally and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost. Similarly, information on the number of hours worked and level of payment received is not collected centrally and is not held locally in all cases.

Students (Rents)

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will direct local authorities to determine the claim for rent from students on the basis of information received from rent officers prior to a tenancy agreement being signed.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: No. Rent officers' determinations are made for the purposes of calculating housing benefit subsidy, and do not form the basis on which local authorities are required to determine benefit entitlement.

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will reconsider the procedures for the referral of rents by the relevant officer for students in rented accommodation.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: We have no plans for doing so, although we are keeping the rent officer arrangements under review.

Savings

Mr. Stern: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will make a statement on the basis on which income from savings is calculated for the purpose of benefit withdrawal.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: No income is calculated from the first £3,000 of any savings in the income-related benefits. An assumed (tariff) income of £1 a week for every £250, or part of £250, is calculated for savings above £3,000, up to £8,000 in income support and family credit and up to £16,000 in housing benefit and community charge benefit. The actual income generated from savings is ignored.

In income support, tariff income is taken into account in full against entitlement. However, the effect of tariff income on family credit, housing benefit or community charge benefit depends on the amount of other income available and the circumstances of the individual case, including the amount of eligible rent or community charge and the effect of the tapers. The tapers are applied to any income above the appropriate applicable amount and the resulting figure is offset against the maximum benefit payable. In family credit the taper is 70 per cent., in housing benefit it is 65 per cent. and in community charge benefit it is 15 per cent.

Means-tested Benefits

Sir Ian Gilmour: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is his latest estimate of the effects of rent rises and the switch to community charge on the number of (a) families and (b) persons in families entitled to means-tested benefits during the current financial year; and if he will give the figures for before and immediately after the April 1988 benefit changes.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: Estimates of the number of people eligible for particular benefits can be made only retrospectively from survey data. The latest available information on take-up of income-related benefits is contained in the technical notes on take-up of benefits, copies of which are available in the Library.

Students

Mr. Win Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what consultations he has had with organisations of and for deaf people regarding the proposed definition of disability contained in his proposals for the Social Security Benefits (Student Loans) Amendment Regulations: and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Scott: The Social Security Benefits (Student Loans) Amendment Regulations were referred to the Social Security Advisory Committee, which consulted a variety of organisations including those representing the interests of deaf people. The committee's report is now being given careful consideration and will be published, together with the Government's formal response, when the draft regulations are laid before Parliament.

Mrs. Mahon: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will introduce changes to remedy the situation whereby young people undergoing a full-time course of study are not entitled to any benefit in their own right, but whose parents cannot claim for them as dependants when they become 19 years old nor receive child benefit.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: In such a situation, as in others where a young person is not in the labour market by reason of undertaking studies, local education authorities have power to provide financial assistance. We do, however, keep the benefit rules under review.

Mr. Win Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what representations he has received regarding the proposed definition of disability contained in his proposals for the Social Security Benefits (Student Loans) Amendment Regulations; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Scott: Representations have been received from a number of individuals and organisations, including the All Party Disablement Group, the Royal National Institute for the Deaf, and the British Dyslexia Association.

Mr. Win Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what plans he has to ensure that deaf students and those with dsylexia retain entitlement to social security benefits while pursuing a course of higher education.

Mr. Scott: We propose that those deaf students and those with dyslexia who meet the criteria for the disability premium will continue to be eligible for income support and housing benefit. This will include any such student in receipt of attendance allowance, mobility allowance, invalidity pension or severe disablement allowance, and those who are also registered blind. Deaf students and those with dyslexia who face additional costs in connection with their course of study will continue to be eligible for the disabled students' allowance under the mandatory award arrangements.

Family Credit

Mrs. Mahon: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will give the reasons on which he based the decision to withdraw family credit from those whose weekly hours spread over 52 weeks fall below 24 hours, but who have previously been awarded both family income supplement and family credit on the basis of working more than 24 hours a week during school terms.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: Decisions on individual claims for family credit are the responsibility of the independent adjudicating authorities who are required to make their decisions in accordance with the legislation. One of the conditions for the award of family credit detailed in the legislation is that the claimant or her partner must be working, on average, not less than 24 hours a week. The legislation provides that, where the number of hours for which a person works fluctuates according to a recognisable cycle, the average number of hours shall be determined by reference to the average worked over the period of one complete cycle. Some adjudicating authorities have interpreted the legislation as providing that, in certain claims from school workers, the number of hours worked should be determined according to the average over 52 weeks. Where the adjudicating authorities determine that neither the claimant nor her partner works on average for 24 hours or more, the family would not therefore qualify for family credit but would not be debarred by the number of hours worked from receiving income support.

Pensioners

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security whether he will amend the poll tax benefit regulations so that the capital element of an annuity received by an elderly person under a home income plan is not treated as income and therefore does not affect benefit entitlement.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: We have no such plans.

Social Fund

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what action his Department is taking in respect of the application of Samuel Stitt of Wallsend, Tyne and Wear, for a social fund cash payment; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Scott: Mr. Stitt was originally refused a community care grant for domestic assistance on 11 April 1989. His subsequent application for judicial review was discussed by the High Court on 21 February 1990 and is now before the Court of Appeal. Mr. Stitt made another application for a community care grant for domestic assistance on 2 March 1990. This application was considered by the social fund officer on 8 March and he decided not to make an award. Mr. Stitt has not applied for a review of this decision.

Grants and Loans

Mr. Patchett: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many people have been refused (a) community care grants, (b) budgeting loans, and (c) crisis loans, on the grounds that there were insufficient funds/priority too low, by his offices within the Barnsley, East constituency during the period April 1988 to March 1989, and April 1989 to December 1989.

Mr. Scott [holding answer 8 May 1990]: The information in the table represents the number of processed applications for the periods April 1988 to March 1989 and April 1989 to December 1989 where one of the reasons for refusal given by the social fund officer was that of insufficient priority. The number of people refused or awarded payments from the social fund is not collected. Individuals can make more than one application during each accounting period and a social fund officer can give up to six reasons for not allowing an application.

WALES

Agricultural Developments

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will state what his policy is with regard to development control over agricultural developments in areas of outstanding natural beauty and areas designated as heritage coasts.

Mr. Roberts: Most agricultural development is permitted under the Town and Country Planning General Development Order 1988 and does not require specific planning consent. Where planning consent is required and the development proposed—whether it be agricultural or not—is in an area of outstanding natural beauty, it is important that its design and appearance, as well as its location, are subject to special scrutiny to ensure that the development fits properly into its surroundings. Attention should be paid not only to the natural scenery but to the traditional character of buildings in the area and the use of local materials. Similar considerations apply to those stretches of coast of particular scenic quality which have been designated as heritage coasts. Here, too, special care is needed to ensure that the beauty of these areas is protected.

Welsh Language

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what is his policy as to the language in which he answers letters which are written to him in the Welsh language; and whether this is also the policy of (a) his ministerial team and (b) officials of his Department.

Mr. Roberts: Our policy is to reply in Welsh to letters which are written in Welsh.

Gwynedd Health Authority

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many people were employed by Gwynedd health authority on the most recent convenient date; and what was the corresponding figure five and 10 years previously.

Mr. David Hunt: The available information, which relates to whole-time equivalent staff in post as at 30 September, is given in the table:

	Number
1979	3,588
1984	4,138
1989	4,269

These figures have not been adjusted to take account of the change in nurses' hours from 40 to 37·5 in 1980.

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what was the cost of the Deloittes consultant's report on the financial position of Gwynedd health authority undertaken in 1987; how much of this was paid for by (a) his Department and (b) Gwynedd health authority; what are the estimates of the corresponding figures for the new report currently being undertaken by consultants into Gwynedd health authority finances; whether this new report will be published; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. David Hunt: The final cost of the financial review and related work undertaken for Gwynedd health authority by Deloitte, Haskins and Sells in 1987 and 1988 was £173,650 inclusive of VAT. All of this was met by the Welsh Office.

The cost of the current review of the authority's financial strategy, which is being undertaken by Coopers and Lybrand Deloitte, is estimated at £7,000 plus VAT. This will be met by the authority, along with the further cost of an evaluation of its estate by the consultants at an estimated cost of £10,000 plus VAT. The consultants have also been commissioned to assist the authority to study the strategic options open to it and to produce pathfinder procurement and unit business plans for the contractual provision of services from 1 April 1991. The cost of this particular element in the consultant's brief is estimated at £53,000 plus VAT. The Welsh Office and the authority will each meet half this cost.

The decision on whether to publish the studies is one for Gwynedd health authority.

Drugs Education

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make a statement on the progress of drugs education in Welsh schools.

Mr. Roberts: All maintained schools in Wales are required to provide education about drugs as part of the national curriculum.

Since 1986 education support grant has been available to fund the employment of drugs education co-ordinators, whose role was to stimulate and support the development of drugs education by schools, colleges and the youth service. From 1989-90 the co-ordinators' remit was extended to health education generally, with particular emphasis on drugs, alcohol and AIDS.

To support the work of the co-ordinators, the Department has provided grant support since 1986 for in-service training for education professionals in drug misuse. From 1990-91, this programme has also been broadened to cover health education generally.

House Repossessions

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what was the total number of house repossessions in Wales in 1979, 1988 and 1989, respectively.

Mr. David Hunt: The information requested is not collected centrally.

Friendly Societies

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will take steps to establish for Wales its own registrar for friendly societies.

Mr. Ryder: I have been asked to reply.

There are very few friendly societies with headquarters in Wales and we consider that these matters are best handled centrally on an England and Wales basis.

Computerisation

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales whether the computerised personnel information contract awarded to McDonnell-Douglas on 9 May is compatible with the IBM UK financial management information systems contract awarded in August 1986.

Mr. David Hunt: The two contracts referred to are for separate, unrelated systems. The question of compatibility does not, therefore, arise.

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what is the duration of the contract for computerising the personnel information systems awarded to McDonnell-Douglas on 9 May.

Mr. David Hunt: Four months from the date of delivery (4 May).

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what are the penalties for late completion of the contract for computerising the personnel information systems awarded to McDonnell-Douglas on 9 May; and whether these provisons are based on the delay of the completion of the IBM contract awarded in August 1986.

Mr. David Hunt: The contract concerned contains no specific penalty clauses for late completion, but adequate remedies to deal with such an event, should it occur, are available under common law.

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales whether the contract for computerising the personnel information systems awarded to McDonnell-Douglas on 9 May duplicates any part of the contract awarded to IBM UK in August 1986.

Mr. David Hunt: No.

Teachers

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales (1) what steps he is taking to ensure there will be sufficient numbers of mathematics and science teachers in the primary and secondary schools in Wales;

(2) what efforts he is making to ensure that there will be sufficient teachers of (a) German, (b) French, (c) Italian and (d) Spanish.

Mr. Roberts: The teacher training bursary scheme provides an incentive to graduates of mathematics, chemistry, physics, technology and CDT to train as teachers. From September the scheme is to be extended to include modern foreign languages and Welsh and the level of the bursary increased to £1,500 with £2,000 for physics.

A number of other measures have been introduced to increase the supply of teachers. The Welsh Office is providing financial support to enable initial teacher training institutions to run "taster" courses in shortage subjects for mature people to encourage entry or return to teaching. £116,000 is being made available through education support grant for four LEAs in Wales to support the development of measures to increase the recruitment of teachers in the shortage subjects. TASC (teaching as a career) has been established to promote teaching as a career and help local education authorities and initial teacher training institutions to mount more effective recruitment campaigns.

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what initiatives he proposes to take to ensure that there will be sufficient numbers of teachers of Welsh in the primary and secondary schools of Wales.

Mr. Roberts: To help meet the increased demand for Welsh teachers Welsh is being added to the list of secondary shortage subjects for which a bursary of £1,500 will be available in initial teacher training (ITT). An incentive supplement of £1,200 will be available from September this year to increase the number of students training as primary teachers through the medium of Welsh. The revised criteria for the approval of ITT courses requires that institutions in Wales should provide students on primary courses with an opportunity to learn or increase their competence in Welsh to a point where they can teach the language.

We are not relying solely on new entrants to the profession however to meet this demand. Nearly £1 million is being made available this year to local education authorities to help teachers, currently teaching other subjects, develop their skills and competence in the Welsh language and to prepare them to teach the language.

These initiatives have been welcomed and the response so far is very promising.

Cardiff Bay Development Corporation

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what representations he has received concerning the future employment of the chief executive of the Cardiff Bay development corporation; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. David Hunt: None.

Hospitals

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will publish, on the basis of the most recent available figures, the average number of nursing staff hours per standardised unit of work at each of the district general hospitals in Wales and the all-Wales average; and if he will make a statement on the implications of these figures.

Mr David Hunt: The information requested is not readily available; however, information on nurses per 1,000 units of work for each district health authority in Wales is shown in table 5.1 of the publication "Key Statistical Indicators for National Health Service Management in Wales, No 7, 1988", a copy of which is in the Library of the House.

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will publish a table showing for each district general hospital in Wales the number of outpatient attendances for ear, nose and throat treatment during the most recent 12-month period available; and what was the notional period of time in days to clear the waiting list for each such hospital at the end of that 12-month period.

Mr. David Hunt: The most recently readily available information is published in "Welsh Hospital List Bulletin 1990: No 1", a copy of which is in the Library of the House.

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will publish, for each of the district general hospitals in Wales, figures showing for the most recent available date the cost per standardised unit of work; if he will rank these on an indexed basis, taking the all-Wales average as 100; and if he will make a statement on the implications of these figures.

Mr. David Hunt: Information on costs per standardised unit of work are shown in section 2 of the publication "Key Statistics Indicators for National Health Service Management in Wales, No. 7, 1988", a copy of which is in the Library of the House. The tables also show indexed costs, taking the average for hospitals of a similar classification as 100.

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will publish an analysis for each of the district general hospitals in Wales, showing the total number of deaths and discharges, indexed as 100 for each hospital; and what proportion is accounted for by virtue of (a) discharge to their own houses, (b) discharge to other National Health Service hospitals, (c) discharge to private nursing homes, (d) discharge to other locations and (e) deaths.

Mr. David Hunt: Figures on the destination of patients, based on the available information for 1988, are as follows:

Per cent[1]

	Patient's Home	Other Hospitals	Other Locations[2]	Deaths	Not Known
Ysbyty Glan Clwyd	91	5	2	3	0
Wrexham Maelor	94	1	1	3	0

[1] Figures may not sum to 100 per cent. owing to rounding.
[2] Discharges to private nursing homes cannot be separately identified, but are included within 'other locations'.

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list changes in the definitions of units of work used by his Department for the measurement of managerial performance in National Health Service hospitals in Wales since the concept was first introduced; and whether he has any plans for further changes.

Mr. David Hunt: I refer the hon. Gentleman to the introduction to chapter 1 in the publication "Key Statistical Indicators for National Health Service Management in Wales, No. 7, 1988", a copy of which is in the Library of the House. The methodology is constantly under review.

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will publish a table showing in each district health authority in Wales the number of new hospitals costing over £1 million which are all currently at various stages of planning, design and construction; and of these how many in each district are currently under construction.

Mr. David Hunt: The information requested is shown in the table:

District health authority and proposed new hospital

1. Under construction
   Clwyd—Deeside community hospital
   Mid Glamorgan—North Rhondda community hospital
2. In planning/design
   Gwent—Ebbw Vale community hospital
   Gwynedd—West Monmouth community hospital
   Mid Glamorgan—District general hospital for Taff Ely/Rhondda
   West Glamorgan—District general hospital for Neath/Port Talbot

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what was the total number of general practitioner beds available in National Health Service hospitals in each district health area in Wales at the most recent available date; and what is his policy towards the maintenance and extension of the availability of general practitioner beds.

Mr. David Hunt: The latest available information is published in "Hospital Bed Use Statistics, 1988-89", a copy of which is in the Library of the House.

The provision of general practitioner beds is a matter for district health authorities, in consultation with family practitioner committees, in the light of their assessments of local need and resources available.

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales (1) if he will publish a table showing the number of beds in community hospitals in each of the nine district health authorities in Wales;

(2) what was the total number of hospital beds available in 1978-79 and at the most recent available date (a) for Wales as a whole and (b) for each district health authority in Wales.

Mr. David Hunt: The information requested is published annually in "Hospital Bed Use Statistics", copies of which are in the Library of the House.

Separate publications are available for each calendar year 1973 to 1987, and for each financial year 1982-83 to 1988-89.

Ysbyty Gwynedd

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales (1) how many outpatients were on the waiting list for ear, nose and throat treatment at Ysbyty Gwynedd in September 1987, September 1988, September 1989 and at the latest available date;

(2) how many persons were on the outpatient waiting list for ophthalmology at Ysbyty Gwynedd in September 1987, September 1988; September 1989 and at the latest available date;

(3) how many people were on the waiting list for outpatient treatment for oral surgery at Ysbyty Gwynedd in September 1987, September 1988, September 1989 and at the most recent available date.

Mr. David Hunt: The information is given in the following table:

Outpatient waiting list at Ysbyty Gwynedd

	Ear, nose and throat	Ophthalmology	Oral surgery
September 1987	482	401	263
September 1988	582	477	244

Health Service Finance

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what is the interest rate which will be used for capital provided for the National Health Service in Wales with the new captital accountancy system; and if he will estimate what will be the impact of these changes on each of the nine district health authorities in Wales in their first year of operation.

Mr. David Hunt: The interest rate to be used for the purpose of calculating capital charges has been set at the current Treasury discount rate of 6 per cent. It is intended that the effect of capital charges will be neutral in the first year of operation with each authority being funded precisely in line with the estimated capital charges it will meet in that year. In due course the receipts from capital charges will be passed on to authorities according to their share of revenue resources. However, before then, there will be a transitional period to enable authorities and hospitals to adjust to the effects of charges on the costs of providing services. Until capital charges (which will include an element of depreciation as well as interest) have been calculated, it is not possible to estimate the effects on individual authorities.

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will publish a table in the Official Report showing for each of the nine district health authorities in Wales for 1989-90 and 1990-91 (a) the total revenue grant per head of population and (b) the cash increase over the previous baseline for their districts allocated per head of population.

Mr. David Hunt: The information requested is as follows:

District health authority	Revenue provision per capita of resident population		Increase in revenue provision per capita of resident population over previous financial year
	1989-90 £	1990-91 £	1989-90 £	1990-91 £

South Glamorgan	428·17	468·41	23·03	26·12
West Glamorgan	303·70	328·64	16·50	18·49

Source: Initial revenue allocations to health authorities 1989-90 and 1990-91.

Note: The population figures used are based on latest available (1988) mid-year estimates of resident population of district health authorities. However, it should be noted that district health authorities are currently funded to serve catchment populations rather than resident populations and the provision to South Glamorgan health authority also reflects the revenue costs associated with the medical and dental teaching functions of that authority.

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales, if he will publish in the Official Report in tables for (a) the whole of Wales and (b) Gwynedd, showing for each year since and including 1979-80 (i) the average hospital cost per in-patient case, (ii) the average hospital cost per out-patient case and (iii) the average hospital cost per day case attendance, showing figures both in cash terms and adjusted by the HCHS pay and price index.

Mr. David Hunt: The information requested can be provided for 1987-88 and 1988-89 only since figures for the years prior to 1987-88 are not readily available on a comparable basis and those for 1989-90 are not yet available.

	Patients using a bed[1]		Out patients		Day cases

Notes:

1. These costs exclude general services (for example catering, laundry cleaning and administration).
2. The H & CHS pay and price index used to adjust 1987-88 cash figures to 1988-89 pay and price levels is produced by the Department of Health and reflects the impact of pay and price movements on the mix of pay and non-pay expenditure in English authorities. It may not therefore be wholly representative of the effects of pay and price movements on the mix of pay and non-pay expenditure in health authorities in Wales.

EMPLOYMENT

Training

Mr. Blair: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will state for each of the periods 1 April 1989 to 31 March 1990 and 1 April 1990 to 31 March 1991 (a) the funds available for (i) employment training and (ii) YTS, (b) the number of (i) ET and (ii) YT trainee weeks achieved or forecast on those resources, (c) the number of (i) ET and (ii) YT trainee places provided or forecast on those resources and (d) the amounts to cover (i) training allowances, (ij) trainee travel, and (iii) child care for single parents.

Mr. Nicholls: The requested information is shown in the table:

	Employment Training		Youth Training
	1989-90 Provisional Outturn	1990-91 Plans	1989-90 Provisional Outturn	1990-91 Plans
Total Expenditure	£1,097 million	£1,156 million	£1,002 million	£903 million trainee weeks	10·5 million	11·2 million	19·4 million	[1]—
average in training	202,000	215,000	373,000	[1]—
entrants	430,600	450,000	288,500	260,000
Expenditure on:
Allowances	£527 million	£505 million	[2]—	[2]—
Trainee travel	£30 million	[3]—	£48 million	[3]—
Childcare	£15 million	[3]—	[4]—	[4]—

[1] During 1990-91 youth training targets have been set for vocational qualifications achieved, but not for training weeks of numbers in training.

[2] TECs and training providers are required to ensure that trainees on youth training receive at least the minimum levels of trainee allowance. The public contribution towards trainee allowances cannot be separately identified because employers also contribute and a proportion of trainees are employed and receiving wages.

[3] TECs and training providers are required to ensure that travel costs above specified levels are paid to YT and ET trainees and child care costs to lone parents are also reimbursed. Expenditure on trainee allowances and child care will not be separately identified in 1990-91.

[4] Child care costs are not available on youth training.

TECs

Mr. Eastham: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what mechanisms he intends to introduce to monitor the spending of public money by training and enterprise councils.

Mr. Eggar: Training and enterprise councils (TECs) will operate under a performance-based contract with my Department. They will be required to submit regular management and financial information on their performance. Additionally TECs will publish audited annual accounts and will be subject to independent audits by my Department and the National Audit Office.

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what directions he has given to the training and enterprise councils about the provision of child care facilities for women returning to training courses.

Mr. Eggar: Under the terms of their operating agreements with the Training Agency, training and enterprise councils are required to ensure that lone parents training on ET receive the cost of caring for children under 16.

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will arrange for a special needs representative to be included in each of the training and enterprise councils.

Mr. Eggar: It is for each training and enterprise council to determine the membership of its board within the broad parameters set by my Department.

Mr. Ashley: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment (1) what steps he is taking to ensure that TECs are taking sufficient measures to meet the training needs of disabled people; and if he will make a statement;

(2) what steps he is taking to ensure that minimum national standards for the training of disabled people are introduced when TECs are fully operational;

(3) what plans he has to monitor and evaluate the provision of training for disabled people and those with mental handicap in TECs.

Mr. Eggar: Each TEC will set out how it intends to provide for the needs of people with disabilities, including those with mental handicaps, in its corporate and business plans. These plans will be subject to my approval.

Specific contractual requirements common to all operating TECs include providing appropriate training to people with disabilities, and special access and communication arrangements where necessary.

TECs' performance against their plans will be regularly monitored by Training Agency operational offices. In addition, the training standards advisory service will be appraising the quality of training offered by TECs to people with disabilities.

Mr. Ashley: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will take steps to ensure that TECs submit an annual report to Parliament on how they are meeting the training needs of disabled people.

Mr. Eggar: Training and enterprise councils (TECs) will produce and publish an annual report within three months of the end of the financial year describing all the activities the TEC has undertaken during the year.

Small Firms

Mr. Jacques Arnold: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment whether he will list the principal measures taken by his Department since June 1987 to assist small firms.

Mr. Eggar: Since June 1987 my Department has introduced several new measures to assist small firms and improve on the existing range of fiscal, financial, training and advisory measures.

The principal departmental measures include:

The first of the new network of training and enterprise councils (TECs) came into being this April. TECs are responsible both for encouraging more businesses to invest in training and for enterprise activities designed to strengthen local economic growth.

The Department is giving high priority to its campaign to open up Government procurement to small firms. In the past year the guide for small businesses, "Tendering for Government Contracts" has been updated, and a booklet "Think Big, Buy Small" has been published and widely distributed to Government purchasing officers. My Department is also supporting a purchasing specialist in the Treasury's Central Unit on Purchasing to help Government Departments improve their purchasing procedures and to provide greater access for small firms to Government business.

April 1989 saw the introduction of business growth training (BGT) offering small firms help for better business and training plans. In its first year of operation BGT provided assistance to 83,000 clients.

This January the Training Agency sponsored the launch of the small business programme, an open learning initiative backed by the Open university and Cranfield school of management.

Two years ago the booklet, "Prompt Payment Please", was published in conjunction with an initiative to encourage good payment practice in both large and small firms. This has been welcomed by both the public and private sectors as a valuable guide to avoiding late payment of bills, which can particularly effect small firms.

The local enterprise agency project scheme (LEAPS) was introduced in April 1988 as part of the action for cities initiative. Financial support is available to enterprise projects run by approved enterprise agencies in any of the 57 urban programme authority areas. to date over £900,000 has been given in support of 136 projects. This complements the local enterprise agency grant scheme (LEAGS) which continues to contribute to enterprise agency core funding costs. Between them, both schemes have encouraged private sector sponsors to donate nearly £15 million over the past three years to support LEA work in advising small firms.

The loan guarantee scheme was improved in 1988 by simplifying the application procedure for loans up to £15,000, and in April 1989 by increasing the upper limit on loans to £100,000. As a result applications now average over 270 per month, compared to 100 a month two years ago.

Additionally, clients in the 16 inner-city task force areas have had a greater proportion of their loan guaranteed since 1988, and from April 1990 their premium has been reduced. Both changes are in recognition of the particular difficulties faced by inner-city residents trying to raise seed capital. In the three years to the end of this March over 6,800 loans were guaranteed to a value of £215 million.

These and other existing measures, such as the enterprise allowance scheme and the small firms service, have been successful in creating and maintaining a framework for enterprise and growth of the small business sector. During the last year alone my Department dealt with over 625,000 inquiries, counselling sessions and training activities for small firms at a cost of £237 million. In addition the 500,000th person has been helped to set up in business by the enterprise allowance scheme.

Inspection Visits

Mr. Andrew F. Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will list by area office of the Health and Safety Executive the number of factories which should have received a basic inspection visit in the financial year 1989-90 and the number which did receive such a visit; and when he expects the shortfall and the accumulated backlog from previous years' shortfalls to be made good.

Mr. Nicholls: The information requested is not available in respect of factories only. The table relates to all premises inspected by the factory inspectorate and the plans for their inspection in 1989-90.

Area	Basic inspections planned	Basic inspections completed
South West	2,027	1,987
South	2,450	2,091
South East	2,448	2,055
London North	3,934	2,943
London South	2,013	2,194
East Anglia	1,639	2,266
Northern Home Counties	2,412	2,094
East Midlands	1,923	1,813
West Midlands	3,170	2,946
Wales	2,541	2,584
Marches	3,001	3,376
North Midlands	1,972	2,317
South Yorkshire and Humberside	3,094	2,395
West and North Yorkshire	2,579	2,400
Greater Manchester	2,499	2,504
Merseyside	2,240	2,313
North West	2,350	1,768
North East	2,050	2,624
Scotland East	2,724	1,993
Scotland West	2,405	1,616

The plan is to recover the shortfall and accumlated backlog over five years.

Clothing Industry

Mr. Canavan: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many redundancies have been announced in the current year in the clothing industry.

Mr. Nicholls: It is provisionally estimated that there have been 4,029 confirmed redundancies in the footwear and clothing industries (SIC(80) 45) in Great Britain during the 12 months to March 1990.

Low Pay

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will publish the latest available data on the number and percentage of jobs that are paid (a) less than £2·50 an hour (b) less than £3·50 an hour and (c) less than £5 an hour.

Mr. Nicholls: The latest available information on the distribution of hourly earnings of employees is published in the 1989 new earnings survey report, a copy of which is in the Library. Numbers of all employees in the sample with gross hourly earnings in specified ranges are given in table 20 of part A. Percentages of full-time employees on adult rates with hourly earnings below stated amounts are given in table 26 of part A and similar information for part-time female employees is given in table 175 of part F.

Female Employment

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what steps he is taking to encourage employers to provide places for older women who wish to return to work.

Mr. Nicholls: While it is for employers to make arrangements to recruit the employees they need for the jobs they want doing, my right hon. and learned Friend and his colleagues will continue to take every opportunity to encourage them to make their recruitment and retention policies attractive to women and to older workers. My hon. Friend the Minister of State, Department of Employment recently launched a campaign aimed at raising employers' awareness of the likely impact of demographic change and to help them develop and implement action plans to meet it. The Department of Employment group also has a number of employment and training programmes which can help people wishing to return to work to take advantage of job vacancies provided by employers.

Minority Groups

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will set up a research project into the impact of the 1992 legislation on minority groups.

Mr. Eggar: My Department has no plans for such research. Minority groups should benefit from the opportunities offered by the completion of the single European market along with all other groups in society.

Labour Statistics

Mr. Thurnham: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what is the latest figure for the rate of unemployment; what the figure was for each of the last five years in (a) the Bolton and Bury travel-to-work area and (b) the rest of the north-west area; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Nicholls: The requested information is provided in the table.

Direct comparisons over the period cannot be made because of the various changes to the count over the period, in particular the change in benefit regulations for under 18-year-olds in September 1988 and because of seasonal influences.

Unadjusted unemployment rate (work force base)

Work force rate is unemployed claimants expressed as a percentage of the work force (ie unemployed, employees in employment, self-employed, Her Majesty's forces and participants on work-related Government training programmes).

Unemployed Claimants

Mr. Nellist: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will estimate for 1989 (a) the number of claimants without paid jobs who wanted full-time jobs, (b) the number who wanted part-time jobs, (c) the number who had no preference and (d) the number who did not want a job who (i) had not looked for a job in the last week, (ii) had not looked for a job in the last four weeks, (iii) were not available for work within the next two weeks, (iv) (i) and (iii), (v) (ii) and (iii), breaking the estimates down by sex and according to whether the main reason for not seeking work was (1) looking after family/home, (2) long-term sick/disabled, (3) believed no jobs available, (4) retired, (5) temporarily sick, on holiday, awaiting results of job application or waiting to start a job already obtained, (6) did not want/need work, (7) studying, (8) not yet started looking, (9) other reason/no reply/not applicable and (10) all reasons.

Mr. Nicholls: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave to him on 10 May 1990 at column 220.

European Social Fund

Mr. McLeish: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will make a statement on the impact of the delays in the administration of European social fund funding for voluntary sector organisations.

Mr. Eggar: The reform of the structural funds, including the European social fund, involves major changes to the administrative procedures. This will necessarily take time to effect and will have an impact on applicant organisations.

Mr. McLeish: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will give the total number of voluntary sector organisations currently in receipt of grant aid from the European social fund to finance training programmes for Great Britain and each of the standard regions.

Mr. Eggar: During 1989 165 voluntary organisations received assistance from the European social fund for vocational training programmes in Great Britain. The regional breakdown is as follows:

Region	Voluntary organisations
Northern	17
Yorkshire and Humberside	9
East Midlands	2
East Anglia	2
South East	57
South West	5
West Midlands	7
North West	17
Wales	8
Scotland	36
National	5

No decisions have yet been announced on the amount of European social fund support for 1990.

Mr. McLeish: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what information he has on whether some voluntary sector organisations may withdraw their interest in the European social fund programme as a result of his Department's failure to administer European social fund funding within the timetable.

Mr. Eggar: I have no information at this stage about any voluntary sector organisations withdrawing from the European social fund in 1990.

Mr. McLeish: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will give the amount of financial assistance currently being made available to voluntary sector organisations by the European social fund.

Mr. Eggar: Arrangements are currently being made to pay those outstanding voluntary organisation final claims for 1988, cleared by the Commission. A total of £1·826 million has been received to date this financial year for this purpose. Final claims for 1989 projects are in the process of being received and checked, before being forwarded to the Commission for clearance and payment authority. No decisions have yet been announced on the amount of European social fund (ESF) money to be allocated to any organisation in 1990.

Mr. McLeish: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will make a statement on the failure of his Department to provide application forms to voluntary sector organisations for European social fund funding for 1990 by the end of April.

Mr. Eggar: No projects can be considered until the finalised operational programmes have been approved by the Commission.

Mr. McLeish: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will give the total number of training places currently being supported in the voluntary sector, by grant aid from the European social fund.

Mr. Eggar: There have been no decisions announced regarding individual organisations' ESF support for 1990. Therefore, I canot say how many training places are currently being supported in the voluntary sector by the ESF.

National Council for Vocational Qualifications

Mr. Andrew Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will make a statement about the work of the National Council for Vocational Qualifications.

Mr. Eggar: The Government established the council to spearhead the drive to create a coherent and comprehensive system of vocational qualifications. Such a system is a key component of the training framework Britain needs to meet the employment demands of the 1990s.

In the three years the council has been operating it has many achievements to its credit. Work is now under way in many organisations, including over 150 groups of employers, to develop new vocational qualifications. It is now time to take stock of progress and to consider how relationships between all the various partners are developing.

With the agreement of the Secretaries of State for Education and Science, for Wales and for Northern Ireland, the Department of Employment will undertake a review of the council's progress and make a full report of its findings.

Safety Offences

Mr. Nellist: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will publish in the Official Report the text of his recent letter to the Magistrates Association on the need for higher fines for safety offences, as referred to in the May issue of the Employment Gazette, page 236; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Nicholls [holding answer 14 May 1990]: I will arrange for a copy of the letter and press release to be placed in the Library.

TRANSPORT

Air Traffic Control

Mr. Fearn: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what measures his Department has undertaken towards the introduction of a single air traffic control system for Europe; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. McLoughlin: My right hon. Friend has recently agreed, with 22 other European Transport Ministers, an action programme to increase capacity in Europe by integrating air traffic control systems and optimising the air traffic route network. This can be achieved more quickly and commits European states to intensify work on measures to handle safely the forecast growth in traffic to the end of the century. A copy of the report which sets out the programme unanimously agreed by European Transport Ministers has been placed in the Library.

Severn Bridge

Mr. Roy Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what is the cost of the repair and maintenance work on the Severn bridge up to the latest available date; and what is likely to be the total cost after it has been completed.

Mr. Atkins: The total cost of repair and maintenance work on the bridge up to the end of the last financial year is £60 million. The final cost of the repair and maintenance work is estimated at £74 million.

Mr. Roy Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when is the expected date for the completion of the repair and maintenance work on the Severn bridge.

Mr. Atkins: Repair work on the Severn bridge is now substantially complete. The resurfacing work is due to be completed by spring 1991. Routine maintenance work on the bridge will continue as normal.

Radioactive Substances

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many shipments and what quantity of plutonium nitrate were shipped from Dounreay to Barrow in 1989; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. McLoughlin: The Department does not collect detailed information of the kind requested. However, I understand that there were no shipments from Dounreay to Barrow in 1989 but two shipments took place from Dounreay to Workington.

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many trains carrying radioactive material arrived for off-loading at Dounreay in (a) 1987, (b) 1988 and (c) 1989; how many trains carrying radioactive material left Dounreay in (i) 1987, (ii) 1988 and (iii) 1989; and what were the origins or destination points of the journeys.

Mr. Freeman: The Department does not collect data of the kind requested. However, I understand that a number of minor shipments took place from Dounreay and consisted of minute quantities of radioactive materials of low activity.

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what is his policy in respect of methods of transport for returning plutonium to Japan after it has been processed at the THORP reprocessing plant; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Freeman: Plutonium will be returned to Japan in containers certified by my Department as fully complying with stringent international safety regulations which do not depend for their effectiveness on the mode of transport used.

The decision on the mode of transport, whether by air or by sea, will be for BNFL, whose arrangements will have to comply with the international regulations.

Crash Barriers

Mr. Fearn: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what research has been carried out by his Department to establish whether the erection of crash barriers on the edges of central reservations can increase the dangers of collisions between motor vehicles.

Mr. Atkins: In researching, testing and developing the various designs of safety fences currently deployed, particular attention was given to ensuring that errant vehicles are redirected in such a manner as to minimise any hazard to other vehicles.

Three research studies in the past 20 years by the Department's transport and road research laboratory have confirmed that, where such fencing is provided, the general reduction in the number and severity of casualties, particularly in crossover accidents, is substantial. A copy of the most recent report, entitled "Safety Fence Criteria for All-Purpose Dual Carriageway Roads", is in the Library.

Mr. Fearn: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what percentage of accidents on trunk roads where the central reservation is equipped with a crash barrier on the edge of such reservation can be ascribed to vehicles rebounding off such barriers into other vehicles.

Mr. Atkins: The information is not available in the precise form requested. The presence or absence of a central reserve safety fence at the site of an injury accident is not collected routinely but is specifically reported when a vehicle hits the fence.

The Secretary of State for Transport is highway authority for trunk roads in England and Wales. On these roads in 1988, there were 1,072 injury accidents in which a vehicle was reported to have collided with the central reserve safety fence. In 302 of these accidents the vehicle was further reported to have rebounded into the carriageway. In 155 of these 302, at least one other vehicle was involved in the accident but it is not possible to determine if any collision between vehicles took place before or after the collision with the central fence. The 155 accidents represent slightly more than half of 1 per cent. of injury accidents on trunk roads in England and Wales in 1988, and roughly 15 per cent. of accidents in which at least one vehicle hit a central reserve safety fence.

London City Airport

Mr. Fearn: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he has any plans to license London City airport to receive BAe 146s.

Mr. McLoughlin: The owners of London City airport have made two planning applications which would provide for the use of the airport by the BAe 146 and certain other aircraft which cannot use it at present. The applications have been called in by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for the Environment for his decision. A public inquiry into the applications, which will be held jointly with a public inquiry into proposed changes to the design of the east London river crossing, will commence on 3 July.

French Railways

Mr. Speed: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make an official visit to France to assess the TGV Atlantique train and the environmental protection measures undertaken by SNCF to protect local residents alongside the route.

Mr. Freeman: Other Ministers from my Department have already looked at French TGV services and the environmental protection measures on the TGV Atlantique route.

Traffic Area Offices

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list the local traffic area offices that he is proposing to close; and if any relocation of staff is planned.

Mr. Atkins: I expect to reach conclusions shortly on the future number and pattern of traffic area offices.

Oil Spillages

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will give details of the clean-up cost for the oil slick in the English Channel from the Rosebay; and how this cost will be apportioned between (a) his Department, (b) the oil producer, (c) the oil transporter and (d) local community charge payers.

Mr. McLoughlin: The Rosebay is registered in a state which is a signatory to the international convention on civil liability for oil pollution damage. The owners of the vessel are thus strictly liable for any pollution damage including prevention and clean-up costs. Whilst the owner of a tanker is entitled to limit liability based on the ship's tonnage, in this instance that liability is about £8 million and insurance or other financial security has to be maintained in that sum. This should be more than sufficient to meet all the clean-up costs likely to be incurred by Her Majesty's Government and local authorities in dealing with the oil slick. These cannot be assessed at such an early stage of an on-going operation, but they could well be in excess of £1 million.

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will give details of the location of all oil tanker spillages off the British coast in the last 30 years, the tankers involved and the amount of oil spilled.

Mr. McLoughlin: Details of incidents between 1970 and 1979 involving the Department's clean-up organisation are listed in table 9.2 of the eighth report of the Royal Commission on Environmental Pollution (Cmnd. 8358). The information from 1980 onwards is not readily available in the form requested. I will therefore write to the hon. Member giving details as soon as I can.

Flags of Convenience

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list those countries where ships are registered which are deemed by his Department to operate flags of convenience.

Mr. McLoughlin: The Department does not categorise the registers of other countries. The Government are however concerned that flag states live up to their international obligations. As one of the parties to the Paris memorandum on port state control, we more than meet our obligations to inspect foreign ships in British ports.

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many accidents at sea occurring in (a) British waters and (b) the English channel during the last 10 years have involved either (i) oil tankers or (ii) any other ship flying a flag of convenience; and if he will express this as a percentage of all accidents in both cases.

Mr. McLoughlin: The information is available for United Kingdom vessels only on a worldwide basis. The numbers of accidents involving United Kingdom tankers, expressed as a percentage of the total number of accidents involving United Kingdom vessels, in each of the last 10 years is:

Year	Number	Per cent.
1979	82	14
1980	74	14
1981	65	12
1982	67	11
1983	54	11
1984	56	11
1985	36	7
1986	39	10

Rail Accident Inquiry

Mr. Page: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport whether he proposes to order an inquiry into the rail accident between Chorleywood and Rickmansworth in the early hours of 16 May; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Freeman: This tragic accident caused the death of four men who were struck by a wagon while undertaking track maintenance work on the Metropolitan line of the London underground. My right hon. Friend has ordered an inquiry into the accident by the railway inspectorate under the Regulation of Railways Act 1871. The inspector's report on the inquiry will be published.

PCB Spillage

Mr. David Shaw: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what changes of his Department's procedures he has made following his investigation into the PCB spillage at the 1974 channel tunnel workings at Shakespeare cliff.

Mr. Parkinson: My Department arranged for a full internal investigation into the preparation and supervision of the contract made in 1978 for removing a boring machine from the 1974 channel tunnel workings at Shakespeare cliff and into how officers of the Department and other Departments learnt about and dealt with the spillage of polychlorinated biphenyls from the machine. The investigation revealed shortcomings in the contractual arrangements and in the action taken by the Department between 1979 and 1985 to deal with the spillage.

Although it is exceptional for the Department to be involved in the disposal of specialised machinery of this kind, steps are being taken to strengthen the Department's procedures to remove the risk of such shortcomings being repeated. Officers concerned with contracts involving purchase or disposals involving hazardous chemicals are being cautioned on the need to vet the suitability of contractors from that standpoint and to ensure that terms of contracts provide safeguards against accidents or mishandling. The Department has tightened relevant aspects of its internal personnel supervision, reporting and training procedures.

A19

Mr. Devlin: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make a statement about the further lane closures on the A19 viaducts at Portrack and Leven valley which commenced on 10 May.

Mr. Atkins: The works on the A19 Tees viaduct involve operations which could not be completed during the winter period as part of the main refurbishment scheme. Primarily the work involved is in painting the outer faces of steel plate girders and repaired sections of the bridge parapets, which requires warmer weather conditions. The nearside lane closures will continue until the end of June. They are not expected to cause significant delays to traffic.

The works to Leven valley viaduct are similar and are expected to be completed shortly.

Whaley Bridge Bypass

Mr. Tony Lloyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make a statement on the reports by Allol and Lomax, consulting engineers, into the performance of the consulting engineers employed on the Chapel-en-le-Frith/Whaley Bridge bypass; and if he will place a copy in the Library.

Mr. Atkins: The report is not yet completed. Phase (iii) of the geotechnical investigation is in hand and phase (iv) may be necessary, depending on the outcome of phase (iii). When the full report is available, consideration will be given to placing a copy in the Library.

Level Crossings

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what is the number of gated railway crossings with (a) automatic barriers and (b) controlled barriers and the number of (i) reported accidents and (ii) fatal accidents for each year from 1981 to the latest available date.

Mr. Freeman: Level crossings may be provided with gates, which are manually operated, or with barriers which are either manually operated, or operated automatically by an approaching train. There are no gated crossings with automatic barriers. The table shows the number of level crossings with (a) manned gates (MG), (b) manually operated barriers (MCB), (c) manually operated barriers with CCTV surveillance (MCB/CCTV), (d) automatic half barriers (AHB) and (e) automatic half barriers with local monitoring (ABCL), in operation in the period 1981 to 1988. The table also shows total numbers of accidents and numbers of fatalities included in those totals, during the same period.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Battery Egg Production

13. Mr. McAvoy: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what assessment he has made of the welfare implications of battery egg production systems.

Mr. Maclean: The Government have commissioned extensive research into the welfare implications of battery production and other egg production systems. The EC battery hens directive is to be reviewed by the European Commission by the end of 1992 and I shall be seeking a number of welfare improvements including an increase in the minimum space allowance for caged birds.

26. Mr. Dunnachie: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food when he expects to announce modifications to the regulations regarding battery egg production to improve the welfare of the laying hens.

Mr. Maclean: I plan to introduce amendments to the Welfare of Battery Hens Regulations 1987 later this year which will include improvements to the design of cage openings. The EC Commission is required by the battery hens directive to review current systems for the keeping of laying hens and to bring forward any appropriate proposals for change by the end of 1992.

Green Pound

15. Mr. David Shaw: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what effect the announcement of the green pound devaluation will have on farm incomes in 1990-91.

Mr. Gummer: As I have indicated, the decisions on farm prices for 1990-91 should add at least £500 million to farmers' returns in the United Kingdom in a full year. Most of this increase is due to the devaluations agreed for the green pound.

16. Mr. David Davis: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food by how much the gross income of a farmer growing 200 acres of wheat at 3 tonnes per acre will increase as a result of the green pound devaluation.

41. Mr. Moss: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what effect he estimates will arise from the green pound devaluation for cereals.

Mr. Gummer: The recently agreed green pound devaluation, taken in isolation, will increase cereal support prices in the United Kingdom by 10·7 per cent. at the start of the next marketing year. What this means for the income of the individual farmer will, of course, depend upon a number of factors. Prices received by producers are dependent, for example, on local supply and demand and the size and quality of the harvest, as well as the level of support prices.

28. Mr. Robert G. Hughes: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what effect the green pound devaluation will have on beef producers.

Mr Gummer: The Agriculture Council agreed a devaluation of the green pound for beef to take effect on 14 May. It will benefit beef producers in a number of ways. It will raise the beef special premium from £29·32 to £31·81; it will increase support from intervention; and, by reducing monetary compensatory amounts by over £40 for an average beast, it will reduce the payment on beef imports and help to stimulate exports. These measures should contribute to producers' returns, and improve price in the beef market.

20. Mr. David Nicholson: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food by what date green pound monetary gaps will be eliminated.

Mr. Gummer: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply which I gave earlier today to my hon. Friend the Member for Devon, North (Mr. Speller).

Bass Nursery Areas

17. Mr. Adley: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement about proposed bass nursery areas.

Mr. Curry: Our plans to establish 34 nursery areas in coastal waters to protect stocks of juvenile bass were announced on 19 April at column 980. In these areas fishing for bass from any vessel will be prohibited for all or part of the year. Regulations, to be made under section 5 of the Sea Fish Conservation Act 1967, will be laid before the House shortly.

Intervention Board

18. Mr. Clelland: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what time scale he envisages for the transfer of posts from the intervention board in Reading to Newcastle upon Tyne.

Mr. Curry: The transfer of the 350 posts will be spread over the coming two years. The recruitment process will begin shortly when advertisements for clerical staff appear in local papers.

Scottish Fishing Industry

19. Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what representations he has received from Scottish west coast fishermen concerning catch limits; and what action he proposes to take.

Mr. Curry: Fisheries departments issued a consultation paper on 26 March seeking an industry-wide view on additional conservation measures off the west coast of Scotland. Comments have been received from Scottish west coast fishermen and we are considering their views together with those of other interested parties.

24. Mr. Robert Hughes: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food when he last met representatives of the Scottish Fishermen's Association to discuss quotas.

Mr. Curry: I last discussed quotas with representatives of the Scottish fishing industry at the December Fisheries Council. My right hon. and learned Friend the Secretary of State for Scotland and my noble Friend the Minister of State, Scottish Office, with whom I am in close touch, are in frequent contact with Scottish fishing industry organisations.

National Consumer Council

21. Mr. Jim Marshall: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food when he last met the National Consumer Council to discuss consumer matters.

Mr. Maclean: On 3 April 1990, representatives of the National Consumer Council attended the first of the periodic meetings set up by my right hon. Friend with representatives of consumer organisations.

Cereal Set-aside Schemes

22. Mr. Strang: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what was the total sum of money payable to farmers with cereal set-aside schemes in the United Kingdom in 1989; and what estimate he has made of the amount likely to be paid in the current year.

Mr. Curry: A total of £9·8 million was paid in the financial year 1989-90 to participants in the first year of the set-aside scheme and a further £22 million has been allocated in the 1990-91 financial year in respect of participants in the second year of the scheme.

Northumberland Fishing Industry

23. Mr. Beith: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement on the present state of the Northumberland fishing industry.

Mr. Curry: The Northumberland industry involves a wide range of stocks including shellfish, salmon and white fish such as cod, haddock and whiting. Catch levels are down this year because of bad weather and because of some variations in stock levels. But prices are holding up well.

Organic Farmers

25. Mr. Rogers: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what representations he has received about assistance for organic farmers.

Mr. Maclean: I have received a number of representations. In response I have pointed out that my Department is grant-aiding the United Kingdom register of organic food standards with £60,000 per annum. Last year it supported research directly related to organic farming amounting to £198,000 and other research of assistance to organic farmers amounting to £892,000. In addition last year it commissioned a study of the economics of the production and marketing of organically grown farm produce in Great Britain. Further support is available in the form of advice from the Agricultural Development and Advisory Service. Assistance is given to the formation of co-operatives for organically grown produce under the agricultural and horticultural co-operation schemes. Payments under the fallow options of the set-aside scheme can help farmers with the cost of converting to organic production. Grants under the farm and conservation grant scheme can go towards investment in organic production, and I intend shortly to issue a consultation document on a pilot whole farm organic extensification scheme under the EC extensification scheme.

Food Labelling

27. Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement about the labelling of food for welfare criteria.

Mr. Maclean: I have specifically asked the Food Advisory Committee, as part of its current comprehensive review of food labelling, to address the question of whether particular methods of rearing or slaughtering animals should be indicated on food labels. The views of all interested parties have been sought and the committee hopes to report to Ministers with recommendations by the end of the year.

National Farmers Union

29. Dr. Marek: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food when he last met the National Farmers Union to discuss farming.

Mr. Gummer: I meet representatives of the National Farmers Union frequently to discuss agricultural matters. At the most recent such meeting, on 27 April, discussion centred on the outcome of the price-fixing negotiations.

State Veterinary Service

30. Mr. Gareth Wardell: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement about the future of the state veterinary service.

Mr. Maclean: I believe that the state veterinary service will continue to play a vital role in the fields of animal and public health.

EC Rural Policy

31. Mr. Andy Stewart: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how much the European Community Commission is putting into its rural world policy; and what share his Department will have to bear.

Mr. Gummer: The "Rural World" document published in 1988 was an analysis of rural problems and a series of ideas for overcoming them. It made no specific proposals and no expenditure was budgeted for at that time. The EC Commission has recently announced that 400 mecu (about £280 million) has been earmarked to deal with problems of rural development but has not yet made any proposals on how this money will be spent.

Following the reform of the structural funds in 1988, 38 becu (£27 billion) was allocated over the period 1989 to 1993 for expenditure in objective 1 areas (which are the least developed areas in the Community and include substantial rural areas). In addition, 2·6 becu (£1·8 billion) has been allocated to objective 5(b) areas (which are other rural areas in need of development). My Department does not contribute to the funding of investments under these programmes.

British Veterinary Association

32. Mr. John P. Smith: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food when he last met the British Veterinary Association to discuss matters within its responsibilities.

Mr. Maclean: I attended a working lunch with the BVA on 28 February; another is being arranged. My officials have regular discussions with the association on many issues and my right hon. Friend the Minister was pleased to be able to speak on 5 April 1990 to the annual general meeting of the Pig Veterinary Society, which is a constituent body of the BVA.

Farm Animal Welfare

33. Mr. Bellingham: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what progress he is making in gaining Europe-wide support for his proposals on farm animal welfare.

Mr. Maclean: Discussions are continuing on Commission proposals for the protection of calves and pigs. The Commission has also tabled proposals on protection of animals in transport and is preparing proposals in other areas of animal welfare. We will continue to take every opportunity to press for high standards of animal husbandry throughout the Community.

43. Mr. Flynn: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food when he expects to lay the parliamentary orders necessary to implement recent recommendations of the Farm Animal Welfare Council.

Mr. Maclean: The Farm Animal Welfare Council has recently published reports on the handling and transport of poultry and on the enforcement of animal welfare legislation. My Department is currently seeking views from interested organisations on these recommendations and the Government's response to them will be published when all comments have been carefully considered.

Beef Industry

34. Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement on the present state of the beef industry.

Mr. Curry: The beef breeding herd is at its highest level for a decade. Last year there was a rise of 9 per cent. over 1988. The devaluation of the green pound agreed in the price fixing will further assist the industry by increasing the value of the beef special premium and the support provided by intervention; and, through lower monetary compensatory amounts, beef exports should be stimulated and the impact of imports on the market reduced.

Farm Investment

35. Mr. Nicholas Bennett: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what information he has as to farm investment in 1989.

Mr. Gummer: The value of new investment in the United Kingdom agricultural industry is estimated to have been about £1,000 million in 1989.

Food From Britain

36. Mr. Favell: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what steps he is taking to improve the performance of Food From Britain.

Mr. Gummer: Earlier this year I announced an extension, by two years to March 1993, of the Government contribution to the funding of Food From Britain. On 30 April I announced the appointment of Paul Judge as the new chairman of Food From Britain. I am confident that he will continue the good work done by his predecessor, Walter Goldsmith. It is now for the industry to work together with Food From Britain to continue to improve the marketing of British food and drink and, in particular, to gear itself up to meet the challenges and opportunities of the single European market.

Inshore Fishing Industry

37. Mr. Campbell-Savours: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what recent discussions he has had on aids to the inshore fishing industry.

Mr. Curry: The Minister and I are in regular contact with fisheries organisations about a wide range of issues affecting the inshore fleet.

British Sausages

38. Mr. Cox: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will oppose any action that would lead to the banning of the British sausage by the EEC.

Mr. Maclean: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Bury, North (Mr. Burt) on 15 May 1990 at column 394.

Atrazine

39. Mr. Colvin: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will introduce controls over the use of the herbicide atrazine; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Maclean: The herbicide atrazine is subject to the strict controls on all pesticides introduced in the Food and Environment Protection Act 1985. It is on the Government's red list of substances whose inputs to the aquatic environment must be reduced substantially.

The Advisory Committee on Pesticides is conducting a review of all pesticides registered before 1981, and intends to give atrazine a high priority.

Butter

40. Mr. Simon Coombs: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what percentage of butter consumed in the United Kingdom originates in (a) the United Kingdom, (b) other European Community countries, (c) New Zealand and (d) elsewhere in the world.

Mr. Curry: The following are provisional estimates for 1989:

Origin of butter consumed in the United Kingdom

	Per cent.
(a) United Kingdom	55·6
(b) New Zealand	24·2
(c) Elsewhere in the world	20·2

Sheep Industry

42. Mr. Livsey: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement on the current state of the sheep industry.

Mr. Curry: Prices for finished lamb have been strong so far this year, although they are now falling back in line with the normal seasonal pattern. Exports remain well up on the corresponding period in 1989 as our industry continues to take advantage of the export opportunities offered by the reformed EC sheepmeat regime.

Meat Products

44. Mr. Gill: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what representations he has received regarding European Community draft regulations for fresh meat and meat products.

Mr. Maclean: We are consulting all interests concerned about the EC proposals for fresh meat and meat products in the single market. The views we have received indicate a wide degree of support for the principle of a single standard for all meat plants after 1992. However, the Commission's proposals contain some unnecessary restrictions on the composition of some products such as minced meat, which the Government will continue to resist firmly.

Hill Farmers

45. Mr. Amos: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will list the measures which he has taken in the last year to assist hill farmers in the less-favoured areas; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Gummer: My response to my hon. Friend's question on 19 April listed the ongoing schemes to assist farmers in the less-favoured areas. In July 1989 the Government submitted an application to the EC Commission for an extension of those areas. We await a formal response.

Soil Association

46. Mr. Alan W. Williams: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food when he last met representatives of the Soil Association to discuss matters within its responsibilities.

Mr. Maclean: On 30 April 1990.

Crustaceans, Devon

47. Mr. Steen: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what steps he is taking to protect the crustacean stocks off the south Devon coast.

Mr. Curry: Crab and lobster stocks are already subject to minimum landing size regulations. The Undersized Crabs (Variation) Order 1989 prescribes a minimum size of 160 mm for male, and 140 mm for female crabs landed in south Devon, and Council regulation (EEC) No. 3094/86 prescribes a minimum carapace length of 85 mm for lobsters landed throughout our waters.

Milk Marketing Boards

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food whether he has any proposals for changes in the role and responsibilities of the five milk marketing boards in the context of the European Community.

Mr. Curry: I have repeatedly made clear my views that our milk marketing arrangements need to be more flexible and market-oriented.

The current pricing and allocation arrangements do not serve our industry well in meeting the increasing competition within the Community, but it is for the industry, not Government, to identify the changes needed. Therefore, I am not making proposals but am encouraging the Milk Marketing Board and the Dairy Trade Federation to come forward with their own proposals. I will do all I can to assist them.

Fishing Industry

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food when he last met members of the National Federation of Fishermen's Organisations to discuss quotas.

Mr. Curry: I last met representatives of the National Federation of Fishermen's Organisations during my visit to Hastings on 14 May. A number of issues were discussed of importance to fishermen locally and nationally including United Kingdom quotas and their management.

Poultry Industry

Mr. Geraint Howells: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement on the present state of the poultry industry.

Mr. Curry: The market for poultrymeat remains firm and stable. Packer to producer prices for eggs are well above the levels for this time last year.

Agricultural Research and Development

51. Mr. Sean Hughes: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement about the future of agricultural research and development.

Mr. Gummer: I believe agricultural research and development will continue to make a strong and important contribution in the future. My Department is committed to R and D as a means of stimulating technological development in the agricultural industry, and I have encouraged the industry to invest more in its own future. In addition we support work which is aimed at issues of public interest such as food safety, animal welfare and environmental protection.

Irradiated Food

52. Mr. O'Brien: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what arrangements are being made to ensure customers have a choice in relation to the purchase of irradiated food; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Gummer: I have already stated several times that we intend that consumers will be given clear information indicating whether foodstuffs have been irradiated. The EC food labelling directive has been amended to provide for the appropriate labelling of prepacked foodstuffs. I propose to introduce requirements extending the provisions to non-prepacked foodstuffs and food sold through catering outlets. I shall be consulting interested parties on my proposals in due course.

Fish Licensing

Mr. Harris: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food when he intends to issue a consultation paper about further changes to the fish licensing arrangements.

Mr. Curry: We will be circulating within the next few days to fishing industry organisations a consultation document on Government proposals for further changes to the United Kingdom's licensing system for fishing vessels, which would allow fishermen to acquire increased fishing opportunities without necessarily increasing their fishing capacity. Comments are required by 31 July. Subject to the views expressed, it is hoped to introduce the new arrangements in 1991. Copies of the consultation document have been placed in the Library of the House.

Bovine Somatotropin

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food whether milk collected from cows injected with bovine somatotropin is still on sale to the public; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Maclean: Yes. The Veterinary Products Committee has confirmed its advice that there is no risk to consumers.

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a further statement on the animal welfare implications of bovine somatotropin.

Mr. Maclean: We attach great importance to animal safety and welfare and I know that the Veterinary Products Committee is examining in detail the short and long-term welfare implications of BST with the help of data from the current field trials.

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what research has been undertaken to establish differences in molecular structure between naturally occurring and genetically engineered bovine somatotropin; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Maclean: Among the data required from companies in support of their applications for ATCs and PLs are the results of their research to establish the molecular structure of their BST material and an account of any differences from natural versions of BST.

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will outline the Department's policy in respect of bovine somatotropin.

Mr. Maclean: The Department's policy has not changed: no licence for any BST product shall be issued until an applicant company satisfies independent experts that it meets stringent criteria of safety, quality and efficacy as required by the Medicines Act.

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a further statement on the residue levels in milk from cows injected with bovine somatotropin.

Mr. Maclean: The Veterinary Products Committee has concluded that BST levels in milk from cows injected with BST fall within the normal range of variability.

Bovine Spongiform Encephalopathy

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food (1) whether he will now carry out random tests for bovine spongiform encephalopathy on slaughtered cattle heads; and if he will make a statement;

(2) whether he will now stop feeding pigs and other animals cattle offal to prevent the spread of bovine spongiform encephalopathy; and if he will make a statement;

(3) whether he will now impose a statutory ban on the use of sheep and cattle offal in pet food; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Gummer: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given to the hon. Member for Caerphilly (Mr. Davies) on 16 May.

Spongiform Encephalopathy

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make available to Dr. Natrang of the public health laboratory at Newcastle brain tissues from the cat recently found to have spongiform encephalopathy for further diagnostic analysis.

Mr. Gummer: No. Samples from this cat were referred to the central veterinary laboratory by Bristol veterinary school for a definitive diagnosis.

Waste Disposal

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food why the 1987 licence to dump explosives from ICI's Nobel division in the Clyde estuary was excluded from the 1989 disposal of waste at sea report; what other licences granted in respect of dumping at sea have been excluded from the report; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Curry: Disposal at sea in Scottish waters is a matter for my right hon. and learned Friend the Secretary of State for Scotland. The report published in 1989 covered dumping of wastes at sea throughout Great Britain in 1986 and 1987 and includes all licences issued for that purpose for England and Wales under part II of the Food and Environment Protection Act 1985. In covering licensed dumping at sea it did not extend to operations exempt from licensing under the Deposits in the Sea (Exemptions) Order 1985 (SI 1985 No. 1699), nor to materials dumped by the Ministry of Defence which have Crown exemption from licensing.

The report was not intended to deal with other activities controlled by licensing under part II of the Act, including construction works below mean high water, use of tracers in research, application of biocides and burial at sea.

Written Answers to Questions

EDUCATION AND SCIENCE

Inner London Education Authority

Mr. Cartwright: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science who has responsibility for paying arrears of pay to former employees of ILEA whose contracts of employment were not taken over by the successor boroughs.

Mrs. Rumbold: The London residuary body has that responsibility for all ex-ILEA employees who were not transferred by statutory order to the employment of the inner London councils.

Special Needs Education (Training Grants)

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science whether he will extend the in-service support from the local education authority training grants scheme for special support assistants, nursery nurses and other carers involved in providing special needs education.

Mr. Alan Howarth: The Government have no plans to extend the scheme specifically to cover these or other groups.

Zidovudine

Mr. Alfred Morris: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science if, pursuant to the reply to the right hon. Member for Manchester, Wythenshawe, 15 December 1989, Official Report, column 832, he will make a further statement on the progress of the Medical Research Council/INSERM trial of zidovudine.

Mr. Jackson: I understand from the Medical Research Council that the trial is continuing satisfactorily and that there is no significant information to add to that provided in my previous reply of 15 December 1989.

Mr. Alfred Morris: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will update the figures of participants in the Medical Research Council/INSERM trial of zidovudine given in reply to the right hon. Member for Manchester, Wythenshawe, on 15 December 1989, Official Report, column 832.

Mr. Jackson: The number of participants enrolled in the Medical Research Council/INSERM trial of zidovudine up to 15 May was 772 in the United Kingdom and 727 in France.

Grant-maintained Schools

Mr. Oppenheim: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what is the total of the capital allocations to grant-maintained schools in 1990-91.

Mrs. Rumbold: On 26 January I announced allocations of capital grant to grant-maintained schools totalling £6·6 million for the financial year 1990-91, at columns 900-2. I said that a further sum of up to £1·9 million was available for grant-maintained schools to meet commitments and contingencies. A total of about £8 million has now been allocated.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Electoral Rights

Mr. David Nicholson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department which Commonwealth countries and colonies enjoy reciprocal arrangements by which their citizens resident in the United Kingdom enjoy the right to vote in United Kingdom elections; and what is his estimate of the number of such people who had that right at the time of the 1987 general election.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Commonwealth citizens resident in the United Kingdom, who are not otherwise disqualified, are eligible to register as electors and vote at elections here. The table lists those Commonwealth countries and dependent territories which allow British citizens, subject to residency qualifications, to register as electors. Approximately half a million Commonwealth citizens living in the United Kingdom were eligible to vote at the 1987 general election. Of these, about 150,000 were from countries which allow reciprocal voting rights to British citizens.

Commonwealth Countries and United Kingdom Dependent Territories which allow voting rights to British citizens

Anguilla	Montserrat
Antigua and Barbuda	Mauritius
Barbados	New Zealand
Belize	Pitcairn
Dominica	St. Helene
Falkland Islands	St. Kitts and Nevis
Gibraltar	St. Lucia
Grenada	St. Vincent
Guyana	Sierre Leone
Hong Kong	Trinidad and Tobago
Jamaica	Tristan da Cunha

Passports

Mr. Higgins: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department why it was decided that British passports should no longer specify residence, height and distinguishing marks.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: These details, which are no longer considered to be essential for identification of the passport holder, were deleted in the interests of efficiency, and to meet the requirements of the international standard for machine-readable passports.

New Hall Prison

Mrs. Ann Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the categories of prisoners to be accepted by New Hall prison when the present extension is complete.

Mr. Mellor: It is planned that Her Majesty's prison and young offender institution New Hall should continue to hold both remand and sentenced female prisoners who are required to be kept in closed conditions, with the exception of those classified as category A (prisoners requiring the highest level of security).

Immigration

Mr. Marlow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many arriving persons at United Kingdom points of entry have been allowed to go to temporary addresses while their cases have been considered in each of the last five years and the current year to date; and, in each year, how many have absconded.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: The available information is given in the table:

Number of passengers (a) granted temporary admission and (b) who absconded

Year	Number of passengers granted temporary admission			Total number of passengers who absconded[1]
	Pending further examination	After being refused entry	Total
1985	[2]6,746	[2]6,595	[3]—	388
1986	12,414	10,757	[3]—	1,161
1987	[3]—	[3]—	7,517	821
1988	[3]—	[3]—	8,692	401
1989	[3]—	[3]—	13,744	475
Year ending 31 March 1990	[3]—	[3]—	14,870	488

[1] Includes passengers who absconded from the control, temporary admission and detention.
[2] For April to December. Comprehensive data are not available for the first three months of 1985.
[3] Not available.

The temporary admission figures for 1985 and 1986 were on a different basis from those for later years. Figures for 1985 and 1986 separately identified those granted temporary admission pending further examination, from those granted temporary admission after being refused entry, with the result that those granted temporary admission under both circumstances were counted twice. In subsequent years those granted temporary admission under both circumstances have been counted once only.

Prison Population

Mr. Lawrence: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what are his most recent figures for the movement in the overall prison population over the last 12 month period.

Mr. Mellor: On Friday 11 May the total prisoner population including those in police cells was 45,671. This compares with 49,147 at the same time last year.

Suicide

Mr. Terry Davies To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) how many attempted suicides have taken place in Birmingham prison in each of the last five years;

(2) if he will provide a month by month breakdown of the number of attempted suicides by inmates in Birmingham prison in 1989.

Mr. Mellor: The number of inmates who were recorded as having attempted suicide at Birmingham prison in 1987 was 25; in 1988, 13; and in 1989, 24. No information is available for earlier years. A month-by-month breakdown of the figure for 1989 is given in the table:

Number of inmates recorded as having attempted suicide at HM Prison Birmingham in 1989

	Numbers
January	2
February	2
March	4
April	3
May	—
June	2
July	2

Magistrates

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department to what extent race-awareness training is a part of the current training procedure for magistrates.

The Attorney-General: I have been asked to reply.

The Judicial Studies Board is responsible for supervising the training of the lay magistracy, which is carried out locally. The revised syllabus set out in the "Handbook For The Training of Magistrates", published by the board earlier this year and approved by the Lord Chancellor, requires newly appointed magistrates to be given instruction in "awareness of the different ethnic, cultural and religious backgrounds of those with whom they may have to deal as defendants or witnesses".

In addition, "Ethnic Minority Cultures" is an approved subject for inclusion in further training for magistrates.

Mr. Kemel Karaca

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will expedite the date for the appeal of Mr. Kemel Karaca, formerly of Crewe, to enter the United Kingdom.

Mr. Sainsbury: I have been asked to reply. In accordance with the guidelines on the handling of representations by Members of Parliament in immigration cases, issued to Members on 14 December 1988, I have referred the question to the correspondence unit of the migration and visa department of the Foreign and Commonwealth Office. The hon. Member will receive a reply from the unit as soon as possible.

TRANSPORT

Channel Tunnel

Mr. French: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport whether he has agreed British Rail's recent proposals for further investment connected with channel tunnel passenger rail services.

Mr. Parkinson: I am pleased to announce my approval of British Rail's proposals for investment of £174·2 million to build an international passenger terminal at Waterloo and a train depot at Willesden for maintaining international trains. These are major items in British Rail's plans to spend over £1 billion so that a full international passenger and freight service can begin on the day that the channel tunnel opens.

Sir John Stanley: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport whether it remains his policy that British Rail's commuter services in peak hours should not be cut back to accommodate channel tunnel international passenger and freight trains when the channel tunnel opens in 1993.

Mr. Freeman: I understand that British Rail stands by its assurance given to Parliament during the passage of the Channel Tunnel Act that existing services would not be curtailed by the introduction of channel tunnel rail services.

Search and Rescue Service

Mr. Speller: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport whether any hoax telephone call or message was received on Wednesday 16 August 1989 which interfered with the search and rescue service in the Bristol channel area.

Mr. McLoughlin: Nationally some 30 per cent. of calls received by the coastguard are false alarms and a further 3 per cent. are "hoaxes", so officers must be alert to this possibility. However, there were no hoax calls or messages which interfered with search and rescue operation in the Swansea coastguard district on 16 August 1989.

London Taxi Fares

Mr. Bendall: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport whether he will make a statement about London taxi fares.

Mr. Freeman: The Secretary of State has made an order increasing London taxi fares by about 9·2 per cent. on average with effect from Friday 8 June 1990. The new tariff will incorporate a minimum fare of £1·00 (including an unchanged hire charge of 40p) for the first 1,021·5 yd or 3 minutes 36 seconds. The rate will then be 20p for every 340·5 yd or 1 minute 12 seconds up to 6 miles and 20p for each 227 yd or 48 seconds thereafter.

British Rail Freight

Mr. Key: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make a statement about investment in British Rail's deepsea container freight business.

Mr. Freeman: I am pleased to announce that I have given approval to the Board's proposal to invest in 700 new container-carrying wagons for BR's deepsea container business at a cost of some £40 million. This will enable British Rail to offer its customers a more reliable service and to improve the financial performance of this part of its freight business.

HEALTH

Nurses (Training)

Mr. Robin Cook: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many trainees have entered nursing for a state registered nurse or registered general nurse course in England for each of the last five years.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: The information is given in the table:

Numbers of entrants to registered general nurse training in England—years ended 31 March 1985 to 1989

	Number
1985	14,903
1986	14,208
1987	14,002
1988	13,581
1989	14,473

Source: Statistics provided by the English National Board for Nursing, Midwifery and Health Visiting.

Sight Tests

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what information he has on the average cost of private sight tests.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: The price of a private sight test is a matter for individual opticians. It is up to them to use their best commercial judgment and set their prices accordingly.

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many people annually he expects to qualify for help with the cost of a private sight test on the grounds of low income.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: This information is not available.

Community Care

Mr. Hannam: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps he is taking to ensure that local authorities are required to allow disabled people to give their views about their community care needs during the assessment procedure and are required to produce a written statement of the outcome of the assessment procedure if requested by the disabled person.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: Our White Paper "Caring for People" said that assessments should take account of the wishes of the individual. This includes disabled people. In our guidance to local authorities on assessment procedures we intend to emphasise the importance of involving the individual user in the assessment. We also intend to make it clear that decisions should be conveyed in writing when requested by the person concerned.

Hormone Replacement Therapy

Mrs. Gorman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what recent representations he has received regarding the effects of hormone replacement therapy in connection with osteoporosis.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply I gave her on 19 March at column 460. Since then we have received representations about osteoporosis and hormone replacement therapy from the all-party parliamentary group for pensioners on behalf of the National Federation of Women's Institutes and from hon. Members on behalf of the National Osteoporosis Society. I shall also be meeting the National Osteoporosis Society shortly to discuss these matters.

Alcohol Services

Mr. Tom Clarke: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether the allocation of £3·83 million for the development of alcohol services, announced by Baroness Hooper, includes an amount for Scotland; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Dorrell: No. The sum to which the hon. Member refers has been allocated to Alcohol Concern for the development of alcohol services in England.

Health Benefit Scheme

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) how many people claimed health benefits in 1989-90 through their automatic entitlement as claimants of income support or family credit; how many claimed help as a result of the low income scheme: and if he will estimate how many people would be able to claim in 1990-91 if the passport was extended to cover housing benefit and community charge benefit;

(2) what is the rate of take-up of health benefits for (a) claimants with automatic entitlement and (b) claimants entitled to help under the low income scheme.

Mr. Dorrell: Information concerning help with NHS charges and hospital travel costs for people receiving income support or family credit or who qualify for help on low income grounds is derived from the number of occasions help is provided which does not always identify the numbers of individual patients who have benefited. Nor is it possible to estimate how many people would be able to claim health benefits if the passport was extended to cover housing benefit and community charge benefit because some of them will already qualify for health benefits on other grounds.

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health for every £ sterling of expenditure on the agency benefits low income scheme for help with costs of glasses, wigs and fabric supports, prescriptions, dental charge and hospital travel costs, how much is spent on administering the scheme.

Mr. Dorrell: Information in the form requested is not available.

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is the average time taken to process a claim for help under the low income scheme for health benefits; how it differs between the different benefits; and what is the average time taken to process a claim from a claimant with automatic entitlement to health benefits.

Mr. Dorrell: The Department of Social Security administers the low income scheme for health benefits and help with hospital travel costs on behalf of the Department of Health. It has advised that in the year ending 30 April 1990 around 86 per cent. of all claims received were cleared within 10 working days.

Persons who have automatic entitlement to help with those benefits and those who have established their entitlement under the low income scheme obtain that help simply by declaring that entitlement when requiring those benefits.

Cancer

Mr. O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what form of report he receives from the Yorkshire regional cancer registry.

Mr. Dorrell: The Yorkshire regional cancer registry submits records of newly diagnosed cases of cancer for its region to the Office of Population Censuses and Surveys (OPCS) in the form of a magnetic tape once the data for a particular year are judged to be complete. The records contain information which enables OPCS to maintain its cancer surveillance system and to produce the national annual reference volumes on cancer incidence.

General Practitioner Beds

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is his Department's policy towards the provision of general practitioner beds as a move towards more comprehensive community care, respite care, and recuperation in the community.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: Health authorities are required to draw up plans for the provision of health care services to the population for whom they are responsible. The provision of general practitioner beds is an option we would expect them to consider as part of this process.

Resource Management Programme

Mr. O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what proportion of the money made available by his Department for the resource management programme has been allocated to (a) St. James hospital, Leeds, (b) Pontefract general infirmary and (c) Pinderfields hospital, Wakefield.

Mr. Dorrell: Since March 1989 Yorkshire regional health authority has been allocated nearly £7 million for the resource management programme. In March 1989 nine hospitals in the Yorkshire region, including St. James' hospital, Leeds and Pontefract general infirmary, were selected to prepare and implement the resource management programme. In January 1990 a further five hospitals, including Pinderfields general hospital, were selected to prepare and implement the programme in 1990-91. Although the financial allocation made to Yorkshire regional health authority takes account of the number of its designated hospital sites it is for the regional health authority to decide how these additional funds are allocated to the sites.

Psychiatric Patients

Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what information he has on the number of patients from psychiatric institutions who were released into the community who have been readmitted to psychiatric institutions; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Dorrell: Most readmissions to mental illness hospitals are of short duration and are part of a planned programme of care. No information is available centrally on emergency readmissions of long-stay patients released into the community.

The total number of readmissions to mental illness hospitals and units in England is set out in the table:

Year	Numbers
1979	120,073
1980	127,184
1981	132,893
1982	133,475
1983	138,080
1984	138,431
1985	146,895
1986	145,578

Source: Mental Health Inquiry.
Note: These figures represent in-patients readmitted to a psychiatric hospital subsequent to a previous admission to that, or another, psychiatric hospital, although not necessarily in the same year. The number of readmissions reported each year do not correspond to individual patients since the same patient can be readmitted more than once during the year.

Bellwin Scheme

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will give the dates of, and the events which led to, the activation of the Bellwin scheme since 1 April 1989.

Mr. Portillo: The Bellwin scheme has been activated in England on the following occasions since 1 April 1989:

Activation	Scope	Event	Date
25 January 1990	England	Storms	25 January 1990
26 January 1990	England	Storms	16-17 December 1989
5 February 1990	Severn Valley	Flooding	late January 1990
1 May 1990	Maidenhead	Flooding	early February 1990
1 May 1990	England	Storms	26-28 February 1990

Earth Tremors

Dr. Marek: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what information he has on trends in the incidence of earth tremors and earthquakes in the United Kingdom; and whether any research has been done on a possible relationship with the abstraction of oil and gas in the North sea.

Mr. Moynihan: Earthquakes in the United Kingdom are monitored by the British geological survey (BGS) using a network of seismometers which is being upgraded at present under contracts placed by a number of organisations, including my Department. Historical events and recent monitoring records, which are published by the BGS, have not yet established any trends towards changes in patterns of seismic activity.

There is frequent seismic activity associated with natural geological structures beneath parts of the North sea. However, there is no evidence for any relationship between the abstraction of oil and gas in the North sea and earthquake activity although, for some small earthquakes, the possibility cannot be discounted.

Local Government Finance

Mr. Hayward: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will review the closing date for claims of entitlement to rebates and transitional relief as it relates to the community charge.

Mr. Leadbitter: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will bring forward proposals on claims for rebates and relief in respect of the community charge to allow a longer time scale for claims to be lodged.

Mr. Chope: The Government have no plans to review the relevant provisions. For community charge benefit, claims may be backdated by up to 56 days after the issue of a community charge bill or longer where there is good cause for a delayed application. Rates-related transitional relief is calculated automatically by authorities and no application is required. The special form of transitional relief for certain pensioners and disabled people requires application which can be made at any time up to 1 October 1990 or such later date as a charging authority allows and all adjustments are made with effect from 1 April 1990.

Mr. Leadbitter: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will consider in his forthcoming review of proposals for modification of the community charge that element which has been added to the charge for local government services to meet the losses on non-payment of the charge to be returned to community charge payers taking into account the actual non-payment before the end of the financial year, and after all legal steps have been taken to obtain payment.

Mr. Chope: No. Local authorities have always had to make an allowance for losses on collection and in this respect the community charge is no different from the old domestic rating system. The single change introduced is the design of the community charge demand notice which identifies this element so that local charge payers can consider whether their authority is being efficient in collecting the community charge.

Mr. Hardy: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what is the actual level of outstanding debt faced by Rotherham local authority; and what was the level recognised by his Department for the purposes of the standard spending assessment for 1990-91.

Mr. Chope [holding answer 14 May 1990]: The actual level of outstanding debt, as at 31 March 1990, is not yet known. The assumed level of outstanding debt as defined for the standard spending assessment is £66,657,656; this figure relates to 31 March 1990 and includes a share of the assumed outstanding debt for the South Yorkshire passenger transport authority.

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment whether, where the cost of community charge collection exceeds the amount outstanding from an individual, and the local authority should write off the charge, the local authority will be deemed responsible to have collected this amount, and be charged for it by central Government, when assessing the community charge payable for the following financial year.

Mr. Chope: The amount of grant payable to each charging authority is calculated on the basis of the number of people shown on the register as being liable to pay the charge. It does not vary according to the number of charges actually collected.

Gipsies

Mr. David Nicholson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment in how many appeals on applications on behalf of gipsies for residential development his Department's inspectors have reversed decisions taken by (a) Taunton Deane borough council and (b) the other four district councils in Somerset, since 1 January 1986.

Mr. Chope: The Department's records show that:

(a) two appeals have been allowed against decisions of the Taunton Deane borough council to refuse applications made by or on behalf of gipsies for planning permission for residential development;

(b) one further similar appeal has been allowed in the area covered by the other four district councils in Somerset.

Mr. David Nicholson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when he proposes to announce his decision on the inquiry which ended in March 1989, into Somerset county council's proposal for a transit gipsy site; and if he will make a statement on the provision and distribution of gipsy caravan sites in each of the five districts of Somerset.

Mr. Chope: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State hopes to issue his decision in this case as soon as possible.

Gipsy site provision is the statutory responsibility of the county council, but authorised sites can also be provided privately by gipsies themselves. Somerset county council has six sites (all residential) as listed in the table:

	Pitches
Mendip DC—Berk ley, near Frome	8
Sedgemoor DC—Westonzoyland	8
South Somerset DC—Chubbards Cross, Ilton	15
South Somerset DC—Marsh Lane, Tintinhull	11
Taunton Deane BC—Otterford	12
West Somerset DC—Farringdon Hill Lane, Stogursey	10
Total pitches	64

The Department does not collect information on private gipsy sites on the form requested but according to the latest available figures produced by the district councils there are 26 gipsy caravans accommodated on private authorised sites in Taunton and two in Mendip.

Crown Suppliers

Mr. Leigh: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make a statement about the trading results of the Crown Suppliers.

Mr. Chope: The Comptroller and Auditor General has today laid before the House the annual accounts for the Crown Suppliers for 1989. TCS recorded a deficit on its ordinary activities of £2·5 million on a turnover of £165 million. I have placed in the Library a copy of the chief executive's report. He says that a surplus would have been made, as in previous years, but for the reduction in turnover of £57 million which resulted from the transfer to other Government Departments of activities which are not to be privatised, with insufficient time available in the period to make commensurate reductions in overheads. Sales for the first quarter of 1990 were above budget, and the business has been restructured to prepare it for privatisation.

SOCIAL SECURITY

Family Credit

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many families in Wales are in receipt of family credit.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: At the end of December 1989, the latest date for which comprehensive information is available, the number of families receiving family credit who at the time of their award were living in Wales was 20,500.

Industrial Injuries

Mr. Spearing: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what plans he has for any adjustments to the reduced earnings allowance consequential on industrial injury.

Mr. Scott: Our plans for reduced earnings allowance are set out in paragraphs 6.12 to 6.14 of Cm 917, "The Way Ahead", copies of which are available in the Library.

Invalid Care Allowance

Mr. Alfred Morris: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is his estimate of the cost of allowing people who have been in receipt of invalid care allowance the option of satisfying the first contribution condition for unemployment benefit on the basis of paid contributions in either of the two years before first claiming invalid care allowance; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: In relation to a claim for a short-term national insurance benefit, including unemployment benefit, the contribution conditions have to be satisfied during the last two complete tax years before the benefit year in which the relevant period of interruption of employment (PIE) starts. The estimated net benefit costs of treating the first day for which invalid care allowance was paid as the first day in the PIE for short-term benefit claims made immediately after payment of invalid care allowance ceases would be in the order of £1 million a year.

Social Fund

Mr. Madden: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if, pursuant to the reply of 7 December 1989, Official Report, column 343, he will publish the proportion of social fund expenditure, on a month by month basis, which local offices are recommended to spend, for each month in the financial year 1990-91.

Mr. Scott: The national profile of anticipated expenditure for 1990-91 is set out in the table. It was devised from an analysis of previous levels of national expenditure, as a guide to assist managers of local offices in planning expenditure of their annual budgets. It is not intended to represent a recommended pattern of monthly expenditure, and managers are free to produce their own profiles to take account of local factors in the area.

National social fund anticipated expenditure profile 1990-91

Month	Per cent. of annual gross budget profiled
April	7·98
May	8·90
June	7·83
July	8·03
August	7·93
September	6·81
October	8·82
November	9·50
December	7·65
January	7·28
February	8·78
March	10·49

Housing Benefit

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will publish a table itemising expenditure savings in housing benefit and the numbers of losers between 1982-83 and 1990-91.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard [holding answer 3 May 1990]: The housing benefit scheme has been subject to a number of changes since it was introduced in 1982-83, including a fundamental reform in April 1988 and the replacement of rate rebates by a separate community charge benefit in April of this year. Because there are no standard rules for uprating the benefit, calculations of the financial effect of these changes are at best hypothetical; with time, it also becomes increasingly unrealistic to try to separate the effect of changes themselves from those of other factors such as movements in housing costs, changes in unemployment, and movements in income levels.

PRIME MINISTER

South Africa

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Prime Minister what trade sanctions are currently operating between the United Kingdom and South Africa.

The Prime Minister: A list of internationally agreed trade measures which are currently operating between the United Kingdom and South Africa is as follows:

UN Measures

(i) The British Government comply fully with the mandatory UN arms embargo (United Kingdom Security Council resolution 418 of 1977) which forbids the provision to South Africa of arms, related material, equipment and technical knowledge needed for their manufacture. The United Kingdom also implements the voluntary United Kingdom Security Council resolution 519 of 1986 which clarifies, but does not extend, the embargo.

(ii) The United Kingdom also implements the voluntary United Kingdom Security Council resolution 558 of 1984 which covers the import from South Africa of arms, ammunition and military vehicles.

EC Measures (September 1985)

(i) A rigorously controlled embargo on export of arms and paramilitary equipment to South Africa.

(ii) A rigorously controlled embargo of import of arms and paramilitary equipment from South Africa.

(iii) Cessation of oil exports to South Africa.

(iv) Cessation of exports of sensitive equipment destined for the police and armed forces of South Africa.

(v) Prohibition of all new collaboration in the nuclear sector.

Commonwealth Measures (October 1985)

(i) Strict enforcement of the mandatory arms embargo against South Africa.

(ii) Agreed upon and commended to other Governments the adoption of the following economic measures against South Africa:

(A) A ban on all Government loans to the Government of South Africa and their agencies.

(B) A readiness to take unilaterally what action may be possible to preclude imports of krugerrands.

(C) No Government funding for trade missions to South Africa or for participation in exhibitions and trade fairs in South Africa.

(D) A ban on the sale and export of computer equipment capable of use by South African military forces, police or security forces.

(E) A ban on new contracts for the sale and export of nuclear goods, materials and technology to South Africa.

(F) A ban on the sale and export of oil to South Africa.

(G) A strict and rigorously controlled embargo on imports of arms, ammunition, military vehicles and paramilitary equipment from South Africa.

Commonwealth Measures (August 1986)

Agreement to implement any EC decision to ban the import of coal, iron and steel and of gold coins from South Africa.

EC Measures (September 1986)

(i) A ban on imports of certain South African iron and steel.

(ii) A ban on the import of certain South African gold coins.

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Prime Minister if she will make representations to President De Klerk calling for the reprieve of the Upington 14 and the abolition of the common purpose law: and if she will make a statement.

The Prime Minister: The verdict on the Upington 14 is subject to an appeal and there is, in any case, a moratorium on all executions in South Africa while the application of the death penalty is reviewed. The doctrine of common purpose in South Africa is a matter of common law, not statute legislation.

Local Authority Rent Arrears

Mr. Andrew Mitchell: To ask the Prime Minister if she will list (a) the 10 local authorities with the lowest rent arrears, (b) the 10 local authorities with the highest rent arrears and (c) the political party in control in the relevant authorities for the latest period for which she has figures.

The Prime Minister: The 10 local authorities with the lowest rent arrears as at the end of 1988-89, expressed as a percentage of the rent roll, and the then controlling political party were as follows:

	Per cent.	£ thousand	Political party
South Hams	0·5	21·0	Conservative
Wansdyke	0·6	26·0	Conservative
West Oxfordshire	0·8	36·0	Conservative
Rochford	0·8	[1]21·0	Conservative
South Northamptonshire	0·8	26·0	Conservative
East Cambridgeshire	0·8	36·0	[2]NOC
Rother	0·9	29·0	Conservative
Gedling	0·9	42·0	Conservative
Babergh	0·9	40·0	[2]NOC
Newbury	0·9	70·0	Conservative

[1] 1988-89 arrears not reported, 1987-88 figure shown.

[2] NOC = No overall control.

The 10 local authorities with the highest rent arrears, as at the end of 1988-89, expressed as a percentage of the rent roll and the then controlling political party were as follows:

	Per cent.	£ thousand	Political party
Brent	49·0	[1]13,713·0	Labour
Lambeth	35·7	17,492·0	Labour
Southwark	35·5	[1]26,820·0	Labour
Hackney	30·3	12,357·0	Labour
Islington	28·9	13,081·0	Labour
Ealing	26·2	5,651·0	Labour
Liverpool	26·2	15,292·0	Labour
Haringey	25·6	7,200·0	Labour
Waltham Forest	20·6	4,365·0	Labour
Newham	16·0	5,373·0	Labour

ATTORNEY-GENERAL

Judges

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Attorney-General (1) how many formal complaints about the behaviour of judges have been received in each of the last 10 years;

(2) how many complaints have been lodged against judges in the last five years; and how many were upheld.

The Attorney-General: Communications about judicial decisions and behaviour take many different forms and it would not be possible to give a precise figure relating to complaints except at disproportionate expense. The large majority of complaints concern decisions made by judges, or remarks made in the course of their official duties. In such cases, it is constitutionally improper for the Lord Chancellor to comment, or to seek to intervene. Of the remainder, which relate to the conduct of judges, two such complaints in the past five years have led to the Lord Chancellor publicly reprimanding the judge.

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Attorney-General what plans his Department has to monitor sentences passed by judges.

The Attorney-General: Neither the Lord Chancellor nor I have any plans to monitor sentences passed by judges. Within the statutory limits laid down by Parliament, sentencing is a matter for judicial discretion. Guidance on sentencing in particular classes of case is given from time to time by the Court of Appeal, criminal division, and notably in cases brought before it in the exercise of my power under section 36 of the Criminal Justice Act 1988. Data on the sentences passed by the courts are maintained by the Home Office.

Race Awareness

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Attorney-General to what extent race awareness is a component of the education and training of (a) judges, (b) barristers and (c) solicitors.

The Attorney-General: The Judicial Studies Board is responsible for training judges, recorders, registrars and stipendiary magistrates and for supervising the training of the lay magistracy. Since racial awareness is considered to be an important element in ensuring that all members of the judiciary act impartially, the Judicial Studies Board has commissioned an information pack on ethnic minorities. The revised syllabus set out in "Handbook For the Training of Magistrates", published by the board earlier this year and approved by the Lord Chancellor, requires newly appointed magistrates to be given instruction in "awareness of the different ethnic, cultural and religious backgrounds of those with whom they may have to deal as defendants or witnesses".

Moreover, those who attend the board's courses are reminded to be alert for any example of racial discrimination in anyone who appears in court.

The education and training of barristers and solicitors is a matter for the professional bodies concerned. Race awareness is a component of the education and training of both barristers and solicitors. It is not covered as a separate topic but features in certain compulsory subject study areas.

NATIONAL FINANCE

Overseas Loans

Mr. Allen: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list the loans made by Her Majesty's Government and British financial institutions to (a) Poland and (b) Hungary which still need to be repaid, the terms of each of those loans and the date at which they will be cleared.

Mr. Ryder: The Government contributed $35 million to a bridging loan for Poland at the end of 1989 as part of an operation organised by the Bank of International Settlements. This loan has now been repaid. The United Kingdom Government's aid to Poland and Hungary has primarily taken the form of grants. A list of loans to specific countries by British financial institutions is not kept by the Bank of England or the Government. United Kingdom banks' claims on Poland and Hungary at the end of 1989 were $1,180 million and $518 million respectively. Repayments of 67·3 per cent. of Poland's debt to United Kingdom banks is due in five years and over, and 18·5 per cent. within the next year. Repayments of 11·6 per cent. of Hungary's debt to United Kingdom banks is due in five years and over, and 42·7 per cent. within the next year.

Mr. Allen: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what lending by (a) Her Majesty's Government and (b) British financial institutions to the Third world is taking place currently; and what screening takes place to ensure that such lending is not used for questionable military purchase or white elephant public sector projects.

Mr. Ryder: In 1988—the latest date for which information is available—£134 million of United Kingdom bilateral aid was provided in the form of loans. No part of the official aid programme is used for military purposes. Detailed systems for project identification and appraisal ensure that all proposals for aid funding are very carefully scrutinised to ensure that they conform to the Government's objective of promoting sustainable economic and social progress and alleviating poverty. ECGD guaranteed loans of £1·4 billion in support of United Kingdom exports—both civil and military—in 1988.

A list of loans to the Third world by British financial institutions is not kept by the Bank of England or the Government. United Kingdom banks' claims on developing countries at the end of 1989 were $53 billion. Lending by the British banks is for their own commercial judgment.

East European Debt

Mr. Allen: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what debts are owed to the United Kingdom by each east European country; and when each will be paid off.

Mr. Ryder: Debts owed to the United Kingdom by the east European countries fall into two categories: debt owed to the Government and debt owed to banks registered in the United Kingdom. It has not been the past practice of the Government to reveal specific debt owed by individual countries. Eastern Europe as a whole owes £1·7 billion to the United Kingdom Government. Eastern Europe's debt to United Kingdom banks is as follows:

$ million

	Total contractual debt	By maturity Less than one year	One to five years	More than five years
Bulgaria	530	300	210	20
Czechoslovakia	320	200	100	10
German Democratic Republic	1,195	795	345	55
Hungary	520	220	210	60
Poland	1,180	220	170	795
Romania	Not available

European Monetary System

Mr. Leighton: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what has been the rate of gross domestic product growth since 1983 in (a) European monetary system countries and (b) the United Kingdom.

Mr. Ryder: Since 1983 United Kingdom gross domestic product at constant prices has grown at an average annual rate of 3·4 per cent. compared with an average of 2·8 per cent. for present members of the exchange rate mechanism of the European monetary system.

Mr. Leighton: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what was the percentage level of unemployment in France at the inception of the European monetary system; and what is it now.

Mr. Ryder: On OECD standardised definitions French unemployment was 5·7 per cent. in March 1979 and 9·4 per cent. in March 1990.

Public Debt Interest

Mr. Allen: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what was the interest paid on public debt in each of the last 10 financial years.

Mr. Ryder: Figures for gross debt interest payments of the public sector are given in the table for each of the last 10 financial years (1989-90 is an estimated outturn).

Public sector gross debt interest payments

	Cash £ billion	Percentage of money GDP
1980-81	12·0	5·1
1981-82	14·1	5·4
1982·83	14·7	5·2
1983-84	15·2	4·9
1984-85	16·8	5·1
1985-86	18·4	5·1
1986-87	18·2	4·7
1987-88	18·3	4·3
1988-89	18·6	3·9
1989-90	19·0	3·75

TESSAs

Mr. Butterfill: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer when savers will first be able to open TESSA accounts.

Mr. Lilley: The legislation will provide that a TESSA may be opened from 1 January 1991. The earliest practical date for most people will be 2 January in England and Wales and Northern Ireland or 3 January in Scotland.

Schedule D Tax

Mr. Tim Smith: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what information he has about how many schedule D Tax assessments are incorrect.

Mr. Lilley [holding answer 17 May 1990]: The Inland Revenue conducts regular quality control checks. The most recent results show that 10 per cent. of schedule D assessments are incorrect when first issued.

DEFENCE

Radioactive Waste

Mr. Ieuan Wyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is the total volume of aggregate radioactive waste produced by his Department or arising from activities conducted on behalf of his Department by British Nuclear Fuels and the United Kingdom Atomic Energy Authority since the military nuclear programme began; and what provisions have been made for the disposal of these wastes.

Mr. Neubert: It would not be in the national interest to disclose figures in the form in which the hon. Member seeks them. I can, however, assure the hon. Member that:

(a) wastes were disposed of in the past under conditions no less stringent than those then prevailing for civil wastes;

(b) Ministry of Defence disposals to the Drigg site in Cumbria are now published by British Nuclear Fuels plc;

(c) United Kingdom Nirex Ltd. has stated (in the United Kingdom radioactive waste inventory) that wastes arising from military operations will add no more the 20 per cent. to its published total of civil arising to the year 2030; and

(d) military wastes which cannot be sent for disposal under current regulation will, in common with civil wastes, be consigned to the national radioactive waste centre once it commences operation.

Radiation Exposure

Mr. Andrew F. Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is the distribution of total radiation exposure for Clyde submarine base workers in the ranges (a) 0 to 5 mSv, (b) 5 to 10 mSv, (c) 10 to 15 mSv, (d) 15 to 20 mSv, (e) 20 to 25 mSv, (f) 25 to 30 mSv, (g) 30 to 35 mSv, (h) 35 to 40 mSv, (i) 40 to 45 mSv, (j) 45 to 50 mSv, (k) greater than 50 mSv, (l) greater than 100 mSv, (m) greater than 200 mSv, (n) greater than 300 mSv, (o) greater than 400 mSv, (p) greater than 500 mSv, (q) greater than 600 mSv, (r) greater than 700 mSv, and (s) greater than 750 mSv, in numbers and in terms of percentage of the overall work force.

Mr. Neubert: A breakdown of cumulative radiation exposures for workers currently registered in DRP's record-keeping system as employed at Clyde submarine base is as follows:

Cumulative radiation exposures—Clyde submarine base

Mr. Andrew F. Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is the distribution of total radiation exposure for Aldermaston workers in the ranges (a) 0 to 5 mSv, (b) 5 to 10 mSv, (c) 10 to 15 mSv, (d) 15 to 20 mSv, (e) 20 to 25 mSv, (f) 25 to 30 mSv, (g) 30 to 35 mSv, (h) 35 to 40 mSv, (i) 40 to 45 mSv, (j) 45 to 50 mSv, (k) greater than 50 msv, (l) greater than 100 mSv, (m) greater than 200 mSv, (n) greater than 300 mSv, (o) greater than 400 mSv, (p) greater than 500 mSv, (q) greater than 600 mSv, (r) greater than 700 mSv, and (s) greater than 750 mSv in numbers and in terms of percentage of the overall work force.

Mr. Neubert: Data on the lifetime aggregate whole-body external radiation exposure of workers employed by AWE since it commenced operations are presented in the table. The data are for all AWE sites, including Aldermaston, and represent the situation as at the end of 1989. In the interests of national security, it is inappropriate to provide the figures in terms of percentage of the overall work force or to provide the number of workers in the 0-10 millisievert category. I can confirm, however, that the majority of workers are in this category. A more detailed breakdown could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Millisieverts	Number of Staff
10-15	1,095
15-20	753
20-30	740
30-50	576
Greater than 50	528
Greater than 100	[1]166
Greater than 200	[1]49
Greater than 500	[1]1
Greater than 750	[1]1

[1]One case resulted from a single high result of 1600 mSv in 1979 from a film dosimeter which, after investigation, was shown to have been exposed while not being worn. Without this false exposure, the individual would have appeared only in the greater than 50 category.

Mr. Andrew F. Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is the distribution of total radiation exposure for Devonport dockyard workers in the ranges: (a) 0 to 5mSv, (b) 5 to 10mSv, (c) 10 to 15mSv, (d) 15 to 20mSv, (e) 20 to 25mSv, (f) 25 to 30mSv, (g) 30 to 35mSv, (h) 35 to 40mSv, (i) 40 to 45mSv, (j) 45 to 50mSv, (k) greater than 50mSv, (l) greater than 100mSv, (m) greater than 200mSv, (n) greater than 300mSv, (o) greater than 400mSv, (p) greater than 500mSv, (q) greater than 600mSv, (r) greater than 700mSv and (s) greater than 750mSv in numbers and in terms of percentage of the overall work force.

Mr. Neubert: The information requested is a matter for the contractor, Devonport Management Ltd, which assumed responsibility for the health and safety of persons employed within the nuclear licensed site at Devonport on 5 April 1987.

Falkland Islands

Dr. Woodcock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will estimate the marginal cost of the British military presence in the Falkland Islands.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The estimated extra cost to the defence budget of the Falkland Islands commitment in 1989-90, as published in the Statement on the Defence Estimates 1990, is £63 million.

Dr. Woodcock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will estimate the cost to the Exchequer in each of the last five years of emergency assistance by British military forces to foreign fishing vessels in waters surrounding the Falkland Island.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: Where British military forces are available in the area of an incident emergency assistance is provided free of charge; therefore no comprehensive records are kept and no estimate of the costs involved can be made.

Detention Centres, Hong Kong

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if there is any intention to use British troops to prevent escapes from Vietnamese detention centres in Hong Kong.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: Camp security is the responsibility of the civil authorities in Hong Kong, and no request for military assistance has been received from the Hong Kong Government.

Regular Forces (Fatal Injuries)

Mr. Onslow: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what proportion of the fatal road traffic accidents that resulted in the death of regular forces personnel in each of the years 1984 to 1989 occurred when the personnel concerned were on duty.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The proportion of fatal road traffic accidents that resulted in the death of regular forces personnel in each of the years 1984 to 1989, which occurred when the personnel concerned were on and off duty are as follows:

Year	On duty per cent.	Off duty per cent.	Not known per cent.
1984	12	88	—
1985	29	71	—
1986	23	76	1
1987	17	83	—
1988	22	78	—
1989	20	80	—

Mr. Onslow: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what proportion of the fatal injuries to regular forces personnel in each of the years 1984 to 1989, other than road traffic accident injuries, occurred when the personnel concerned were on duty.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The proportions of fatal injuries, other than road traffic accidents, to regular forces personnel in each of the years 1984 to 1989, which occurred when the personnel concerned were on and off duty are as follows:

Year	On duty per cent.	Off duty per cent.	Not known per cent.
1984	36	25	38
1985	46	18	36
1986	42	14	43

A90 Project, Aldermaston

Sir Michael McNair-Wilson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether he has received the Property Services Agency report on the management of the A90 project at atomic weapons establishment, Aldermaston.

Mr. Neubert: Yes. The report has been submitted to both the Ministry of Defence and the Department of the Environment. Investigations by both the PSA's central inquiry unit and the MOD police found no evidence of wrongful substitution of materials, fraudulent activity or financial loss to the Government under the A90 mechanical and electrical contract at AWE Aldermaston. The outcome of these investigations was reported to the House of Commons Defence Committee in March 1990 in a memorandum submitted by the PSA.

Sir Michael McNair-Wilson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if progress with the construction and commissioning of the A90 plant at atomic weapons establishment, Aldermaston is within its scheduled programme; and whether any special difficulties are being experienced with the ducting to remove radioactive gases from the plutonium processor.

Mr. Neubert: The overall A90 programme remains within the scheduled time scale to achieve the Trident warhead production programme. The replacement of the zone 1 ductwork in A90 by a pipework system was completed in April 1990 and full leak testing has been carried out successfully. No special difficulties with the replacement pipework system have been encountered. Memorandum No. 5 in the House of Commons Defence Committee's fifth report on the progress of the Trident programme (HC374) gives full details of the reasons for the replacement of the zone 1 ventilation ductwork.

Templeton Airfield, Pembrokeshire

Mr. Nicholas Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is the purpose of the installation recently constructed on the site of the wartime Templeton airfield, Pembrokeshire; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The newly constructed building at Templeton airfield is intended to house an automatic telephone exchange which will form part of a country-wide system to provide modern communications for the Royal Air Force. Equipment installation will be undertaken by GEC Plessey Telecommunications Ltd. later this year. When operational, the facility will be unmanned except during periodic maintenance visits.

Manorbier Range, Pembrokeshire

Mr. Nicholas Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether he has any plans to close or reduce the use of the Manorbier range, Pembrokeshire; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: There are no plans either to close or to reduce the use of the Manorbier range.

RAF Brawdy

Mr. Nicholas Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what estimate he has as to the annual expenditure by RAF Brawdy on the purchase of goods and services from local suppliers.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: RAF Brawdy spends some £2·5 million a year locally on a range of goods and services, including some building work. In addition, I understand that the United States authorities have estimated the local expenditure of the United States navy oceanographic research centre at Brawdy was some £700,000 in 1989-90.

Defence Installations, Pembrokeshire

Mr. Nicholas Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list all the installations under his Department's control, situated in the former county of Pembroke together with the number of (a) civilian and (b) service personnel at each location, the annual cost of running each installation, the total wage bill for (a) civilian and (b) service personnel and any estimate he has of the benefits which each installation provides to the local economy.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: My noble Friend the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for the Armed Forces will write to my hon. Friend.

Penally Range, Pembrokeshire

Mr. Nicholas Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether he has any plans to close or reduce the use of the Penally range, Pembrokeshire; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: There are no plans either to close or to reduce the use of the Penally range.

Land Force Districts

Mr. Nicholas Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the review of United Kingdom land force districts.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The structure of United Kingdom land force districts is currently the subject of an internal review by the Commander in Chief United Kingdom Land Forces. It is expected that recommendations will be made to the Ministry of Defence later this year.

Mr. Nicholas Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make it his policy that should the Wales land force district be amalgamated with any English land force district the new land force district will include the name of Wales in the title.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: No proposals have yet been put forward concerning the reorganisation of the Army district structure in the United Kingdom. It would therefore be premature to discuss any retitling that may be recommended.

Castlemartin Range, Pembrokeshire

Mr. Nicholas Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether he has any plans to close or reduce the use of the Castlemartin range, Pembrokeshire; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: There are no plans either to close or to reduce the use of the Castlemartin range.

Mr. Nicholas Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the use by the German armed forces of the Castlemartin range and any proposals to increase or reduce their usage of the range.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The German army has shared the use of the Royal Armoured Corp range at Castlemartin with the British Army under a Government-to-Government arrangement since 1961. This sharing arrangement is considered by both sides to be highly satisfactory. I am not aware of any intention on the part of the German army to alter its level of activity at the range.

WALES

Health Service, Gwynedd

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what is regarded by the Welsh office as the appropriate number of dentists working as general dentistry practices to serve the needs of Gwynedd; and how many such dentists are in post on the latest available date.

Mr. David Hunt: As at 3 September 1989 there were 70 general dental practitioners operating within Gwynedd. This figure includes 67 principals and three assistants.

It is essentially for the Gwynedd family practitioner committee, in consultation with the district health authority, to assess the need for general dental services in Gwynedd, taking into account the demography and epidemiology of the population.

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many general practitioner practices in Gwynedd have expressed an interest in becoming fund-holding practices; and how many doctors are involved in these practices.

Mr. David Hunt: To date, two practices in Gwynedd comprising six general practitioners have expressed an interest in becoming fund-holding practices.

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales, pursuant to his reply of 14 May, Official Report, column 294, what factors account for the rise in Gwynedd health authority's capital allocation from 1982-83 to 1990-91 by a lower proportion than any other district in Wales; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. David Hunt: I will write to the hon. Gentleman and place a copy of my letter in the Library of the House.

Computerisation

Mr. Campbell-Savours: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales whether he will list the value of orders given by the Welsh Office for computer equipment for each month from 1 August 1988 to 1 May 1990.

Mr. David Hunt: The value of orders placed by my Department for computer equipment was as follows:

1988
August	30,514
September	121,723
October	69,525

National Parks

Mr. Ieuan Wyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how much money is currently granted by the Government to each national park authority in Wales to set up an effective wardening scheme; and what plans there are to increase these sums.

Mr. Roberts: The three Welsh national parks have allocated over £600,000 towards wardening in 1990-91 out of an estimated accepted expenditure of £4,573,000 of which the Government will contribute £3,430,000 by way of the national park supplementary grant. The amount allocated to wardening each year is entirely a matter for each individual park.

Farms

Mr. Ieuan Wyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how much money is currently allocated to the farming industry in Wales to counteract the problems caused by visitors' presence.

Mr. David Hunt: No money is paid directly to the farming industry by my Department in relation to visitors' presence on farmland.

However, I understand that the three national parks in Wales are likely to pay grants of the order of £50,000 in 1990-91 to farmers and landowners in this connection. In addition, the Brecon Beacons national park, in conjunction with the Countryside Commission, is establishing an experimental project on the black mountains to test new ways of improving and maintaining rights of way, including payments to farmers.

Chernobyl

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how long the restrictions on the sale and movement of sheep due to the Chernobyl nuclear disaster will continue in Wales.

Mr. David Hunt: It is not possible to predict how long restrictions on the sale and movement of sheep due to the Chernobyl nuclear accident will need to remain in force. Restrictions will be lifted as soon as I am satisfied it is possible to do so without compromising food safety.

Single-parent Families

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many families and what percentage of families in Wales are single-parent families.

Mr. David Hunt: Preliminary results from the 1989 labour force survey estimate that there are 58,000 single-parent families with children under the age of 16 years living in private households in Wales, which represents 16·9 per cent. of all Welsh households with dependent children.

Labour Statistics

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what was the number of people in employment in (a) primary industry and (b) manufacturing in Wales in the first quarter of 1979 and the last quarter of 1989.

Mr. David Hunt: In March 1979 there were 85,000 employees in employment in primary industry (divisions 0 and 1 of standard industrial classification 1980) and 314,000 in manufacturing industry (divisions 2 to 4.)

The figures for December 1989 are 50,000 and 250,000 respectively.

Disabled Children

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many children and what percentage of the children of Wales are disabled.

Mr. David Hunt: Surveys of disability in Great Britain carried out by the Office of Population Censuses and Surveys between 1985 and 1988 suggest that there are about 18,000 disabled children under the age of 16 years in Wales, which represents 3·1 per cent. of the child population of Wales.

Local Government Finance

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what definition of main residence is used by his Department for community charge purposes.

Mr. David Hunt: None. Decisions as to individuals' sole or main residences are matters for community charge registration officers, who will have regard to the provisions of subsections 2(3) to 2(6) of the 1988 Act. Further guidance for CCROs has been issued in community charge practice note No. 9, "Sole or Main Residence". A copy of the practice note is in the Library.

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales (1) if he will introduce into Wales a transitional relief scheme for disabled community charge payers comparable to that applying in England;

(2) if he will bring forward proposals for Wales to have a community charge transitional relief scheme for elderly relatives who were not previously ratepayers.

Mr. David Hunt: The Government are reviewing the operation of the community charge system. It is too early to say what changes might be made.

British Coal

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what plans he has to meet the chairman of British Coal to discuss redundancies in the south Wales coalfield.

Mr. David Hunt: My predecessor met with the chairman of British Coal on 23 April and I hope to do so shortly.

Brymbo Steelworks

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what plans he has to meet the owners of Brymbo steelworks to discuss the future of Brymbo; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. David Hunt: I met with the owners of Brymbo steelworks at Gwydyr house on Wednesday 16 May. United Engineering Steel Ltd. has agreed to have immediate discussions with the Welsh Development Agency about the options open to the company for the future of the steelworks at Brymbo.

Hospital Closures

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales whether a hospital can be deemed to be closed prior to all of the activities at that hospital being terminated.

Mr. David Hunt: Closure of a hospital may involve a staged reduction of services. However, I would not consider a hospital to be fully closed until all patient services there had ceased.

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will publish in the Official Report the exact conditions which he has stipulated prior to the closure of the cottage hospital, Caernarfon.

Mr. David Hunt: The exact conditions to be met before the full closure of the cottage hospital can be completed were set out at paragraph 42 of annex A to the letter of 20 April 1990 from the Welsh Office to the general manager of the health authority, a copy of which was sent to the hon. Gentleman.

War Memorial Institute

Mr. Michael: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will announce his decision in respect of the urban aid grant sought for Llandough and Leckwith War Memorial Institute.

Mr. David Hunt: An application for grant aid has been made in respect of Llandough and Leckwith War Memorial Institute under the capital grants to voluntary youth services, village halls and community centres programme. South Glamorgan local education authority was notified on 11 May that this project was successful in attracting grant.

National Health Service

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many members of his staff are involved in responsibilities relating to the National Health Service in Wales.

Mr. David Hunt: As at 1 April 1990—338·5 (full-time equivalents).

Health Authorities

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how each health authority in Wales responded to the requirement laid down by the Welsh Office in 1987 to transfer 0·5 per cent. per annum towards priority services; how much money was diverted by each authority in 1987-88 and 1988-89 for this purpose; and whether any such requirement is still operational for any specific purpose in any health authority in Wales.

Mr. David Hunt [holding answer 14 May 1990]: In 1983 the Department introduced a requirement for district health authorities to redeploy efficiency savings amounting to a minimum of 0·5 per cent. of recurring revenue expenditure to the continuing care services, specifically for people with a mental handicap, for people suffering from mental illness, and elderly people. From 1988-89 no minimum level of redeployment has been stipulated by the Department.

Expenditure on these services in 1987-88 and 1988-89, taken from health authority financial returns, is given by health authority in the table. In respect of services for the elderly, expenditure is shown for the geriatrics specialty only although elderly patients are also treated in other specialties such as general medicine, general surgery and orthopaedics. Care in the community is not separately identified, costs being generally subsumed within patient treatment services such as district nursing, health visiting, chiropody, and so on.

Directly comparable figures for earlier years are not available.

Hospitals

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list all the district general hospitals in Wales, indicating for each (a) the year of opening, (b) the number of staff employed on the most recent available date, (c) the original capital cost of constructing and equipping each hospital and the equivalent of each of those figures adjusted for inflation and (d) the gross revenue cost of running each hospital in 1989-90.

Mr. David Hunt [holding answer 17 May 1990]: Information on the capital cost of constructing and equipping all district general hospitals in Wales or the gross revenue cost of running each hospital in 1989-90 is not available. The information on the number of staff employed and the year of opening is given in the table:

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

International Investments Ltd.

Mr. Beggs: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry whether he will urgently seek co-operation from the Government of the Irish Republic to jointly fund legal actions against those persons suspected of fraudently acquiring investors' monies from International Investments Ltd.

Mr. Redwood: No. As the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry understands the position, International Investments Ltd. is a company which was incorporated in Gibraltar and is now in liquidation. The Secretary of State is not aware of any activities of the company which would bring it within the jurisdiction of the statutes for which he is responsible.

Eastern Europe

Mr. Simon Coombs: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many of his Department's staff are actively engaged in promoting trade with the countries of eastern European (a) based in the United Kingdom and (b) based in those countries; and what are the comparable figures for 1979.

Mr. Redwood: The answers to the first two parts of the question are 28 and none. The answer to the third part is more complicated but as far as I can tell the equivalent figure in 1979 was 24. Staff have recently been increased by the appointment of a G5 officer and secretary and an HEO and EO to reflect the opportunites and larger workload in eastern Europe. Similarly the Foreign and Commonwealth Office is strengthening its staff numbers in this area. In addition, both now and in 1979, staff in other parts of my Department, including regional offices, spend part of their time in helping to promote trade with these countries.

Auditors

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry whether he will introduce legislation providing that auditors owe a duty of care to each shareholder.

Mr. Redwood: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave to his question on 26 February at column 15.

Manufacturing

Mr. Oppenheim: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what has been the real terms increase in productivity and manufacturing output in the periods 1960 to 1969, 1970 to 1979 and 1980 to 1989 for (a) Britain, (b) France, (c) Italy, (d) West Germany, (e) the Netherlands, (f) Sweden, (g) the United States of America and (h) Japan; and what was the average inflation rate for those countries in those decades.

Mr. Douglas Hogg [holding answer 14 May 1990]: The available information is in the tables:

Iraq

Mr. Rogers: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry, further to the reply of the Minister for Defence Procurement of 2 May, Official Report, column 603, what were the trade deals of protocols 1 and 2 with Iraq that required the credit facilities of £275 million and £300 million, respectively.

Mr. Redwood [holding answer 17 May 1990]: The credit facilities established under protocols 1 and 2 financed in excess of 500 contracts ranging from United Kingdom participation in major Iraqi projects to relatively small contracts for the supply of goods, equipment and pharmaceutical products.

Insurance Companies

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what action his Department is taking under section 44 of the Insurance Companies Act 1982 in respect of Debt Indemnity Service (UK) Division; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Redwood [holding answer 17 May 1990]: It is not the practice to comment on the affairs of individual persons and I am unable to add to my Department's press notice of 30 April 1990 which made it clear that Debt Indemnity Service (UK) Division is not authorised to carry on any class of insurance business in the United Kingdom and that any business or person who has taken out a "policy" with this organisation should urgently take legal advice.

SCOTLAND

Local Government Finance

Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what is the latest estimate for the cost of the collection of the community charge in each region of Scotland for 1989-90; what is the estimate for collection of business rates for 1989-90 for each region; and what is the equivalent cost of collection of all rates for each region in 1988-89.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton [holding answer 17 May 1990]: It is not possible to produce satisfactory figures on this basis for these years because the local authority estimates leave out costs attributable to central administration and include income in respect of statutory additions for late payments. The table, which includes negative and low amounts for certain authorities, shows the results of processing the available figures in the manner requested:

Regional council	1989-90 Cost of collection of the community charge £000	Cost of collection of non-domestic rates £000	1988-89 Cost of collection of all rates £000

EMPLOYMENT

Technical and Vocational Education

Mr. Pawsey: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what is the planned level of funding for the technical and vocational education initiative for 1991-92 and 1992-93.

Mr. Eggar: As laid out in the public expenditure White Paper the planned level of funding for the technical and vocational education initiative for 1991-92 and 1992-93 is £133 million and £141 million respectively.

Mr. Maclennan: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what funds he is making available for the extension of the technical and vocational education initiative in Scotland; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Eggar: [holding answer 15 May 1990]: As laid out in the public expenditure White Paper, the Department plans to make available £134 million in 1990-91, £133 million in 1991-92 and £141 million in 1992-93 for the extension of the technical and vocational education initiative in England, Scotland and Wales.

Female Employment

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will initiate a series of local research projects into the barriers faced by older women wishing to return to work.

Mr. Nicholls: My Department has recently funded a number of studies which cast light on the problems of older people and women who wish to return to work but we have no plans for new research into the specific subject of the barriers faced by older women.

Training and Enterprise Councils

Mr. Ashley: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what steps he is taking to ensure that TECs have sufficient flexibility to meet the training needs of disabled people.

Mr. Eggar: The national framework we have established within which training and enterprise councils (TECs) will operate ensures that TECs have the flexibility to adapt national programmes to meet individual needs, including the needs of people with disabilities. TECs will also have access to specialist residential training providers offering places for people with disabilities who need particular facilities and support, where appropriate local provision is not available.

Mr. Hannam: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment (1) whether he will issue guidance to training and enterprise councils on meeting the training of people with disabilities; and if he will make a statement;

(2) what plans he has to ensure that examples of good practice of training and enterprise council's provision for disabled people are disseminated to all training and enterprise councils;

(3) how he plans to ensure that training and enterprise councils are fully aware of the training and employment needs and abilities of people with disabilities.

Mr. Eggar: TECs must set out in their business plan how they intend to meet the training needs of people with disabilities. These plans will be subject to my approval.

Existing guidance issued by my Department on assessment, training and employment of people with disabilities is available to TECs, in the following publications:

"Building on Ability"—a guide for training people with disabilities (Training Agency publication December 1989).

Code of good practice on the employment of disabled people (employment service revised October 1988).

The Training Agency has begun to issue a series of good practice guidance written specifically for TECs which among other issues will cover special training needs, including people with disabilities. The agency will continue to review the need for further guidance in this area.

Mr. Hannam: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what steps he is taking to ensure that all training and enterprise councils' boards have a member with explicit responsibility for the needs of people with disabilities; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Eggar: It is for each training and enterprise council (TEC) to determine the membership of its board within the broad parameters set by my Department. The position on membership of TEC boards is set out in the TEC prospectus.

Mr. Hannam: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what plans he has to develop alternative performance indicators in training and enterprise councils for disabled people and those with learning difficulties.

Mr. Eggar: There will be a system of performance-related funding for TECs which achieve specified levels of performance against particular output measures. One of these measures will relate to people with disabilities. All the performance measures used will be regularly evaluated to look for ways in which their effectiveness and reliability can be improved.

Mr. Hannam: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what steps he is taking to ensure that training and enterprise councils do not suffer budget penalties for meeting the higher unit costs of training disabled people; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Eggar: Training and enterprise councils (TECs) will operate under a performance-related contract with my Department. This is designed to give an incentive for good performance by TECs in achieving objectives. This will include meeting the training needs of people with disabilities.

Disabled People

Mr. Alfred Morris: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what proposals he has to provide people with disabilities who need personal assistance in employment with equivalent help to that they have been receiving during their course of higher education; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Eggar: My Department provides a range of special schemes designed to overcome barriers to employment encountered by people with disabilities. Included is a personal reader service for the visually handicapped.

These special schemes are currently being evaluated and proposals for their future development will be published soon.

Deaf People (Employment)

Sir Alan Glyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what assessment he has made of whether a person is suffering from severe deafness should be permitted to work near dangerous machinery or water.

Mr. Nicholls: The fitness for work of people with disabilities such as severe deafness can be assessed only on an individual basis, taking into account all the circumstances of the proposed employment. This assessment is the responsibility of the employer, seeking appropriate advice as necessary. It is possible to devise systems of work that would enable deaf people to work safely near machinery or water.

Mr. Kenneth Harris

Sir Alan Glyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will make a statement on the accident involving the death of Mr. Kenneth Harris which occurred at Teddington weir on 8 January.

Mr. Nicholls: Inspectors from the Health and Safety Executive are carrying out an investigation into the death of Mr. Kenneth Harris on 8 January. The investigation commenced on 9 January and is continuing.

Action Credit

Ms. Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will make a statement on the progress of research into the viability of extending action credit to five employment service areas; and if he is considering alterations to the current pilot scheme.

Mr. Eggar: A draft report on the reactions of long-term unemployed people to the action credit concept is due in June 1990.

I have no plan to alter the current pilot scheme.

Ms. Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment whether refusal of a place on action credit could constitute a failure to avail oneself of an employment opportunity.

Mr. Eggar: Participation in employment with action credit, which is for less than 24 hours a week, is entirely voluntary. Refusal of a place, therefore, could not be regarded as neglecting to avail oneself of a reasonable opportunity of employment.

Employment Training

Mr. McAvoy: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what plans he has to encourage voluntary organisations to participate in employment training.

Mr. Nicholls: Voluntary organisations already play a significant and welcome part in ET. The new flexibilities available to ET provide further encouragement to voluntary organisations and other providers to participate in training.

Restart

Ms. Short: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what provision is being made to include suitable courses of study under the 21-hour rule on the restart menu; and what guidance has been given to restart counsellors to interpret the meaning of "suitable" when judging a course to be a positive outcome from a restart interview.

Mr. Eggar [holding answer 17 May 1990]: The employment service, which is responsible for the restart programme, became an executive agency on 2 April 1990. The employment service chief executive, Mr. Mike Fogden, will be replying in writing to the hon. Lady.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Rural Funds

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what steps he proposes to make the application of rural funds under EC objective 5(b) available over wider areas of the United Kingdom.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: I have been asked to reply.

Areas eligible for grants under objective 5(b) of the European Community's structural funds are determined by the European Commission under the terms of article 4 of Council regulation (EEC) No. 4253/88. I understand that the Commission has no present intention of designating further areas. The money available for objective 5(b) grants up to the end of 1993 has already largely been allocated to the areas already designated.

Agricultural and Food Research Council

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what assessment has been made of the effects of (a) the amounts of time spent by scientists writing grant proposals and (b) training the staff for short-term contracts, on the overall scientific effectiveness of core staff at Agricultural and Food Research Council institutes.

Mr. Jackson [holding answer 16 May 1990]: I have been asked to reply.

I understand that no such assessments have been made. The writing of grant proposals is part of the work of research scientists whether in Agricultural and Food Research Council or elsewhere. Permanent scientific staff at Agricultural and Food Research Council institutes have an on-the-job training role for new staff whether on permanent or period appointment.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Stamp Office for Deeds

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what consultation there was within Northern Ireland other than with relevant staff and the legal profession before the decision to close the Belfast stamp office for the registration of title deeds.

Mr. Major: I have been asked to reply.

None. Any prior consultation would have been incompatible with Budget confidentiality for my decision to abolish stamp duty on shares.

INDEX TO THE

PARLIAMENTARY DEBATES

OFFICIAL REPORT

SIXTH SERIES VOLUME 172

SESSION 1989–90

8th May—18th May 1990

SCOPE OF THE INDEX, ARRANGEMENT AND ABBREVIATIONS

This index is derived from the House of Commons Library's Parliamentary On-Line Information System (POLIS), and the subject terms used are based on those used in POLIS. There are often changes in column numbering, etc, between the daily part or weekly Hansard (which simply collects together the daily parts without revision) and the bound volume. The index for the bound volume is revised to take account of these changes and cannot therefore, be used in connection with the daily part or weekly Hansard. For these versions use the Fortnightly Index.

Scope and arrangement of the Index

Oral and Written Parliamentary Questions are indexed under subject headings and the names of Members asking and Ministers replying to them. Questions are not listed under the names of Departments replying. Departmental listings can be arrived at indirectly by looking under the names of the Minister(s) of that Department. There are, however, the headings 'Northern Ireland', 'Scotland', and 'Wales' under which one can find not only most Questions answered by the Northern Ireland Office, Scottish Office, Welsh Office but also Questions about these areas of the United Kingdom which are answered by other Departments. Ministerial statements are indexed under subject headings, under 'Ministerial statements' and the names of Ministers making them and Members speaking on them. General debates are indexed under broad subject headings and under the names of all Members and Ministers taking part. Debates on legislation (Bills, Orders, Regulations etc.) are indexed under the name of the Bill, Statutory Instrument etc, under subject headings and under the names of those taking part.

Rulings and Statements by Mr. Speaker and his deputies are brought together under the heading Speaker's rulings and statements.

Other contributions by Mr. Speaker and his deputies appear under the heading Speaker.

Opposition Day Debates, Estimates Day Debates and Standing Order No. 10 applications are listed under those respective headings and under subject headings too.

The date of each item except Parliamentary Questions is inserted immediately before the reference.

Members' names are given in the form by which they prefer to be known and are printed in bold italics. Under their names, entries are arranged under one of the two headings Debates etc (to include interventions on statements, points of order and so on) or Questions.

Abbreviations

Bills 1R = first reading, 2R = second reading, Money res = money resolution, Com = Committee stage, Rep = Report stage, 3R = third reading, amendt/amendts = amendment/amendments, * = matter taken formally, without debate.

Column numbers followed by the letter W refer to Written Questions. These appear at the end of each daily part or volume with their own sequence of column numbers printed in italics.
